WOMAN AND THE FOOD PROBLEM.

A well-known American magazine devoted to the home and its varied interests recently sent out a form of ballot to the housekeepers of the nation, the purpose being to obtain an expression of opinion concerning several important matters having to do with the problem of pure food. The topics the ladies were asked to furnish an expression of opinion about were as follows:

1. I want my bread wrapped. Crusts that we urge the children to eat should not be handled by dirty hands.
2. I want to know that the meats I buy are inspected both before and after slaughter, and that the inspection means something; that the products are rejected if they come from diseased animals.
3. I want effective milk inspection, and the provision of certified milk for children and the sick.
4. I want to be assured that there are no chemical preservatives in foods I buy. Sulphite, benzoate of soda, saccharin, and copper sulphate are not wanted any more than borax or salicylic acid.
5. I want the present uncontrolled sale of morphine, cocaine, etc., replaced by rigid control of those poisons.
6. I want all patent medicines, baby syrups, etc., containing morphine, cocaine or other poisons marked with the skull and cross-bones and sold only on the prescription of a reputable physician.
7. I want true and explicit labels on all paper packages and tinned goods, that I may know the age and character of the contents and buy intelligently.
8. I want the quantity or weight to be placed on every package, tin, or bottle, to assist in economic buying.

The Bulletin has been sent nearly five hundred of the ballots, all cast by Pennsylvania housekeepers, and they certainly show that the women of this Commonwealth are taking notice in a more and more effective manner from year to year of the food situation and that they are resolving, both individually and collectively, to make the situation exceeding troublesome to those unscrupulous manufacturers or dealers who have little regard for the health of their confiding patrons. Some of the women who returned the ballots in this instance did not express an opinion concerning all the questions raised by the ballots, but the fact that so many of them were moved to consider the matter demonstrates the gratifying fact that the housekeepers of the State are already the most efficient backers of the pure food laws of the State. And it is right and proper that this should be so.

The Dairy and Food Division from the very beginning has been greatly aided in its work on behalf of law enforcement and the elevation of the standard of food production by the intelligent and unwearied assistance of the housekeepers of the State. They have created a body of enlightened sentiment which has done much to encourage conscientious manufacturers and venders of food products and to convince those who have sought to increase their profits by doubtful or crooked practices that they are traveling the downward path. Nothing is more effective in converting manufacturers to the conviction that adulterants are useless and injurious than the refusal of the housekeepers of the country to purchase adulterated products. The pocket, in some instances, still cries more loudly than the conscience. It is a pity this should be true, but when it is it is very important to apply the proper stimulant.

While the sturdy determination of the individual housekeeper to have things the way she wants them in the matter of food products has accomplished considerable, united effort has done far more. The women's clubs and other associations have furnished a common ground for consultation, formulation of convictions and agreement upon intelligent and forceful plans of action. In addition to the clubs which consider all things pertaining to human welfare germane to their united consideration, every considerable town in the union now has its Consumer's League or its Housekeepers' Association, or some kindred organization which exists not only for the purpose of tackling the "high cost of living" but also that it may demand from manufacturers and dealers honest weight, pure goods and explicit labels. What the united womanhood of the nation has accomplished already cannot easily be reckoned. What it has done is merely the beginning of its great work.

Mere man may not always be willing to admit it publicly, but in the inner recesses of his secret consciousness he realizes that woman is the active and efficient leader in every good and perfect work, and especially in every movement having to do with the welfare of the home and the protection of the health of the inmates of the household. It is not surprising, therefore, that she is always to be found among the pioneers on the great battlefields of the world. This Bulletin has said upon several occasions that the earnest purpose of all the women of Pennsylvania to hold manufacturers and venders to a strict account would do more than any other thing to bring about a general and lasting observance of the requirements of the various food acts of the country. The considerable extent to which individual women and associations of women in Pennsylvania have resisted the persistent effort of some manufacturers to adulterate the food used by our people has already accomplished much and the Dairy and Food Division feels that it has been constantly under heavy obligations to them for the valuable and unselfish assistance they have given its agents.

Congratulating the women of this Commonwealth upon the activity they are already manifesting in this important work of conserving the good health of the community, through the medium of pure food products, and sincerely thanking them for the substantial aid it has given the officers of the food bureau, the Bulletin commends their example to earnest imitation by the men of the State and suggests to food manufacturers that he who gains the confidence and patronage of these resolute householders will exhibit keen business sense and more than ordinary wisdom. It is impossible to paint the lily or to gild refined gold; it is equally beyond our ability to say any thing that will worthily commend to the public attention the splendid work done on behalf of pure food by the women of Pennsylvania. May their numbers constantly increase and their determination to continue in this fine work strengthen as the days go by.

IMPROVING CONDITIONS OF LIVING.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust in a statement concerning the work of the Dairy and Food Bureau, says, "Popular government can be most successful only when the people are fully informed concerning the work of its various branches. Upon some divisions of governmental activity discussion is continuous and information widespread; but concerning others, public knowledge is, at the most, very slight and hazy. It is important that the government be sanely responsive to the will of the people and that its organization be perfected to that end; that public enterprises be economically conducted and financed in the least burdensome manner and that public material resources be wisely husbanded; but it is far more important that the standards of business morality be elevated and the health and life of the individual be conserved. Do the citizens of Pennsylvania realize that through the activities of the public agencies, the average rate of mortality has been greatly reduced and the average condition of public health distinctly improved within a very few years? Do they appreciate how much they owe to the splendid work of State Health Commissioner Dixon in his anti-toxin and quarantine services and to his campaign for pure drinking water? Or how greatly the infant death rate has been reduced by the earnest work of the Philadelphia Municipal Health Bureau, under the guidance of Dr. Neff, and of other municipal health bureaus in improving the sanitary quality of the city milk supplies and in educating the mothers upon the care of their offspring? Do they know how important in its influence upon health, happiness and morality is the work of the Dairy and Food Bureau, and that, within a few years, the use of drugs and poisonous colors in foods, as well as the formerly too common employment of unsanitary food wastes as food ingredients, has been almost entirely driven out of the business of food manufacture and sale? And that giving a square deal to the customer is now the general rule of practice in stead of merely being as fair as the business rival?"

Commissioner Foust gives the following condensed account of the business of his Bureau during the time it has been in his charge:

Year.	Samples analyzed.	Cases terminated.	Receipts.	Expenditures.
1907, -----	7,400	664	$55,702 63	$78,455 88
1908, -----	8,300	300	54,580 62	69,968 20
1909, -----	6,200	797	86,594 15	83,700 00
1910, -----	5,594	667	110,802 95	79,661 65
1911, -----	8,200	1,029	120,993 48	83,083 15
1912, -----	7,204	1,049	136,125 49	81,858 55
	42,898	3,506	$564,829 32	$476,727 43

It is noteworthy, in passing, that at present none of the cost of this important service is defrayed from general taxation, but that, during the six years, the receipts from fines, license fees and other sources have been almost $90,000 in excess of the cost of the service and that during the two years of Governor Tener's administration, the excess of receipts over expenditures has been $88,000.

While the relation of the specific receipts to the expenditures of the service is a matter of business interest, the main question is this: Is this State agency proving efficient in remedying the evils it was created to control?

At first glance, it would appear that there is as large a proportion as ever of cases instituted and terminated to samples examined, and that consequently the service has not been successful in abating the practices of adulteration and of fraud in food manufacture and sale. As a matter of fact, these figures have value as indicating the large activity of the Bureau, but do not alone serve to represent the true condition of the food trade with respect to these evils. A study of the details promptly shows that whereas, a few years ago, great classes of food supplies, such, for example, as the spices, table oils, preserves and jellies, were very generally adulterated and sold under grossly misleading labels, today they rarely exhibit these objectionable features, and, all along the line, a vast improvement appears.

The Commissioner is of the opinion that the supplementing of the general food law by special laws in conformity therewith but dealing more specifically with individual classes of food products, defining and standardizing them, has contributed largely to the efficiency of the service, by increasing the definiteness of the public understanding concerning what is legally required.

The Commissioner urges that there is need, however, for the further improvement of the food laws and for the extension of their scope particularly in reference to the sanitary requirements upon food manufacturer and dealers. He also urges the great need for the control of cold storage foods and commends, as tending to a great improvement in present conditions, the Cold Storage Bill No. 53, House of Representatives, farthered and promoted by Representatives Wilson and Gans. Senate Bills Nos. 5 and 7, dealing with foods in general and with soft drinks, introduced by Senator Gerberich, are also commended by Commissioner Foust as distinct improvements upon the present laws relative to these subjects, and as more completely representative of the public demands concerning them.

PROSECUTIONS ORDERED DURING JANUARY, 1913.

The opening month of the year 1913 showed a very decided improvement in the moral tone of venders of food products in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The prosecutions brought under the various acts regulating the manufacture and sale of foods and soft drinks within the limits of the State numbered 47, a decrease of 85, as compared with December, 1912. Should this decrease continue in the same ratio it will not be many months until the courts of the Commonwealth will not be obliged to take up any time in the determination of charges against individuals for violating the food laws. It were a consummation devoutly to be wished for.

Of the 47 prosecutions brought, 28 were for violations of the general food act. Arrests were made in Allegheny, Beaver, Dauphin, Huntingdon, Philadelphia, Venango and York counties. Of these one was for selling dried peaches containing undeclared sulphur dioxide; three for the sale of dried apricots under similar circumstances; two for the sale of English walnuts 30 per cent. of which were wormy, mouldy and decayed; one for the sale of a mixture containing a great deal of glucose and a very little honey, under the name of honey; one for the sale of tomato catsup containing saccharin; one for the sale of tomato catsup containing more than one-tenth of one per cent. of sodium benzoate; one for the sale of tomato catsup made from decaying materials and containing an excessive amount of sodium benzoate; four for the sale of custard powder, consisting of starch and colored yellow with an unpermitted coal tar color; two for the sale of assorted cakes, colored yellow with an unpermitted coal tar color; one for the sale of egg noodles and one for the sale of egg macaroni colored with an unpermitted coal tar color; five for the sale of codfish containing sodium benzoate; two for the sale of chicken which was represented as fresh, while really unfit for food, and three for the sale of food products which had been kept in such a way and manner as to render them contaminated and unwholesome.

Five arrests were made for violations of the sausage act, all in the county of Philadelphia. One prosecution was ordered for the sale of fresh pork sausage containing added cereal; two for the sale of fresh pork sausage unfit for food purposes; two for the sale of fresh bologna sausage containing added cereal.

One prosecution for the sale of renovated butter was ordered in Allegheny county. It had been sold as fresh butter.

Prosecutions for the illegal sale of oleomargarine were ordered in Allegheny, Blair, Clarion, Philadelphia and Westmoreland counties, five in all. Of these two were for selling oleomargarine without license; one was for selling uncolored as butter and two for selling colored oleomargarine as butter.

Two Dauphin county milk dealers were prosecuted; one for the sale of cream low in fat, the other for the sale of milk low in fats and solids, and watered.

One dealer in Erie county and one in Philadelphia were prosecuted for the sale of eggs which were unfit for food purposes.

Two prosecutions were ordered in Jefferson county under the non-alcoholic drink act. One was for the sale of marrow food containing saccharin; the other for the sale of orange julip containing saccharin.

One Philadelphia dealer is under arrest to answer the charge of selling as lard a mixture made chiefly from cotton seed oil.

One arrest was made in Clarion county for the sale of cider vinegar made from apple juice, distilled vinegar and foreign material.

In former months many violations of the vinegar act were reported. That measure was enacted for the express purpose of encouraging the farmers of Pennsylvania to engage in the manufacture of cider vinegar from the products of their own orchards and it was hoped it would develop quite a trade in home-made vinegar. But it does not seem to have accomplished that purpose. The reason it is not the intention of this Bulletin to look for now.

ENEMIES OF THEIR FELLOWS.

The Bulletin has upon other occasions expressed surprise that any person engaged in the business of baking should be so unprincipled, so callous, as to deliberately use rotten eggs in the cakes they bake for the general market. One would imagine ordinary regard for the customers who place confidence in the baker would induce something like fidelity to implicit trust. One would think a decent respect for the consequences if detected would cause bakers to decline such a risk.

Yet during the third week in January of this year no less than eleven persons were convicted in the courts of Philadelphia of gross offenses against the laws as well as against the health of their customers. Seven of these persons were found guilty of selling rotten eggs for food; the other five had bought the eggs and mixed them with the cakes they sold to their customers. One man, the agent of a well known Chicago packing house, was sentenced to pay a fine of $400 and the costs; and the other eleven paid $200 apiece and the costs.

If this Bulletin were to speak its mind plainly on this subject it would say that the punishment for such nasty offenses ought to be much more drastic. To exact a money penalty for peddling rotten eggs or for using them in cakes is all right; but there should be an imprisonment also and there ought to be some way of obliging the bakers in particular to bear the brand all the rest of their lives. In short, men who will deliberately use the poisonous and nauseous mass of corruption they buy from unprincipled dealers should never again be permitted to bake bread for sale.

Any citizen who has ever seen a can of the liquid corruption sold as eggs by one set of dealers and used as eggs by a certain sort of bakers, will certainly coincide in the suggestion that men capable of putting such stuff in articles of food are absolutely conscienceless and can only be reached through their fears. The penitentiary is almost too good for such enemies of their kind. They are not fit to live among civilized men or to engage in business in a civilized community. They would have been summarily killed in other days or sent into a hopeless exile. Here they are soon forgotten by the people.

A FOOD DECISION.

The following statement was issued by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust: Considerable conflict of opinion appearing among those interested in the matter of food legislation as to the scope of the opinion of Justice Day, of the Supreme Court of the United States, in a decision recently handed down in the cases of McDermott vs. State of Wisconsin and Grady vs. State of Wisconsin, I asked the Chief Counsel of the Dairy and Food Bureau, A. H. Woodward, Esq., for an opinion as to the scope of these decisions and as to their effect if any, upon existing laws and pending legislation. The following is a resume of Mr. Woodward's opinion.

"The decision in the Wisconsin case does not at all affect existing laws or pending legislation of Pennsylvania, as framed. The Supreme Court in the Wisconsin cases decides that a statute of Wisconsin, which requires a certain prescribed label, and no other, to appear upon packages of food imported into and sold in that State is in conflict with the national law because such statute plainly requires the destruction of the label under which the article was imported into the State, and thus destroys one of the means by which the United States Government, through its agencies, determines whether or not, the article in question was, when imported, in conformity with the United States statute. The decision does not overrule, or attempt to over-rule, previous decisions of the same Court recognizing the right of a State, in the exercise of its police powers, to make laws and regulations controlling the sale of food commodities to the people of such State.

PERSISTENT VIOLATORS OF LAW.

The operations of the Dairy and Food Bureau would be as gentle as a summer day if only all men who make and vend food products were lovers of justice, servants of law, admirers of rectitude, thoughtful to their fellows, and sincerely desirous to make their brand on an article of food the sure sign and emblem of honesty and truthfulness in manufacture. It might be possible to cease asking the courts to punish offenders; indeed this seems highly probable, since their would be no offenders to punish. It would be a great epoch in the history of the Commonwealth, but the receipts of the State Treasury from the Dairy and Food office would be considerably reduced.

Yet we suspect the people would observe this phase of the situation with a considerable measure of calm. For it would be something worth while for them to be finally convinced that the inspection of labels or the private analysis of packages of goods would be necessary no longer; that they could shut their eyes and eat what was set before them; that they could send their smallest children to the grocery or the drug store with the most complete assurance that all druggists were as honest as all grocers and that there could be no cheating, since the ability to cheat had vanished with the desire.

Judging by melancholy experience, however, it is going to remain true for some years to come in the protection of the consumer of food products from the rascality of some manufacturers and likewise of some dealers that "eternal vigilance is the price of purity." For it is unfortunately the case that some men would seemingly rather be crooked than straight and that others are unable to resist the temptation to adulterate food products in order to make larger profits. Thus it is, and because of this the law must have vigilant and unrelenting agents, always active and always willing to spend their best energies in defending edicts and protecting the people who cannot always analyze the articles of food they purchase, but who are entitled to the exact thing they think they are buying. And the treasury will be correspondingly enriched.

THE RECORD OF 1912.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust states respecting the work of his Bureau for the year 1912, that the agents purchased and the chemists analyzed 7,197 food samples; and that there were terminated 1,049 cases for violation of the food laws. The moneys received by the Bureau from fines and license fees totalled $136,125.49, while for the maintenance of the Bureau the expenditures were $81,858.55, or $54,266.94 less than the receipts. The Commissioner notes that all moneys received by the Bureau are at once paid into the Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth, and that the Bureau is maintained exclusively from specific legislative appropriations.

Concerning the general character of the work for 1912, the Commissioner remarks that over 4,000 milks were examined. In these, the chief adulterations found were the results of skimming and watering.

A remarkable decrease in the use of milk preservatives appeared, there being only three instances in which formaldehyde had been found, two in Allegheny county, one in Venango county; whereas, nine years ago, the Bureau caused upwards of 600 arrests for this offense. Other features of special interest were numerous cases of the sale of rotten eggs in Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, the frequent discovery of benzoate of soda in excess of the amount tolerated by the present Act, the occurrence of saccharin in soft drinks and the frequent misbranding of these goods; the fact that added copper is still found occasionally in imported French peas; also that a good many cases had been found in which decayed raw materials had been used in food manufacture, or in which food products had become decomposed subsequent to manufacture.

The Commissioner expresses his confidence that the condition of the public food supply with respect to adulteration and misbranding, is constantly improving under the beneficent influence of the Commonwealth's food laws.

THE RECORD OF TWO YEARS.

Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust recently issued a statement to the effect that during the first two years of Governor Tener's administration the agents of the food bureau purchased and the chemists analyzed 15,397 food samples, and that there were terminated 2,078 cases for violations of the various food laws.

The moneys received by the Bureau from fines, costs and license fees totalled $257,118.97, while for the maintenance of the Bureau the expenditures were $164,941.70 or $92,177.27 more than self-sustaining.

The Commissioner noted that all moneys received by the Bureau are paid at once into the State Treasury for the use of the Commonwealth, and that the Bureau is maintained exclusively from a specific legislative appropriation.

The years 1911 and 1912, the first two years of Governor Tener's administration, break all records for effective work since the food bureau was created.

SALT IN BUTTER.

A well known man, who is in a position to know what he is talking about, writes the Dairy Record:

"Whoever started the incorporating of salt into butter certainly did a big damage to the dairy business. While butter makers may be able to incorporate enough salt to make from one-half to one per cent. per pound difference by weight, they lose from two to four cents a pound in the selling price of their goods, so that you can readily see that the extra incorporation of salt, instead of being a gain, is a serious loss to them."

Commenting on the matter the Dairy Record remarks: "The centralizers should be given credit for starting the incorporation of undue amounts of salt into butter, just as they must be given credit for introducing a great many other questionable methods into butter making and creamery operation generally. They fight the oleomargarine people with one hand and with the other they ruin the dairy business by lowering the quality and forcing others to lower the quality, thus giving the oleomargarine people the finest openings. The tales of profit that might be gained by incorporating undue amounts of salt should receive scant notice by buttermakers to whom the quality of their goods is of some concern. As pointed out by the writer just quoted, what is gained in quantity is more than lost in quality, the bluffs and preposterous claims of salty enthusiasts notwithstanding."

FARMING UNDER WATER.

Farming under forty feet of water would seem to be rather difficult work, remarks the Oysterman and Fisherman. It is difficult and expensive work, but it is done upon a vast scale, as there are farms under forty, fifty and even sixty feet of salt water, to the extent of more than twenty thousand acres under a single management. These farms, while they are as extensive as the vast grain fields of the west, do not produce grain, but they produce oysters.

The crop is propagated, seeded, planted, protected, removed, replanted, matured and harvested all by steam power, large steamers being employed capable of catching 1200 bushels of oysters an hour from these grounds. These oyster grounds, as may be readily seen, are no longer in the little creeks, estuaries and rivers where natural oysters formerly grew, but are in the large open bays or sounds, like Long Island Sound, Peconic, Gardiner's, Naragansett, Great South and Chesapeake Bays, where the ground is swept by the deep, pure current of salt sea water, and where the product of oysters is always pure and delicious. This is the modern oyster culture, which has practically replaced the small natural oyster fishery throughout a large portion of our coast. For these and other reasons the product of oyster farms is now considered by many of our best food authorities as one of the most wholesome, nutritious and easily digested of our foods.

SKIN DISEASES DUE TO MILK-FAT.

While milk is used for many complaints, Doctors D. W. Montgomery and G. D. Culver, of San Francisco, have investigated the effects of milkfat on the skin. In the Journal of Cutaneous Diseases they report the results of their investigations. Eczema occurs frequently at both extremes of life in infancy and in old age, when milk is the chief or sole diet. Years ago Dr. Martenache drew attention to the occurrence of acne (a livid inflammation of the skin) due to the use of butter. While it is a common observation among the laity that butter will cause pimples, yet the effects of rich milk or ice cream are overlooked. These doctors found from their clinical experience that rich milk or cream was worse than butter in producing abnormal secretions of the subaceous glands.

Milk is exceedingly easy to digest and is anti-putrefactive in the alimentary canal. When lactic acid bacteria attack milk sugar, both lactice and succinic acids are formed which hamper the proteolytic bacteria (those that split by the proteids) that cause putrefaction and give rise to poisonous ptomaines. The digestion of fats in milk products is a much simpler process than the digestion of either carbohydrates or proteids. They enter the circulation comparatively unchanged and are either stored up almost entirely unchanged or burnt to produce heat. Butter is particularly easy to digest, and if it remains too long in the stomach, butyric acid may be split off from the glyceryl butyrate and cause indigestion.

Previous experiments have proven that a particular fat still retains its characteristic properties after being absorbed and it is only fair to believe that butter, cream, or even rich milk, will act the same, and that if a person takes an excess of milk-fat he will have an excess of milk-fat in his skin. Some of these doctors' worst cases were among heavy milk and cream drinkers. They explain this as being due to the fact that when milk or cream is taken it is in the form of an emulsion and is therefore more readily absorbed than when ingested as butter. Being more readily absorbed, it reaches the skin in an overwhelming quantity shortly after a meal, causing a kind of fat congestion. Summarizing, Drs. Montgomery and Culver give their opinion that the quantity and quality of fat ingested does not act directly as a poison, but it lowers the resistance of the skin to bacterial attacks, rendering the host liable to acne, carbuncle and erysipelas.

BUTTERMILK AS MEDICINE.

Medical men are so freely recommending buttermilk for indigestion and various forms of stomach disorder that it is evident that they are coming back to the simplicity of our grandparents, remarks the Dairy. As a remedial agent buttermilk is undoubtedly very valuable. It is a cooling and refreshing summer drink, and the lactic acid which it contains has the faculty of attacking and dissolving earthy deposits in the blood vessels. It is therefore peculiarly suitable for gouty, rheumatic or obese subjects for it prevents the clogging of the veins and arteries and eliminates deposits of calcareous matter round the joints. It is well known that it is the stiffening and narrowing of the blood vessels which brings on senile decay. If buttermilk is drunk freely as a beverage, such degeneration may be postponed for many years. Buttermilk has also a stimulating effect upon the liver, skin and kidneys.

Buttermilk is very nutritious, and the casein of the milk exists in a finely coagulated form, a more easily digested state than when in coarse curd. It is largely advocated in Germany for cases of feeble digestion, because, unlike fresh milk, which readily curdles in the stomach, forming large, firm lumps, sometimes very difficult of digestion, the casein of buttermilk is already curdled, but finely divided. Dr. Hutchinson in his "Food and Principles of Dietetics," says: "Its nutritive value is considerable, an ordinary glassful yielding about as much nourishment as two ounces of bread. It is as a cheap source of proteid, however, that buttermilk is chiefly deserving of notice. In respect to this constituent it is not one whit inferior to ordinary milk." Buttermilk, both for internal and external use, was widely advocated by our grandmothers. It was supposed to act internally by clearing the system of impurities, and as a cosmetic by removing sunburn, tan and summer freckles, and making the skin white and smooth. Whether or not it combines all these marvelous qualities, it is certainly perfectly harmless in its effects and beneficial in its action.

THE MANUFACTURE OF BUTTER FOR STORAGE.

The fact that much butter is annually being held in storage from May and June, to the following March and April, and the necessity for this condition being as it is, remarks Hoard's Dairyman, demands some study along the line of butter production and satisfactory storage qualities. A study of this subject has been made by L. A. Rodgers, S. C. Thompson and J. R. Keithly of the Dairy Division Bureau of Animal Industry, United States Department of Agriculture. The result of their work is given in Bulletin No. 148, of their bureau. Various tests were made of butter kept in storage and a few sentences taken here and there from the bulletin will indicate the trend of thought resulting from the work done.

"It was shown that butter made from the unripened pasteurized cream changed very little in storage, while butter made from the same cream after the usual ripening invariably went off flavor. It was also observed that while fishiness frequently developed in the ripened cream butter, authentic cases never occurred in the butter made from sweet cream."

"To make butter of good keeping quality any treatment that increases the chemical instability of the product should be avoided.

"Much of the work which was done in the preparation of this bulletin was done with the butter made and packed for the United States Navy under the supervision of this bureau. The butter which gave the most uniform satisfaction for the last three years was made under the following specifications:

"1. Butter shall be fresh butter made during such period of 90 days after April 15 and before August 15, as shall be most suitable for buttermaking in the locality of the creamery where it is to be made; from pasteurized milk or cream, none of which should contain before pasteurization more acid in 50 c. c. than will be neutralized by 15 c. c. or 13 c. c. of tenth normal alkali solution, as determined by Mann's acid test, for butter scoring 94 and 95 respectively.

"2. Quality—Shall be strictly of the grade of creamery "extras" and one third must score not less than 94 and two thirds not less than 95 at the time of packing.

"3. Composition—Moisture in the butter must not exceed 13 per cent. There must be no preservative used other than common salt, and that shall be at a rate giving not less than two and one-half per cent. nor more than three and three-fourth per cent. in the butter at the time of packing.

"4. Packing.—The butter must be packed in tins and the tins fully sealed at the creamery where the butter is made and within twelve hours after the time of churning.

"5. Inspection.—The ingredients, manufacture, sanitation, packing, boxing, marking and shipping of the butter shall be subject to inspection by government inspectors, who shall have full authority to reject any lot of milk, cream, or the finished butter, or any other requirement which does not conform in every respect to the specifications.

"6. Storage.—All butter must be kept at a temperature of 50 degrees F., after being packed and until placed in cold storage. It shall be forwarded as rapidly as carload lots are accumulated in the packing plant to such warehouses as may be designated by the Bureau of Supplies and Accounts, Navy Department, where the butter will be held at zero or lower temperature."

To the manufacturer of commercial butter, the tables which are given in this bulletin will be of much interest, and the methods followed in securing the results will likewise be of value. The authors repeatedly make the statement that the superior quality of the butter made from pasteurized sweet cream is obvious. They likewise state that the kind of flavor developed by the butter during storage was not due to the temperature but that the temperature affected the rate of change; likewise that the kind of flavor developed in butter is determined almost entirely before it goes into storage. The man who produces the cream has a lot to do with this. Poor cream never made good butter and never will.

ORIGIN OF MAIZE.

The history of Indian corn must be taken to a large extent from the remains of Indian civilization found in various parts of North and South America. Consequently the history is vague. Here and there in mounds are found ears of corn similar to what we have at the present time and occasionally there will be some recorded statement in places where that corn was used, but at best it is very unsatisfactory history, says Hoard's Dairyman.

As nearly as we know at the present time, corn originated in Central America. Some maintain that the point of origin is north of this in Mexico. However this may be, the fact is pretty definitely established that America is the native home of what we know as Indian corn, or maize. It is probable that the Indians had several kinds of corn. Perhaps each section of the country had its particular type. Europe before the discovery of America, produced only the small grains, such as wheat, oats and barley. Those grains went under the name of corn, but the genuine maize was not produced there until the seed was secured from America. It is most likely that our pop corn, sweet corn, all our corn, came from native plants of the Central American countries. There are various theories surrounding the plant development of corn, but the most of these concede that teosinte represents an original form from which corn has come by natural and artificial development. This too, is pretty definitely known, that the corn plant at one time was branched and produced ears on these branches. Many of these ideas come from inspection of fields of corn which have been allowed to care for themselves so far as the selection of seed is concerned and which have degenerated. In such fields the stalks and ears show peculiarities which are not desirable, and which, it is charged, have been bred out of the corn of the past generations. The lesson naturally follows that to maintain the corn plant in its high state of cultivation care of the seed and continual improvement of the plant are necessary.

DAIRY PRODUCTS INCREASING.

A bulletin summarizing the data collected for dairy products in the United States for 1909 has just been issued by the Bureau of the Census.

There were 5,140,869 farms in the United States for which the enumerators reported dairy cows on April 15, 1910. For only 4,413,333 of these farms were dairy products of any kind as produced in 1909, and for only 4,021,460 was the quantity of milk produced 1909 stated.

The total number of dairy cows on farms April 15, 1910, was 20,265,000, while the number on farms which reported the production of any kind of dairy products in 1909 was 18,746,000, and the number of farms which reported the production of milk in 1909 was 16,069,000, or 77.9 per cent. of the total.

The total production of milk reported for 1909 was 5,814,000,000 gallons; the true total production probably exceeding this by not less than 10 per cent. There were on April 15, 1910, 16,069,000 dairy cows on the farms reporting milk. Assuming that there were the same number in 1909, the average production of milk per cow would be 362 gallons.

The total value of dairy products of farms in 1909, exclusive of milk and cream consumed on the farm was reported was $596,413,000.

The total reported value of dairy products sold in 1909 was $473,769,000, of which the value of milk, cream and butter fat sold represented four fifths, and that of butter most of the remainder. The quantity of milk sold as such was reported as 1,937,000,000 gallons, or substantially one third of the total reported as produced.

The reported farm production of butter and of cheese in 1909—994,650,000 and 9,406,000 pounds respectively was considerably less than the production for the year 1899.

The manufacture of butter and cheese is, however, gradually being transferred from the farm to the factories.

CURE FOR HIGH PRICES IS INTENSIVE FARMING.

It is gratifying to read a recent statement issued by the Department of Agriculture on the secret of the high prices of food stuffs. The statement follows: "The lever that will break the backbone of high prices of food stuffs is more intensive farming, cultivation of large tracts of land near the large cities and more intelligent methods of agriculture," says Professor Milton Whitney, chief of the Bureau of Soils, United State Department of Agriculture.

"The country is advancing in every line," says Prof. Whitney. "People are living better than ever before. As a result we are stronger physically and mentally. - We are consuming more food stuffs per capita than the population of the European countries and I would not for a moment attempt to discourage less food consumption. But it is plain that until we get a larger supply of food stuffs we can expect the present high cost of living to continue.

"So, let us touch the producing side of the question. For instance, the States north of the Potomac and east of the Ohio Rivers have a total area of 112,322,880 acres. The area under cultivation in this territory is estimated at over 40,000,000 acres. Added to this is 27,000,000 acres used for forestry. So we have 42,000,000 acres of idle lands in the territory lying in these States.

"During the last thirty years the amount of land in use has steadily decreased until it is now about 20 per cent. less than in 1880, while the country as a whole has been growing at a phenomenal rate.

"The number of persons engaged in agricultural pursuits in the States above mentioned has also decreased during the last thirty years, while the total population has very largely increased.

"There are at present, mark you, about 1,300,000 persons engaged in agriculture in the area under consideration, with a population of over 30,000,000 non-agricultural producers to be fed.

"The Bureau of Soils estimates that the land under cultivation in the area can be made to yield at least four times as much as at present by more intelligent and intensive methods of farming. Moreover, the same up-to-date methods used on the idle lands will have a yielding capacity of over eight times as much as at present.

"Careful investigations conducted by the Bureau prove that these lands are well adapted to all classes of crops, from the early fruit, truck and vegetables to the latest storage fruits and vegetables for winter use, and to the most intensive kind of dairy farming.

"The theory that decadence in this region was due to the exhaustion of the soils too long continued under cultivation has proved unfounded by careful study and by officials of the Department of Agriculture.

"The conditions in the eastern section of the country are similar to those existing in other sections of the country. So whether the cost of living is to be reduced or not, it is perfectly plain to even the layman's mind that to feed the present and ever growing population of the country a greater production of the foodstuffs must be raised.

"To do this more people have got to return to the farms; it is necessary to put more land under cultivation; more improved methods of agriculture and more intensive farming must be followed.

"I expect that this will be done at no distant date, but until it is done and prosperous times continue to prevail, I am afraid that we cannot expect a substantial reduction in the high cost of living."

BACTERIAL CONTROL OF MILK SUPPLIES.

The following paper on the Bacterial Control of Milk Supplies has been written by Prof. P. G. Heinemann, Ph.D., Chicago University and appeared in a recent issue of the Creamery and Milk Plant Monthly. In it a plea is made that all laboratories should employ the methods urged by the American Public Health Association to attain valuable comparative results.

"Wholesomeness of milk supplies is controlled by boards of health, by inspection of dairies and distributing agencies, and by physical, chemical and bacterial examinations of market milk. The bacterial examination is obviously the most important since this alone can shed light on the actual wholesomeness of milk. It is generally conceded that milk is secreted in a germ free condition from the mammary glands, but already in the cistern of the udder milk becomes contaminated. The germs contained in the udder gain access from without by passing through the teat duct. The udder contamination is small, however, if compared with contamination resulting from milking and handling the milk after removal from the udder. Dust from the cow's coat, from the udder, from the air, from the hands and clothes of the milkers, and last, but not least, from the utensils—all these factors contribute to the bacterial flora of the milk. Prompt cooling and keeping the milk cool up to the time of consumption are of vital importance in order to minimize the multiplication of germs in milk.

"The question arises, what harm is there in the presence of these germs? It is true by far the great majority are harmless, but occasionally disease germs enter with the harmless ones, as has been shown by the frequency of milk borne epidemics.

"Disease germs may enter milk from two sources. Either the cow is diseased and the disease is communicable to man (example of this class of disease are tuberculosis, anthrax, foot and mouth disease and others), or the germs gain access to the milk from the personnel of the dairy, here we have again tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid fever, dysentery, scarlet fever and others. Germ carriers are quite common, and frequently detection is difficult. By means of these persons who carry disease germs and discharge them with their excretion without suffering themselves, milk has been shown to have been contaminated, and no doubt many diseases of obscure origin really are derived from such contamination.

"The science of bacteriology is not always at present able to detect disease germs in either milk or water, and when it is possible to isolate dangerous organisms, it is a tedious and laborious work. The results would be available too late to be of material advantage. The evidence of milk or water being the cause of epidemics must, under present conditions, be circumstantial, if prompt action to protect the public is to be taken. We must, therefore, rely on the total number of bacteria found in milk as an index of its quality.

"True, bacteriological methods do not permit us to count all germs present. This again would be too time consuming to be of value. The presence of many bacteria is not demonstrable by ordinary laboratory methods. Comparative results of great value can be obtained if all laboratories will use exactly the same methods for milk examination. With this end in view the American Public Health Association has appointed a committee which has published "Standard Methods of Milk Examination." According to these methods composition and reaction of the culture media, period of temperature of incubation, method of counting colonies—all these points and many others have been definitely outlined.

"If all laboratories will follow these methods which may be modified as our knowledge advances, then bacterial milk examinations will be of value. We can draw intelligent conclusions from the results obtained, and any statement of bacterial numbers should be accompanied by a statement of the methods used.

"A very great variety of species of germs is found in milk. The determination of these species is accompanied by too much detail work to be of value at present. For this reason and because of the difficulty of proving the presence of disease germs, the total number, regardless of kind, is the only index of value. Even though in the majority of cases these germs are harmless, they represent, if in large numbers, filthy production, filthy transportation, or both conditions combined. It is also reasonably certain that disease germs will rarely be present in a milk which is produced with such precautions as to materially reduce the bacterial content.

"Bacterial standards have been established in many cities. The maximum number permitted varies from 250,000 to a million. Such standards must be tentative and enforced with caution. Too low a standard is discouraging to the producer, too high a standard does not afford efficient protection to the consuming public. Bacterial standards are also liable to give the public a false feeling of security. A standard of 500,000, for instance, would be a fair one to advocate, still it should not be considered final and lull us into the feeling that milk with 500,000 germs per cubic centimeter is necessarily safe. Progress in an industry of the magnitude of the dairy industry is necessarily slow, and although reasonably bacterial standards should be generally established, security against disease germs, under modern conditions, can be attained only by efficient pasteurization of milk obtained under sanitary conditions."

INTERNAL REVENUE REPORT.

In reference to articles in which creamery men have an interest the annual report of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, R. E. Cabell, contains the following statements and recommendations:

Adulterated Butter.—During 1912 there were reported 132 cases of the manufacture of adulterated butter, 11 of wholesale, and 18 of retail dealers, making a total of 161 violations of the act of May 2, 1902, practically all of which were due to the manufacture and sale of butter containing abnormal moisture without payment of special and stamp taxes. The total collections from this source amounted to only $46,102.40, which is a decrease from the previous year.

There was considerable increase in the production of renovated butter during 1912, which shows a total production of 46,387,398 pounds and 46,413,895 withdrawn and tax-paid, as against 39,292,591 pounds and 39,352,445, respectively during 1911.

The total amount of oleomargarine produced in the United States during 1912 was 128,601,053 pounds, being over 13,000,000 pounds less than the amount produced in 1910 which was the high water mark since the enactment of the present law. The withdrawal tax paid in 1912 amounted to 121,945,038 pounds of uncolored and 3,174,331 pounds of colored product.

There was an increase of 14,410 pounds in the withdrawals of the uncolored product for export, and a decrease of 10,222 pounds in the colored product, or a net increase of 4,188 pounds over the previous year.

The total collections from all oleomargarine sources amounted to $1,128,707.25 as against $1,000,214.79, an increase of $128,492.46 over collections in 1911.

A slight decrease is noted in the number of violations of the oleomargarine law reported in 1912, there being a total of 1,779 offenses reported as against a total of 1,816 cases in 1911. These violations involve 1,584 persons or offenders, and represent 75 illicit manufacturers and 73 wholesale dealers and 1,436 retail dealers.

ICE CREAM BETTERS CREAM SUPPLY.

S. C. Thompson, in charge of the dairy manufacturing division, Department of Agriculture, has sent the following circular to creameries all over the country:

The creameries have taken considerable interest in the manufacture of ice cream as a side line of late, and we believe it is helping them to secure a better grade of raw material. One of the most difficult problems confronting the buttermaker is that of securing good cream. In the manufacture of ice cream one of the first and most essential points the buttermaker is forced to recognize is the necessity of using sweet cream and free from foreign odors. This being the case we wish to call your attention to five inducements that might be offered, first, to the patron, and secondly to the creameryman, to work for an improvement in quality.

To the patron:—

1. It creates a market for sweet cream.
2. It enables the patron to realize a larger profit for his cream.
3. It teaches him to take better care of his cream during hot weather.
4. It necessitates more frequent deliveries, consequently —
5. It means better cream, less loss, greater satisfaction and a larger check coming in regularly each month.

To the creameryman:—

1. It furnishes a means for producing greater profit.
2. It enables the creameryman to pay more for cream.
3. It offers the creameryman an opportunity to encourage the patrons to take more interest in dairying.
4. It requires more frequent deliveries, consequently cream is received in better condition for buttermaking.
5. It enables the creameryman to increase salaries, and to make annually more and better butter. Aside from these advantages and a great many others which might be mentioned, the creameryman receives more advertising than he could otherwise have secured.

INSPECTION OF FOOD AND DRUGS IN 1912.

The annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture for 1912 states that "more than 10,000 official samples and foods were collected by the inspecting force of the Bureau during the year. Approximately 1,500 factory inspections were made to secure information on the sanitary conditions of the establishments and the general practices as they affect the enforcement of the food and drugs act. The samples were referred to the inspection laboratories at Washington and the twenty-two branch laboratories in different sections of the country, where analyses were made to learn whether the products were being sold in compliance with the law. In addition to the original analyses made for the inspection or investigation work, check analyses were made and cases were prepared for the consideration of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection in the Washington laboratories of the Bureau. The Drug Inspection laboratory reported 809 samples examined, of which 604 were domestic products. Of these 132 (22 per cent.) were found to be either adulterated or misbranded, or both. The Food Inspection laboratories reported the study of approximately 5,000 analytical reports of domestic samples, most of which were by the branch laboratories. In 2,034 instances the reports showed violations of the law, and cases were prepared for the consideration of the Board of Food and Drug Inspection. About 7,800 analytical reports of import food cases were considered, in addition to 741 special cases, 558 of which were reported to the Treasury Department as representing adulteration or misbranding under the act and 183 were recommended to the Secretary of Agriculture for release.

WINTER EGGS RESULT FROM EXTREME CARE.

The question as to whether or not breeders get winter eggs is really a test of what has been done the previous season, remarks the New York Sun. It is not so much how the birds are cared for now as it is how they were cared for one month or six months ago. Winter eggs are not the result of special care at any one time, but rather the result of continued care in all branches of breeding and rearing the chicks. One must know both how to rear chicks, and how to house them. A breeder may be an expert in rearing chicks, an expert in feeding breeders or layers, an expert poultry house builder or a qualified judge of the points for prolific layers, but still fail to get the eggs, for these qualities must all be in the possession of the one man if success is to had.

To get winter eggs one must first have the stock. The goose comes before the golden egg. The original wild hen came from India, was as small as our bantam and laid only a setting or two of eggs during the breeding season, as is the case with all wild birds. It is quite a step from the wild Indian hen to our large-sized, 200 eggs a year hen, and the change has not come by chance, but by selecting for breeders only the best.

If one is looking for winter eggs, and all poultrymen certainly are, advantage must be taken of the advances made by science and stock secured with generations of prolific egg producers back of it. Then having chicks from good stock, these must be grown right. It should be a steady, every day growth from the downy chick to the mature pullet. Such birds will have the constitution and the ability to produce eggs and keep at it. The chicks must never be allowed to stop growing at any stage of their development, but they must not be forced to grow at an unnaturally rapid rate, for pullets that have at any time been forced in development or been retarded will not make the producers or breeders that the other birds will.

It is useless to expect eggs from weak pullets or from hens that have not entirely recovered from their moult, however well they are cared for. Most hens will lay fewer eggs than they did as pullets, but should pay as large profits as in their first year, for they lay larger eggs and the eggs hatch better in the breeding season. The chicks hatched from hens' eggs will also grow much more quickly and be far more vigorous and hardy than those from pullets eggs.

DAIRY AND POULTRY PRODUCTS.

The dairy cow is one of the principal producers of wealth on the farm, although not prominent in public notice. The farm value of the dairy products for 1912 is estimated at $830,000,000, an amount which exceeds the value of the cotton lint and is nearly equal to the combined value of the lint and seed. The products of the dairy cow are worth nearly as much as the value of the hay crop and are nearly twice the value of the oats crop. The wheat crop is worth only three quarters as much.

Poultry is another industry of great wealth production on the farm. Here is an illustration of how large an aggregate an immense number of little things may become. An egg may be worth only a cent and three-quarters and yet 1,700,000,000 dozen eggs are worth $350,000,000, and these are the estimates for 1912.

If to the value mentioned is added the value of the fowls raised, the products of the poultry industry on farms amounts to $570,000,000. This is nearly equal to the value of the wheat crop and exceeds the value of the oats crop. It is more than three-quarters of the value of the cotton lint crop. The value of poultry products in 1912 has been exceeded in two former years.

Wool production has apparently been exceeded in two former years. yet in 1912 it amounted to 318,546,000 pounds. This wool had a farm value of about $55,000,000, or about six per cent. below the average value of the wool clip of the five preceding years.

The animals sold from the farm and the animals slaughtered on it together numbered about 111,000,000 for 1912, and the farm value of these animals is estimated to be $1,930,000,000. This is the highest value of animals sold and slaughtered since about 1900 except in 1909 and 1911.

MAPLE SUGAR AND PRODUCTS.

From the time the earliest explorers discovered Indians making sugar from the maple tree until the present day, the production of maple sugar in the United States has been an important industry. So says Farmers' Bulletin 516, issued by Secretary Wilson of the United States Department of Agriculture. The industry is purely American. Canada being the only country outside of the United States that produces the product. According to the Bulletin "maple sugar and maple syrup are considered delicacies, and are not produced in such quantities as formerly. The aggregate of all pure maple products and the many imitations may be the same, for it is said that were all the maple trees cut down, and thus the supply of sap cut off, no drop in the quantity of syrup or sugar would be noted. Within the past six or seven years there has been renewed tendency toward the production of a better grade of maple products. Maple syrup or maple sugar prepared by the best methods is a light colored, pleasant tasting product. Contrary characteristics are the result of unclean methods of and possibly sour sap in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred, and were the manufactures to take greater care in their methods their results would show improvement. This better grade may not appeal to many people who have been accustomed to the dark stronger grades."

MODERATE USE OF COFFEE ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS.

Recent experiments by Dr. H. L. Hollingsworth on sixteen individuals to ascertain the action of caffeine, the chief active principle of coffee on the nerves and mind, says the New York sun editorially, demonstrates that the popular idea that coffee stimulates the mental processes and counteracts the depressing effects of fatigue are correct, but the induction of wakefulness by coffee is not proved. The individuals experimented upon were students ranging between the ages of 19 and 39, to whom were administered measured doses of caffeine mixed with sugar and milk capsules. These individuals were carefully watched to avoid error. It was demonstrated that the effect was produced more readily in the evening than in the morning, and that it always began to be noticed within ninety minutes after administration, and that it persisted from one to four hours. Small doses (one to three grains, the contents of a good cup of coffee) stimulated a typewriter to rapid execution, double doses retarded it, but the quality of the work with regard to error was improved by the coffee.

The effect on sleep was striking by the absence of confirmation of the common idea that wakefulness is induced by coffee. Even doses reaching four grains, an estimated equivalent of a pint of strong coffee, had no appreciable sleep disturbing effect except in a few individual cases. And this result is in accord with ordinary observation by unbiased observers. Many persons who drink coffee several hours before retiring to bed insist that their wakefulness is due to coffee, without realizing that caffeine, like other drugs, is absorbed within two hours and that its effect passes off within four hours. So that when it is taken at 8 p. m., its effects must disappear by midnight. If this were not true coffee would differ from all other stimulants the characteristic of which is to be brief duration of their effects when the dose is not renewed. The result of this and other observations is that coffee stimulates the system to bring out its reserve supply of energy, which always lies dormant until called upon in an emergency, that its moderate use is absolutely harmless in health, and its immoderate use (in repeated or large quantities) may produce over-stimulation resulting in exhaustion. From the experiments here cited half a pint of coffee does not contain enough caffeine to damage a healthy person. This would be equivalent to two large cups a day.

EGGS AND THE PARCEL POST.

No doubt the fact will disappoint thousands of lovers of fresh eggs and other thousands of professional and amateur poultry-keepers; but the parcel post does not, at the outset at least, answer the question of how to get the guaranteed egg from the nest to the breakfast table on the day of laying or the day thereafter, at a reasonable cost to the consumer and a reasonable profit to the producer, says the Country Gentleman. This is due largely to the fact that the box makers have not been alive to their opportunity. They have not anticipated the government by producing a container to conform to the postal requirements which may be sold at less than prohibitive cost to the shipper and which is of sufficient lightness to keep the charges for weight at a minimum.

The only container on the market sells for seventy-five cents a dozen and it weighs twelve ounces. Price and weight are both too great if the parcel post is to be an improvement on the express service for the egg business. The weight, plus the twenty-four ounces that a dozen eggs should weigh, brings the total to two and a quarter pounds, thus putting the package in the three pound rating, for which the postage in the first fifty mile zone is eleven cents. Add that to the cost of the container, six and a quarter cents, and the transportation and package charges, without considering the price of the eggs themselves, are seventeen and a quarter cents for each dozen.

By express thirty dozen eggs, carted, may be shipped the same distance for thirty cents. The price of the crate is fifty cents. So thirty dozen eggs may be sent to one consignee by express for eighty cents, while it costs thirty times seventeen and a quarter cents, or $5.18, to mail thirty separate dozen to as many customers.

Lower parcel post rates are bound to come in time, just as lower letter postage was granted after much agitation, but in the meantime let somebody produce a container which will be a safe carrier without weighing more than eight ounces empty, and which will cost considerably less than six cents.

THE UNAPPRECIATED POTATO.

The king of vegetables is the potato, we are assured by an editorial article in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Most writers and speakers, when rating vegetables by their food value, have given this tuber a somewhat humble rank. But it is free, this writer tells us, from most of the faults common to the majority of vegetable foods. In contrast with the ordinary animal foods, vegetables are apt to be poorly utilized in the human alimentary tract, owing often to their woody texture. Their nutrients are packed away in impervious structures and cellulose walls, or enveloped in branny coverings which protect them from their digestive juices. Accordingly many plant products escape through the alimentary tract in part unabsorbed and unutilized. Cooking, of course, improves their digestibility, but even so, most vegetable foods are low in their protein content. Attempts to provide exclusive vegetarian dietaries have usually failed because of the impossibility of inducing persons to consume, or at any rate, to digest, the bulky portions of such rations from plant sources as were assumed to be necessary. Now, however, it is recognized that not so much protein is required as was once supposed; and the percentage in potatoes seems to be adequate. At the same time there is no woody fibre or tough internal skin in the tubers, and they are altogether fit for food.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

One of the latest discoveries of synthetic chemistry is how to make ivory out of cow's milk—and very good ivory at that, according to all accounts. The original idea was to use the new ivory for piano keys because it preserves its original color indefinitely, whereas the genuine article turns yellow after a time. It has been found that the new product is not only an efficient substitute for ivory, but can easily be prepared to take the place of amber, celluloid and such like products and, it is claimed, can hardly be distinguished from them. The new ivory takes a very high polish and probably will not lack a commercial value for itself as natural ivory continues to grow scarcer and scarcer year by year.

Dairy Commissioner Cochran, of Colorado, in his annual report to the governor submits the following figures on the dairy industry in Colorado: Number of dairy cows in Colorado, January 1, 1913, 167,000, valued at $8,350,000; value of milk produced during the year, $10,000,000; value of butter produced during the year $13,800,000; value of butter imported into the State during the year from $6,500,000 to $7,000,000; number of dairies in the State, 7,000; number of creameries, 125; condensed milk factories, 2; cheese factories, 6.

There are 27 margarine factories in Denmark. These produced last year over 78,000,000 pounds. The importations were 3,306,556 pounds more than exportations, so that the total consumption was over 81,000,000 pounds. The Danish production and consumption of margarine have both been increasing during the last few years. A remarkable change in the use of raw materials has taken place in the margarine industry. While, for instance, in 1908 about 70 per cent. of the raw materials used in the manufacture of margarine consisted of fatty substances of animals and 30 per cent. of the fatty substances of vegetables, the proportion is now the opposite, so that the fatty substances of vegetables used now amounts to 70 per cent. This change appears to be the result of high prices of cattle of late years. Most of the raw materials are imported from abroad, especially those of animals, while considerable quantities of cocoa and sesame oils are pressed by the Danish mills.

The United States Agricultural Department has issued the following rule relative to labeling oleomargine: In order to prevent unnecessary correspondence and delay in the approval of labels, etc., for oleomargarine, attention is invited to the fact that the bureau will not approve wrappers, etc., bearing such statements with reference to butter as "the kind that pleases the butter critics," "can be used as butter," etc. In this connection it may be stated that no exception will be taken to the latter statement provided the same is modified by the addition of the words "substitute for" preceding the word "butter."

Milk frozen in cubes weighing twenty or thirty pounds apiece is a new idea adopted in the Brazillian province of Minas, from which section Rio de Janeiro draws most of its milk supply. The milk is sterilized first and then frozen into blocks. A number of these cubes are placed in cans having insulated walls, holding about 300 quarts. The caps are then hermetically sealed and are cooled to 39 degrees Fahrenheit. It is said that milk shipped after this treatment will stand a journey of from fifteen to twenty days without injurious effect, and that the melted milk blocks taste just like fresh milk.

According to a French authority standard hygienic milk should have been put through the following processes: 1. Analysis and testing to remove watered, skimmed, soured or low-grade milk. 2. Filtered or strained to remove mechanical impurities such as hairs, dust, etc. 3. Pasteurization at a temperature of 176 degrees Fahrenheit and immediately cooling to about 40 degrees to destroy pathogenic microbes, such as are those of tuberculosis, diphtheria, typhoid fever, etc. 4. Bottling or selling in sterilized bottled or containers. It should be then kept at a low temperature until sold. The first country to establish this standard for milk was the Argentine Republic, which enacted statutory legislation as long ago as 1890.

Abel Lodge, of Philadelphia, has just passed his 85th birthday, and his chief claim to fame is that he was the first man to sell ice cream in that city. He opened a store 63 years ago and for a long time he was alone in the business and supplied city as well as country trade. He retired from the trade many years ago. He started to make his pile when the war came on when a great demand for ice cream swept the city. The Centennial exposition added to his fortune.

In various parts of Mexico ice cream in cones got a great start about the time the revolution opened. This has put a damper on the business, but it is said that when peace comes the country will furnish a splendid opening for ice cream manufacturers. There are a few small plants in the country and the people along the border buy quantities of the product from the Americans.

The Wisconsin food commissioner has issued a warning to ice cream manufacturers against using a synthetic product as the basis of ice cream. Preparations have been made to prosecute any manufacturer who uses this product.

A ruling of the health department of Philadelphia required that all milk sold there after December 1, should be delivered in bottles. After due consideration of the inconvenience of this, as presented by many dealers, the regulation was amended. The amendment gives the privilege of selling milk in bulk and dipping the milk to those shops dealing in milk or milk products exclusively. Such places, however, must be kept scrupulously clean.

Philadelphia milk men are enthusiastic over the new electric railroad to Allentown. This new route maintains an express schedule that is unequalled by the fastest steam roads. Freight cars are attached to trains enabling shippers to take advantage of the low rates. Allentown is in a district that supplies Philadelphia with a large amount of milk and butter, and as the company will run hourly express trains to and from Philadelphia, shippers of milk, who now have to depend on the semi-daily trains of the railroad, will be greatly aided.

President Yetter, of the Denver Chamber of Commerce, is working out a plan whereby he hopes to get 10,000 people to locate near Denver and furnish Colorado with several million dollars worth of dairy products which are now being shipped in from other States. He wants a syndicate to acquire 100,000 acres of land and sell it on advantageous terms to farmers who will produce the milk.

The enormous growth of the milk supply of New York City is remarkable. In 1885 only 634,612 quarts of milk was consumed daily as compared with 2,500,000 quarts daily for 1912, which is an increase of about 400 per cent.

Both in New York and Ohio the cheese industry has dropped off in recent years. The assistant commissioner of agriculture, so stated as to New York recently, and Ohio newspapers repeat the statement for their State. The reason given is the great expansion of the butter business and the increasing demand of the cities for milk. The milk production has not kept pace with these two sources of demand.

Milk and butter seem to be the favorite articles to go by parcel post since that new institution went into effect. It has been suggested that the business of the dealer may be seriously affected.

---

A dairy in Great Falls, Mont., wanted a union label on its butter. There being no union organization of dairy workers, it was unable to secure it. The American Federation of Labor organized a union of dairy workers who promptly secured an increase of wages and overtime agreements. The coveted label was then granted.

---

*The milk dealers of Connecticut are greatly exercised over the new weights and measures law requiring that bottles be marked with the net quantity of the contents. To have the mark blown in the bottles would require discarding all the bottles on hand, and if the figures were printed on the caps it would require an immense number of new caps. The dealers have petitioned the dairy and food commissioner to postpone the enforcement of the law.

---

Millions may be added to the revenues of the State of Louisiana as a result of the action of the Louisiana Conservation Commission in ordering its surveyors to at once make a survey of all the water bottoms of the State, with a view of turning these into commercial holdings. Lying in these bottoms, besides the vast quantities of oysters, are enormous deposits of shells, sand and gravel that has a remunerative commercial value.

The new parcels post is going to open up many new fields for the wide-awake salesman, among them the sale of dairy products. It will doubtless soon be common to ship butter through the mails, and many manufacturers have already put on the market cartons for the safe shipment of eggs.

Lime in the form of calcium carbonate is an essential constituent of fertile soils, the most evident of its functions being the neutralizing of acidity and improvement of tilth. While all farm crops are sensitive to a lack of lime in the soil, alfalfa, clover, peas, beans, beets, etc., can scarcely be grown with success unless a fair amount is present. The benefits following its use are usually mild and lasting, rather than phenomenal and short lived. It does not take the place of fertilizers and manures, but supplements them. Without sufficient lime in the soil any other treatment must fall short of its possible attainment. Under natural conditions calcium carbonate is more soluble than most other soil ingredients and is easily leached away. As a consequence the greater parts of our lands in the eastern part of the United States, especially those long cultivated, are now deficient in that material.

Tests of the effects of cold storage on food products made for the Department of Agriculture led to the conclusion that poultry keeps better when not drawn than it does when drawn. The reason is that the process of drawing causes bruises which invite the lodgment of germs. Birds which were dry picked keep much better than those which had been scalded.

---

A $25,000 corporation has been organized in Medford, Ore., for the operation of a poultry farm near that city. It is planned to stock the farm with from six to eight thousand laying hens and kale, clover and wheat to supply food will be grown on a twenty-three acre tract. The promoters of the enterprise expect to be able to net $2 a year profit from each hen.

An interesting paper on the food value of hens' eggs was recently read before the French Academy of Science, by Prof. Ballard. He stated that 25 per cent. of an egg has distinct nutritive value, the remainder being water. The meat of ten eggs equals about one pound of meat. From the latter analysis it would seem that at certain seasons of the year when eggs are cheap they are cheaper than first class meat.

According to advance information of the 1912 "Red Book" on the poultry industry of Missouri, for 1911, given out by Commissioner Austin Biggs, of the State bureau of labor statistics, Missouri not only leads every State in the union in the value of poultry production, but exceeds her own record for every previous year. During the year the farmers of the State shipped to market, eggs, poultry and feathers to the value of nearly $29,000,000. Added to this is the estimated value of the commodities consumed locally which is placed at $22,000,000, bringing the total valuation for the year up to nearly $51,000,000.

According to the Retail Grocers' Advocate, San Francisco, the term "barrel of flour" originated in England in the early days when all the different kinds of products were weighed in several and distinct measures. The measure of grain was the "stone" of fourteen pounds. After the corn was made into flour the quantity of flour was known as so many stones, thus a barrel of flour was composed of fourteen stone, or 196 pounds. From this barrel came the other sub-divisions.

It is alleged, remarks the Grocers' Review, that many grocers still sell dried fruits and codfish without the proper markings. Graham flour in its present commercial state does not comply with the formula originally used by Dr. Graham, and therefor must be marked "imitation" on such packages as reach the consumer.

The question of whether eggs in an incubator can be counted as chicks in advertising in a poultry journal, was considered in the United States District Court in Philadelphia, in the trial of Clarence Cayne, of South Bethlehem, who was accused of using eggs to defraud. Cayne is alleged to have advertised in a poultry paper that he had three hundred chicks for sale. Several persons who answered the advertisement and received no reply, complained to the journal, which made an investigation and found that Cayne had no chicks, but depended upon 900 eggs he had in an incubator to hatch three hundred chicks, whereas only 125 were hatched. Cayne was convicted of using the mails to defraud and sentenced to three months imprisonment in the county prison.

THE SHAME OF HOTEL KITCHENS.

BY ANDRE TRIDON.

From "The International" by permission.

In the glare of electric lights, with the range burning at white heat, fifty men are at work under ground. Some cleaning fowls, some hashing meat, some paring vegetables, some kneeding dough, some mixing sauces, some taking the roast out of the oven. Their activity is feverish, for hundreds of patrons are waiting more or less patiently for the dishes they ordered.

*The thermometer registers from 100 to 140 degrees. From the eyebrows of every man, from the tip of his nose and the point of his chin, drops of perspiration dangle and every few seconds roll off into—into what?

Watch the men's arms, their wrists, their hands; rills of sweat are running continually into—into what?

And the infernal heat drives them to drink quart after quart of water, and then they perspire some more—into your soup, into your bread or cake, on your steak, your fish, your cream—on everything which is served to you, dear, squeamish reader.

Some of those men are of cleanly habits; some only take a bath on Saturday nights; some are young; some not so young; some are healthy; some * * * *. Read the report of the Factory Investigation Commission relative to basement bakeries (every hotel has one, and the kitchen is hotter than the bakery). Some of the men were found to have boils, eczema, scalp diseases; the usual proportion suffered from venereal diseases with their concomitant skin manifestations. Many of the men working in over-heated rooms, the report adds, are subject to colds in the head and do not carry handkerchiefs. Tuberculosis and consumption are the special occupational disease of the kitchen workers.

To wipe their hands and mop their brows the cooks are given two towels a day. But then * * * *.

Did you order hashed brown potatoes? They will reach you shaped in a neat little mound. Your omelette will have an almost mathematically perfect contour. How is this done? The cook takes one of his two sweat-soaked towels, lays it over the potatoes or the omelette and pats the dish deftly into the required shape.

And then hygienists denounce the roller towel?

*Affidavits in the possession of the International Hotel Workers' Union show that the temperature rises to 135 degrees in the kitchen of the Hotel Belmont, and 140 in the kitchen of the Manhattan.

And the odors that arise from that sweltering group remind one of the hot room in a Turkish bath and of a menagerie. Look at the cooks' jackets. They are drenched. At the end of the working day they will roll up those dripping garments and stow them away in their lockers. These are usually close to the engine rooms or the water closets. Tomorrow morning the cooks will exchange their street clothes for those limp, damp, sour rags.

In foundries the law demands that provision be made for drying the workers' clothes * * * *. When the kitchen is a large one, the cooks hang their wet clothes in front of the range * * *.

Some of the cooks change their jackets twice a week, some once a week * * * *. As blood, fat, gravies make short work of a clean jacket as far as looks go, it is difficult to tell how long a cook has been wearing the same garment.

Not every hotel has a dressing room. The cooks employed at the Chelsea change their clothes in the kitchen. The kitchen force of the Marlborough-Blenheim does its dressing and undressing in the bakeshop. During the day the street clothes, during the night the working clothes, are piled up on a table.

How excited we were over the cellar bakeries! Barring three exceptions, the cooking of every hotel is done in a dark cellar. At Rector's, where the basement is occupied by a cafe, the kitchen is relegated to a sub-cellar.

Three exceptions are found—at the Grand Union, the McAlpin and the Mills Hotel. The kitchen of the Grand Union is a building by itself, located above the ground, with windows and skylights. Food to be served in the McAlpin cafe is prepared in a small kitchen on the ground floor. The real kitchen, however, is underground. While the Mills Hotel kitchen is in a basement, it is well lighted and ventilated and undoubtedly the cleanest and most comfortable kitchen in New York, with the exception of many club kitchens which are above criticism.

Basements everywhere! That means: no sunlight, no air, the foulness bred of dampness, cooking odors, heat and sweltering bodies.

And there are other nauseating details. The belief that no food should be kept in open preserve cans is not shared by hotel keepers. Even in up-to-date kitchens, like that of the Belmont, cans having contained tomatoes or peas are used instead of sauce-pans or jars to keep sauces or vegetables warm on the stove or the steam-table.

They are used until they become unsoldered or leaky. Even if the dish washers tried their best, they could not keep those cans clean. Dirt nestles securely under the jagged rim where the can opener forced its way. On that sharp edge many a finger has been cut—but what does a drop of blood matter in a gallon of sauce?

Credit is due to the Plaza for replacing preserve cans (at the end of the first cooks' strike) by earthenware crocks and bowls.

Another abomination in hotel kitchens is the "stock-pot." You order beef broth, consomme, potage. Your toureen is filled at the spigot of the stock-pot, and some flavoring is stirred in the liquid thus obtained. You would dreadfully embarrass the headwaiter should you ask for a portion of soup meat. Once a week in summer, once a month in winter, a huge iron or brass receptacle containing from ten to fifty gallons is removed from the stove and cleaned. At the bottom of it there is ooze a foot deep, which is poured off. The stock-pot is placed again on the fire, filled with water, and into that water there go all the odds and ends which cannot be served in the dining room or which have returned from the dining room. Scraps of steak, chicken heads, chop bones—anything. Every night more water is added, and all day long odds and ends are thrown into it. It is always uncovered, and on cleaning day the ooze is always found to contain a few roaches and not unfrequently some over-inquisitive rodent. Why the weekly clean-up in summer? Because the ooze stench becomes well nigh unbearable by Friday night.

Into the deadly stock-pot go all the lean and bones. The fat is thrown into a tin tray about a foot deep. When the tray is full * * * *. But how long does it take to fill up the tray? Sometimes a week. In summer, however, it is impossible to wait until the tray is full. In the terrific heat of the kitchen the stuff soon begins to decay. In the late evening, then, when the rush hour is past, the tray is shoved into the baking oven and left there over night. Mice and roaches are shoed off. The heat is expected to make maggots harmless. The next morning the upper layer of fat is poured off into empty preserve cans, the tray is emptied and scraps of fat begin once more to fall into it.

Before plates are turned over to the dish washers they are carefully searched for scraps of butter. Some of the butter dishes may have been used as ash trays and may contain burnt-up matches or cigarette ends. Also, some of the butter may have come back from guest rooms * * * *. Never mind. Those promiscuous dabs of butter are melted and kept in a tin can on the steam table. A kitchen helper, armed with a large paint brush, dips the tool of his trade in the butter and smears whatever is presented to him by the omnibus, toast, steaks, fish. From his tin can he also fills the little cups of drawn butter which accompany asparagus or certain orders of broiled fish.

Ask cooks and they will reveal to you other savory details—water closets without wash bowls, ventilated through the bakeshop; kitchen garbage not removed on Sundays; men washing their hands in the sink where frozen chicken is thawing out under the hot water faucet; one single water faucet for the whole Holland House kitchen; the Delmonico range, located under the sidewalk and lighted partly through the more or less fitting glass prisms of that sidewalk; the St. Dennis kitchen, with a sort of cesspool opening in front of the ice box, where all the sewage pipes converge * * *.

Why is this possible in New York City in 1913. And not only in New York City, but in Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, as is proved by affidavits in the possession of the Hotel Workers' Union. Isn't there some means of closing up those pest holes and forcing decency upon hotel proprietors and managers.

Answer: No. There is no legislation applicable to hotel kitchens. Hotels are above the law. The Board of Health is not concerned with the things which happen below the street floor. Factory laws, labor laws * * *. No mention is made in them of hotel kitchens. Our sensational dotard Gaynor may declare a tea dance dangerous for the community, but the sanctity of the kitchens shall not be violated.

When supplied with damaging evidence of the foul conditions prevailing in a leading Albany Hotel, the State Commissioner of Health declared that his department had no power to interfere. Things and persons lose their usual identity or definition when they are located in hotels or restaurants.

Until the Attorney General of Massachusetts rendered an opinion, according to which men working in kitchens may be assimilated to ordinary laborers, as far as the duration of working hours is concerned, kitchen workers were not considered as workers in the State of Massachusetts.

In Washington, D. C., where there is no factory inspection law, an attempt was made to compel hotels to have their kitchens above the ground. The bill was killed in committee.

The Chicago Bakery ordinance goes so far as to specify that a bake shop located in a hotel is not a bakeshop.

The Factory Investigating Commission, presided by Senator Robert F. Wagner, exposed the foulness of bakeshops, the dangerous conditions prevailing in chemical factories, over-crowding in manufacturing lofts, etc., and drafted a few little bills. Those bills are relative to fire drills, sprinklers, fire escapes, limitation of number of occupants, unclean factories, regulation of factories, washing facilities, water closets, ventilation, work done in cellars, seats for women, etc. Not one of the improvements suggested is to be applied to hotels and restaurants.

When is a factory not a factory. When located in a hotel. When is a basement bakery not a basement bakery. When located in a hotel basement. When is candy not candy, ice cream not ice cream. When prepared in a hotel.

Men working in hotels are not working men. Women working in hotels are not working women. No law could prevent a hotel keeper from employing children of five, or working them twenty hours a day.

At the time of the cooks' strike the public assumed that the men only struck for a little more pay. There was another side to the strike which the papers overlooked.

The cooks, or most of them, are foreigners, but not all deserve the adjective which the native generally affixes to the word foreigner and of which "ignorant" is the most courteous. They realize that the conditions under which they work are inexcusable, that their employment is dangerous for their health and, incidentally, for the public's health. They are generally satisfied with their salaries, and always ready to accept a lower salary, when to that lower salary corresponds a lower temperature in the kitchen. I was talking yesterday to a man who is working at the Mills Hotel for $10. a week less than he received at the Belmont. "I want to live a few years more," he said, "and I know the consequences of heat prostrations before the range."

Legislators might in a few days remedy conditions, which labor troubles will eventually remedy in a few years at an untold cost to the public. But legislators seem to have abdicated their power to introduce reforms in favor of muckrakers and labor agitators.

In the meantime let us mention that the most up-to-date hospital in New York City, the Polyclinic Hospital, housed in a skyscraper, has its kitchen on the top floor. Architects and builders with an ounce of brains might have thought before this of such a combination and placed the worst source of odors, smoke and steam, where the odors smoke and steam, could be most easily allowed to escape into the atmosphere.

How many strikes, disorderly scenes and jail sentences, how much sabotage will it take to remove hotel kitchens from basements to top floors.

SANITARY PREPARATION AND HANDLING OF FOODS.

ADDRESS DELIVERED BY JAMES FOUST, DAIRY AND FOOD COMMISSIONER, AT THE FOURTH ANNUAL CONVENTION OF THE PENNSYLVANIA ASSOCIATION OF MASTER BAKERS, LANCASTER, PENNSYLVANIA.

Mr. President and Members of the Master Bakers' Association of Pennsylvania:

It gives me pleasure to meet you here today in response to the courteous invitation of your president. I shall, however, occupy but a few moments of your valuable time.

Too often the Dairy and Food Commissioner is regarded as a policeman eager to find some one to arrest. Hence, his coming tends to arouse the same feeling of distrust among food dealers that the street Arabs feel toward the officer of the law, at whose approach they scatter, with the shout, "Run, the cop is coming." Properly viewed, however, the work of the Commissioner is better performed when, by square, open dealing, consultation and persuasion, he secures a cordial observance of the law, than when, by wholesale prosecutions, he merely brings to punishment such law breakers as he can catch in the act. In other words, his success in the performance of his duties is to be measured by the improvement he secures in the purity of commercial foods and in the honesty of their labeling, rather than by the amount of the fines he collects.

It is, therefore, with pleasure that I meet you as an organized body of men who are performing a most important service for the people of this great Commonwealth. For I am thus enabled to reach in a few moments a very large fraction of the bread and pastry makers of Pennsylvania, including probably all the leaders in this business.

As producers and dealers, you are met to discuss the problem of the baker's art and of the food seller's business. I judge that, like business men in other branches of the producing, manufacturing and distributing trades, you are each concerned primarily in being able to measure your success by a yearly increasing custom and growing bank balances. But you will fall far short of your opportunities and responsibilities, if you confine your attention to these elements of your affairs, and think too little of the quality of your wares and of your service to the public dependent upon you. Upon your skill and labor tens of thousands depend for the staff of life. According as you are careful and intelligent in the selection and use of your materials, the health of the people will be benefited or injured. To society the quality of your service is the important thing, not the profits you accumulate for your personal benefit.

The enforcement of the food laws of this and other states and of the nation, has greatly improved the quality of the raw materials you use. Bleached flour has been banished; the lard, butter and oleo you buy have been freed from adulteration; your spices are no longer loaded with worthless impurities; harmful dyes have been excluded; flavoring extracts standardized; fruit preparations more truthfully represented on their labels; and we are doing our best to protect you against bad eggs.

The examinations we have made of your products show few instances of the kinds of adulteration that occasioned the numerous bread adulteration laws of the Middle Ages. Now and then, cases appear in which yellow dyes are used instead of eggs, mineral colors instead of chocolate coatings, and chemically preserved pie filling instead of pure fruit; but these cases represent only a small portion of your output. The question of the weight of the loaf remains of general interest. But most important to the public mind at the present time is the sanitary quality of your wares. While the food laws of Pennsylvania impose upon me no responsibility of prescribing in detail the construction and sanitation of bake-shops, they do require me to be vigilant that foods contaminated by dust, flies and vermin are not sold for human food, and, in the performance of this duty, I have been compelled to prosecute a number whose gross negligence in the protection of their wares from such sources of contamination has resulted in their products becoming unfit to eat. I desire to say that, while I shall instruct my agents to be constantly on the lookout for such cases of gross negligence, it will be highly gratifying if all members of your trade, including those connected with your association and all you can helpfully influence, shall become so careful in this matter that my agents shall find nothing of the sort requiring punishment for the protection of the public.

I have just said that the Pennsylvania laws are general rather than specific in relation to the sanitary condition of bake-shops; but this State may at any time follow the lead of other States that have enacted very stringent laws upon this subject. Why should you not, therefore, prepare fully to meet the probable requirements of such laws? And why should you not, as an organization, take steps to influence all in the trade to proper standards of construction and cleanliness? You who have been sufficiently progressive to form such an organization as this and to attend its meetings, have probably been also alert to meet the tastes and demands of your customers upon sanitary matters. You may need no action of this Association in the adoption of set standards to guide your operations; but others do; and there can be no doubt that such standards adopted by you will go far toward establishing the confidence of the public in the cleanliness of your factories and store-rooms, and will bring you many customers who are now kept away by uncomfortable doubts upon these matters.

Furthermore, if you adopt good, practical standards, they will undoubtedly form the basis of any legislation that may come in the future, and viewed from the standpoint of the advertiser, a voluntary progressive movement made by the trade itself will be far more valuable in giving confidence to the doubtful customer, than a readjustment made only under the compulsion of the law, and apparently with reluctance. Compulsory observances it is human to avoid whenever possible, and the customer knows this full well. Many of you no doubt will recall the reply of the Irishman to an acquaintance, who said,

"Pat, I hear you've lost your wife."

"Yis, sor."

"Was she resigned, Pat?"

"Resigned, is it! Resigned! She had to be!"

This subject is a fitting one for the consideration of an able committee, and the public would highly approve your early undertaking of an organized study of the matter. I think I need not add that I would gladly render you any assistance in my power.

WILL ANY MILK DO?

H. W. CONN, IN HARPER'S WEEKLY.

The conditions of the milk industry have hitherto been such as to put a premium upon poor quality and carelessness in production. Most articles of commerce are bought and sold according to their quality, and the public realizes that a higher price must be paid for a good than for a bad product. Unfortunately this has not been the case of the most widely used article of food. Milk, provided it comes up to a certain low standard, set by law, has commonly been sold as milk of the same quality, whether it be good or bad, clean or dirty. Leaving out of consideration the excessively expensive "certified milk," all other grades of milk have been commonly sold on the same market at the same price, irrespective of quality, upon the tacit feeling that all kinds of true milk are essentially of the same value, a belief that is, however, emphatically wrong.

The results of this method of marketing milk have been the introduction of certain gigantic evils in our communities which we have been vainly trying to meet by law. Those who have made a study of milk have learned that the milk offered for sale on the market ranges all the way from grades that constitute the best, safest, and almost the cheapest food, down to grades that are absolutely deadly in their effect upon the consumer; from that which is clean and sweet to that which contains large amounts of cow manure; from that which forms a rich, wholesome food to that which is largely adulterated with water and filled with poisonous preservatives. But in spite of this large range in value all these have been placed upon the market simply as milk, and sold at one level price. This of course results frequently in the cheating of the purchaser. But a worse effect than this is the inevitable result that such a condition places an irresistible temptation before those producing and handling milk. Since their receipts are dependent upon the quantity and not upon the quality of the milk they sell, the stimulus that is placed upon them is to produce and sell as large a quantity as possible, rather than as good a quality as possible. Cheap methods of producing milk in large quantities have come to the front, and the popular breed of cows has become the one that produces the largest quantity of milk, which means also the poorest quality. The use of this breed is thus a legal method of diluting milk with water, and the breed of cow that thus dilutes her own milk has become the most popular one. Thus payment for quantity and not for quality has everywhere had the effect of reducing the grade of milk, of cheapening the methods of production, and of increasing the quantity at the expense of quality. As a consequence it has been found necessary to pass laws that set a minimum standard of milk that can be sold, and this standard has a tendency to be set at the lowest grade that is produced by the cow that gives the largest quantity and hence the lowest quality.

It has become sadly proved in recent years that while milk may be the cheapest food it is sometimes the most dangerous, the danger always being due to foreign substances getting into the milk. The many epidemics of typhoid fever, scarlet fever, and diphtheria, the thousands of cases of tuberculosis, infectious sore throats, and diarrhoeal trouble that have been traced to the miscellaneous milk supply have proved the need of guarding this product. It is a demonstrated fact, no longer a theory, that tens of thousands of children lose their lives yearly from the drinking of milk that is sold on our markets. These dangers are all due to the contamination of milk with something from without and are the result of carelessness in handling this product. The primal facts are that carelessly produced, dirty milk is a menace to the health of every child in a city, and that the general custom of paying for milk by quantity rather than by quality inevitably results in carelessness that is sure to be attendant upon the desire to produce the largest quantity of milk irrespective of quality, at the lowest price.

Public health authorities having realized that many of the evils connected with the milk supply are due to a lack of stimulus to produce quality, have started a campaign to strike at the root of the problem. It is a very difficult and some think an impossible one, due largely to the fact that milk is sold and used so quickly. But at all events some steps in the grading of milk are being taken. A National Commission of Milk Standards has recently strongly advocated that milk should be bought and sold according to certain grades; and already some of our cities, notably New York, have started to introduce the grading of milk in actual practice. Besides the high priced "certified milk" three grades have been recognized.

Probably the chief obstacle in the way of this important reform lies at the customer's end of the problem. It will be perfectly feasible to bring the producers and dealers into line with this change if only the public can be educated to realize its meaning and necessity. Unfortunately the public at large still believes that "milk is milk," and it is quite unwilling to pay more for good milk than for poor milk, providing the latter is properly white and shows a cream line. This is sometimes due to domestic conditions; and it occasionally happens that the very doctors who advocate the pure milk campaign pay no attention to the milk bought in their own households, leaving this to the housekeeper or servants. Under these conditions progress is slow. The servants know or care nothing of cleanliness or quality, and only think of the price; and if the intelligent people refuse to "interfere with domestic affairs" it is difficult to make progress. It is still unusual to find educated people willing to pay a cent more a quart for good milk when they find they can get an ordinary kind cheaper. If the public can only be brought to appreciate the fact that it is cheaper to pay a little extra for good quality than to pay less for a poorer grade of milk a great reform can be rapidly brought about. The question whether the milk supply can be generally improved depends thus upon the consumer. The New York committee is doing a great work in trying to distribute this information as widely as possible, and is thus becoming one of the efficient aids toward the improvement of the public health. The present phase of the campaign to guard the milk supply is thus an attempt to put this product upon the same basis as other food products, and, by giving a premium of a higher price upon milk of high grade, thus stimulate a desire on the part of the producer to produce quality and not quantity alone. This reform will come just as soon as the public is ready for it, and that will be just as soon as the consumer is ready to pay for quality.

EVAPORATING FRUITS.

The drying or evaporating of fruit is an interesting process, although the average man has little conception of the methods which are used. It is imperative in drying fruits that the flavor be kept and great care is exercised in this respect. The process is an inexpensive and very simple one. It is work performed on the farm, or in the orchards, or nearby, usually by the orchardists themselves. It is necessary to have a sulphuring oven, which is constructed sufficiently large to admit trays two feet by four feet in dimensions, and as high as would be necessary or desirable. These sulphuring ovens are for giving the fruit a sulphur bath for the purpose of preserving the color and flavor and hindering the dry fruit from becoming wormy after packing.

Should the fall rains or lateness of the season make it impractical to dry from the wind current and the sun's rays, the artificial evaporators are quite cheap and convenient and in extensive use in northern California and Oregon. Evaporators are constructed with several compartments, each one almost identical with the sulphuring oven, but made into a multitude of compartments divided by partitions and with a large vent at the top. The trays are removed from the sulphuring oven and placed in the evaporator. Warm air currents are permitted to pass up through the trays, the damp air passing out through the large vent at the top. The drying is effected in a much more rapid manner by this artificial process than by out-of-door drying and gives better results as a whole. The evaporator may be constructed in the most economical way, and a small one should not cost to exceed $100 to $150, or even less. It may be constructed of cheap lumber with a covering of building paper, asbestos sheeting or some similar material, sufficient to hold the warmth and be clean. In like manner the sulphuring oven may be made of material on the farm, or in the orchards, but it is generally constructed of one layer of brick with a closed top covering to retain the sulphur fumes. The trays are made of strips of wood one inch by two inches, and made into frames two feet by three feet and wire tacked on the bottom of the frame making a complete tray.

The fruit is gathered ripe from the trees, cut into halves, seeds removed, and the halves laid into the trays with the cup up, or rind down, until the tray is covered with a single layer of the fruit. In like manner another tray and another and so on are thus supplied until the sulphuring oven lids are filled, when a pot containing a sufficient quantity of sulphur is placed beneath the whole and lighted, and the door closed, making the oven air tight, and permitted to remain closed until the fruit is given a time sulphuring according to the character and variety of the fruit. The sulphuring, however, in no way dries the fruit. After the sulphuring bath the trays are taken from the oven and distributed about in the sun to dry. The purpose of the sulphuring is two-fold: that of preserving the color and flavor of the fruit and to hinder it being bothered by the flies while drying in the open air. This mode has been investigated and approved by the government pure food experts.

IMPORTANCE OF SMALL BILLS.

Too many retail grocers, remarks the Retailers' Journal, slight the collecting of small bills as unimportant and fruitless of profit. Some there are who fear to incur the displeasure of a customer over a matter of fifty cents or a dollar, while others fail to see the wisdom of "wasting a lot of valuable time and energy" running after so insignificant a sum. Aside from the fact that a couple of such accounts taken on each week for a year would easily run into an amount approximating one hundred dollars, which is not very insignificant.

there is a more vital reason why an iron-clad rule should govern all collections all the time, small as well as large. Of course large bills are watched pretty closely by all dealers—it is the small ones which are overlooked.

Have you ever noticed the large percentage of people who will stay from your store because they are in your debt to the amount of fifty cents or a dollar? There is no good reason why they should do so, but it is, nevertheless, a fact that a certain class of customers will invariably do so. So that to come quickly to the point, it is not so much through his failure to collect the small bill that the retail grocer experiences his most serious loss, but in the loss of a customer, who fails to return, because of the slight indebtedness, goes elsewhere to spend his cash.

Retailers should have a distinct understanding with all applicants that on a certain date, that date to be determined and agreed upon by them at the time of application, their bill must be settled, regardless of the amount. And again there are retailers who are effective collectors but who lack other indispensable qualifications for success, such as system and cleanliness in their place of business, knowing how to deal with people and so on.

ANOTHER WAY TO KILL THE TYPHOID FLY.

In old days, says the Youth's Companion, back in the country, before they knew anything about the "flying squadron of disease," and the only "swatter" was a folded newspaper, tidy housekeepers had a method of dealing with flies that may well be revived.

The weapon was a tumbler half or two-thirds full of hot suds; and tradition has it that common yellow soap is the best kind to use. In the morning, while the flies still clung to the ceiling, the housekeeper got on a chair or table, held the glass three or four inches below the enemy, and then quietly lifted it until the rim enclosed the victim, which promptly dropped off into the suds.

Apparently the flies like the warmth; they almost never take flight. It is more than likely, too, that they do not see the glass. You can go over a whole ceiling in a surprisingly short time, and pick off every fly on it. Making way with one fly in this manner does not startle the rest and keep the hunter waiting until they settle down again. Altogether, it is by far the neatest and quickest method of getting flies at rest on the ceiling.

The same method, slightly modified, used to be employed for flies on the wing. The tumbler of hot suds was covered with a sheet of paper which had a hole in the middle as large as your finger, with molasses smeared around it on the under side. The sweet attracted the flies and delivered them into the suds. The best way to use this trap is to darken a room by closing all the openings to light except the lower portion of one window. Set the trap on the sill of that window. Unless drawn away by an attractive smell, flies in a dark room always go toward the light. That, naturally, brings them then the sooner into the sphere of influence of the molasses and a death in the ocean wave.

MODERN HEN AN EGG LAYING MACHINE.

The story of the hen as revealed in census statistics is like that of a man who began life as an office boy and ultimately became head of a giant corporation. She rivals the dairy cow in importance, says the New York Sun:

Census figures partly explain the reason. The total value of the poultry products in 1909 was $509,000,000 an increase of 81 per cent. in ten years. But the census bureau takes pains to explain that the figures were incomplete and the valuation an underestimate. Semi-official and private estimates have placed the total value for 1912 at upward of $800,000,000 and this undoubtedly is a fair approximation.

A comparison of this output with the valuation placed on the different crops by the Department of Agriculture will show the hen in no insignificant light. The hay crop is worth only seven per cent. more. The country is proud of the big wheat crop, yet biddy can cackle in derision at the wheat, rye and potatoes combined for all of them together are worth only $791,000,000. Weigh the oats, barley, buckwheat, tobacco, rice and flaxseed against her, and it still would be necessary to throw in the silver mined last year to balance the scales.

Some railroads have difficulty in earning their dividend requirements while others have never paid any. Yet this willing little worker, the hen, could pay a five per cent. dividend on the net capitalization of all the railroads of the country and still have enough left to displace her aluminum leg bands with anklets made from gold mined in the United States last year. Or if she fancied gold nest eggs in seven months time she could purchase the world's production of gold for the whole year.

Scientific methods have relieved the hen from all domestic duties. She is not even expected once to look into the nursery to see how the broilers are coming on. She is now an animated egg machine. Careful breeding and better understanding how to manage her have increased the egg output of poultry plants from an average of 100 eggs per year to 175 and even in some instances to 200 per annum, while the time required for maturing a bird or the table has been materially shortened.

Agricultural schools are giving attention to the subject from hatching the chick to marketing the product. The poultry industry is passing into the hands of trained experts who make it a science and it is yielding them large returns. Some day when swords are beaten into blades for reapers the hen will take the place of that unproductive emblem of noisy patriotism, the eagle.

A FRESH EGG ISN'T ALWAYS A GOOD EGG.

It comes as a surprise to a great many consumers of eggs to learn that an absolutely fresh egg is not necessarily a good egg and that on the contrary it may be a very bad egg, not fit to grace the table as food, remarks the New York Sun. For time out of memory the prime requisite of an egg has been that it be fresh. This has been emphasized by dealers for years who in the east get a premium for eggs "direct from the farm" and in the west with the label "ranch eggs." But while poultry culture has been making progress within the last few years it has been established that an egg is not necessarily good just because it happens to be fresh. Poultrymen who have made a scientific study of their business are now endeavoring to impress upon the public that there are other requisites than freshness to a real good egg.

There are three prime requisites to an egg than can go to the table unquestioned and unchallenged. It must be sterile, sanitary and fresh. To know that the eggs you buy comply with these requirements you have to know something about their source and the conditions under which they are laid.

Sterility is one of the chief points of a really good egg. No one who is discriminating wants to eat an egg that has been fertilized. The germ is repulsive to the taste. It is a fact that most of the eggs purchased on the general market as fresh, if placed in an incubator before they were too old would hatch out chicks. Yet these eggs are sold daily by grocers and dealers who obtain the product from farms where poultry raising is merely a side issue and conducted without any special attention to the hens. The fertility is the result of failure to segregate the sexes. On farms where chickens are a by-product and are allowed to have the run of the place this condition exists, and it is also a notable fact that such farms still supply the most of the eggs consumed in this country.

Sanitation is equally important. An egg may be absolutely fresh, warm in fact from the heat of the hen's body, and still not be good or taste good if the bird that laid it has been improperly fed. Onions and some other vegetables when fed to a hen will impart a taste and odor to an egg. Eggs coming from hens that have impure or polluted water, or which get such water while roaming about a farm are unsanitary. Birds housed in dark, damp or draughty house become debilitated, and although they may continue to lay fairly well their eggs are not good for food, any more than is the meat that comes from tubercular cows. It is eggs of this kind coming from places where no special attention is paid to the chickens other than to collect the eggs every day that in many cases are bought up during the summer, when the prices are down and put in cold storage. Unscrupulous dealers go still further and often sell such eggs which have been bought out of cold storage as "fresh" or "newly laid."

Freshness is something that every one desires in an egg. Eggs that reach the consumer within twenty-four hours, or soon thereafter after being laid and are sterile and sanitary, represent the acme of achievement by the hen. The general public has to depend on the honesty of dealers to insure getting the best eggs unless one has personal knowledge of some farm or poultry plant where eggs are a specialty, and fortunately the majority of dealers are reliable.

Progress in poultry culture is rapidly changing the conditions under which eggs are being produced. This is due to men who have made a specialty of poultry and eggs on farms that are poultry farms and nothing else. On these places hens are separated from the male birds, housed and fed properly and the eggs shipped to market within a few hours after being laid. Such eggs deserve the premium prices which they command and are cheap at the price when one considers the average egg.

BIG DECREASE IN NUMBER OF CATTLE.

Many items of interest are to be found in the report of the Bureau of Animal Industry which has been recently issued. The figures show that prevailing prices for beef cattle are the highest known. Quotations for live meat animals for 1912 are as follows: Cattle, $11.25; calves, $12; hogs, $9.42½; lambs, $10.60.

The total number of animals on the farms of this country the past year was 57,959,000, a decrease within five years of 14,575,000. During the period from 1900 to 1910 there was a decrease in the number of cattle of 5,915,000. In 1907 the total number of cattle was 73,534,-

000. But from that time on a general decrease has been noted. The loss has for the most part been in beef cattle, the number of milk cows remaining practically unchanged.

This decrease in the number of beef cattle has been one of the potent reasons for the present unusual prices. Americans have outstripped their English cousins in the matter of meat consumption, for available figures show that the American is the greatest meat eater on earth. From the figures compiled by the bureau the annual per capita consumption of meat is 162 pounds of which 80 pounds are beef. This is 40 pounds more than the per capita consumption of Germany or France, and 25 pounds more than the consumption of England.

Inspection work of the bureau was conducted in 4,940 establishments in 259 cities and towns. There were inspected at the time of slaughter more than 59,000,000 animals. There were condemned in post mortem inspection nearly 204,000 animals, and two-thirds of a million parts of carcasses. In addition there were condemned nearly 20,000,000 pounds of meat and meat products that had become unfit for consumption after original inspection. The inspected animals consisted of about 60 per cent. of the entire slaughter of the United States. Of the remaining 40 per cent. 20 was killed on farms and 20 by local butchers.

FIGURES ON THE COST OF LIVING.

The following is taken from an article appearing in a recent issue of the Inland Grocer:

This country is at the present time experiencing a period of unprecedented prosperity, a state of affairs which has existed for several years past. Without regard for political affiliation, it must be admitted that the United States has been in a most prosperous during the four years of the closing administration. The hum of the factory has whirled unceasingly; the earth has produced crops greater than ever before in the history of the country. The workingman has had a season of steady work and prosperity which has not been his portion in many years.

All of these conditions tend to advance prices. Whenever a nation is in a prosperous condition the prices of commodities will have a tendency to advance. Oats, corn, wheat, hay, hogs, cattle and articles of all kinds have had a tendency to advance with advancing prosperity. The farmer asks the highest price that he can possibly get, and in so doing he is merely pursuing the sociological principle which declares that each individual strives to secure the greatest gain for the least sacrifice.

Below is presented a table of comparative prices of staple articles for a period of years ranging from 1860 to 1912. It is to be noted that the articles which have been selected are all staple articles, which are sold every day. These statistics have not been devised by some clever mathematician, who has carefully eliminated every article which has advanced in price. The list of articles was chosen at random, with the purpose, however, of including the most common food stuffs.

A Comparison of Years.

The list of prices given under the years below is not guesswork. The market prices were obtained from the Inquirer, and allowing for the difference between the market and retail prices the following estimates have been made—not guessed.

TUBERCULOSIS AND CITY MILK SUPPLY.

The following article has been prepared by Professor B. F. Hammer, of Iowa State College:

Although tuberculosis has been known since ancient times it was not until 1865 that its infectiousness was demonstrated. The organism responsible for this disease was discovered in 1882 by R. Koch, who at that time believed that the same organism was the cause of the disease in man and the lower animals. In work reported in 1898 T. Smith, showed that there are differences between the organisms coming from cases in man and those coming from cases of the disease of cattle, and established the fact that there are two types of the tubercle bacillus—the human and the bovine. With Smith's work as the basis for distinguishing the organisms, Koch investigated the importance of the bovine type in human tuberculosis and in 1901 came to the conclusion that it is of little danger to man. Because of the weight carried by Koch's statement as a result of the prominence of the man and because it was contrary to the belief of many of the persons interested this question has been extensively studied since that time.

The customary method is to isolate the organism from cases of tuberculosis in man by the use of guinea pigs and then to study its virulence for rabbits as well as its growth on culture media. Such an investigation makes it possible to determine whether or not the organism belongs to the bovine type. Park and Krumweide had investigated 478 unselected cases of human tuberculosis in New York City and in 477 of these only one type of the organism was found. In persons over sixteen years of age the bovine type was found in one case out of 306. In children between the age of 5 and 16 years, 9 cases out of 55, or 16.36 per cent. showed the bovine organism while in children under 5 years 25 out of 116, or 21.55 per cent. showed this type. Of the 477 cases 7.34 per cent. showed the bovine type.

More recently these same investigators have tabulated all the cases that have been studied in this manner both in the United States and abroad. Their table records 1,500 cases in which only one type of the tubercle bacillus was isolated, and of this number 9.13 per cent. showed the bovine type.

It can accordingly be said that we are now certain that the bovine type of tubercle bacillus is of considerable importance in human tuberculosis. In the United States the deaths due to tuberculosis in 1910 are estimated at 150,000. If the percentage found by Park and Krumweide in New York City is applicable to the whole country then during 1910 11,000 deaths were caused by the bovine type of the tubercle bacillus.

It is recognized that many of the persons infected with the bovine type must have been infected in other ways than by contact with cattle and suspicion has naturally fallen on dairy products and particularly on milk, because the bovine organism is found in such a large percentage of the cases of tuberculosis in children. This has led to the examination of many samples of milk for the tubercle bacillus.

The presence of the tubercle bacillus in milk results in its occurrence in butter, cheese and in other milk derivatives. The pasteurization of cream for butter making is of value from a hygienic standpoint as, if properly done, it results in the destruction of this organism. It is generally considered that the tubercle bacillus does not multiply in milk, and the principle reason for this is that the temperature at which milk is usually held is unfavorable to its growth. The reduction in temperature does not result in the immediate death of the organism. Schroeder and Cotton have shown that living tubercle bacilli will retain their infective properties for at least 160 days in salted butter kept in a cellar and more recently it has been proven that butter containing this organism will infect guinea pigs after being stored six months at  $-10$  degrees F. with infected cheese held at 33 degrees living tubercle bacilli have been demonstrated after 261 days.

Cows having tuberculosis of the udder, in a big percentage of the cases, show tubercle bacilli in milk drawn from them and it is undoubtedly cows of this class that are the most dangerous from the standpoint of human health. From the work that has been done, it seems probable that tuberculous cows with normal udders seldom secrete tubercle bacilli with the milk if the infection is localized. It is now known, however, that tubercle bacilli will pass through the digestive tract of cattle and appear alive and virulent in the feces. Organisms leaving the body of a tuberculous cow in this manner are dangerous because of the small bits of manure that get into the milk under ordinary conditions of milking. Many of the bacteria carried by the manure are scattered through the milk and no amount of straining will remove them. It is very probable that many of the samples of milk that contain tubercle bacilli are infected by the manure from tuberculous cows.

Italian Ball Butter.

From Forest and Stream.

The essential thing in camp life is to take along the essential things that have many uses. Italian military officers, guides mountaineers, tourists, motoring parties, picnickers and the like, recognize this when they carry the ball butter, which is found in the Italian butter and cheese trades. This is pure, unsalted butter, put in ball form, in an envelop of pure hard cheese. The butter may thus be preserved sweet for years. It is totally different, and bears no comparison whatsoever, to the stuff called ghee butter, which the much traveled reader may have come across in the Ganges region, and overland to the Indus, Euphrates-Tigris, and Bosphorus—made by melting and boiling pure, fresh butter (the sin of the thing!), thus completely driving off its virgin, fresh taste, so that upon cooling it resolves into a semigranular mass like overboiled mutton or beef fat will do, and it is retailed in Oriental commerce with an almost ever-present partly rancid taste.

Every part of the ball butter is edible—both butter and its protecting envelope of pure cheese. It is cleanly to handle, can be carried loose in the pocket, although, of course, a paper covering of any sort is better to prevent—especially in warm weather—possibly staining from the cheese envelope, as this cheese contains its natural cream-fat intact. There is no bulk of any metal container to carry around, as with our preserved salt butter.

In an emergency—for an extemporized night light in a mountain shack or tent—the Italian camper sticks one of the longish wax vestas (diminutive candle-matches) into an open ball, and, if required it will burn all night or more. Stick in two or three of the little match candles, and a small tin bowl of water (enough for one's coffee can be brought to a heat sufficient for the beverage in a score or so of minutes. Rather long to wait, but it's better than nothing, at a shift. If doing other trifling chores in the meantime, the waiting seems to be an entirely negligible factor. I have seen this done a score of years ago along the Italian Riviera, and noticed how, as soon as the water showed the first sign of heating up by a slight steam arising, the requisite ground coffee was dropped atop the water. This spread out at once over its entire surface, kept the heat of the water in, and thus hastened what invariably proved to be a cup of coffee of superb relish. If the vessel is kept covered by a sheet of glass, mica, card, piece of board or anything handy for the purpose, it is surprising what a little factor like a couple of extemporized night lights can do in heating up the water.

When empty, the ball butter cheese-covering can be used as a make-shift cup, and if dried, it becomes horn-like, and will stand boiling hot coffee or tea, and only slightly soften with the heat. Drained and dried after each use. It will last for months; and the thrifty Italian camp cook will eventually consign it to the soup pot, where prolonged boiling gradually emulsifies it into enriching the evening soup.

POINTERS FOR DAIRYMEN.

1. Observe and enforce cleanliness about the cattle, their attendants, the stable, the dairy and all utensils.
2. A person suffering from any disease or who has been exposed to a contagious disease, must remain away from the cows and milk. Keep dairy cattle in a room or building by themselves.
3. Stables should be well ventilated, lighted and drained; should have tight floors and walls be plainly constructed. Keep the stable and dairy room in good condition, and then insist that the dairy, factory, or place where the milk goes, be kept equally well.
4. Never use musty or dirty litter and allow no strong smelling material in the stable for any length of time.

5. Store the manure under cover outside the cow stable and remove it to a distance as often as practicable.
6. Whitewash the stable twice a year; use land pasture in the manure gutters daily, use no dry, dusty feed just previous to the milking. If fodder is dusty sprinkle it before it is fed.
7. Do not move the cows faster than a comfortable walk while on the way to the place of milking or feeding.
8. Never allow the cows to become excited by hard driving, abuse, loud talking or unnecessary disturbance. Do not expose them to cold or storms. Do not change the feed suddenly.
9. Feed liberally and use only fresh palatable foods; in no case should decomposed or moldy material be used. Provide water in abundance, easy of access and always pure and fresh but not too cold.
10. Clean the entire body of the cow daily. If hair in the region of the udder is not easily kept clean it should be clipped.
11. Do not use the milk within five days after calving.
12. Milking—The milker should be clean in all respects; he should not use tobacco; he should wash and dry his hands just before milking. The milker should wear a clean suit, used only when milking and kept in a clean place at other times.
13. Brush the udder and surrounding parts just before milking and wipe them with a clean damp cloth or sponge.
14. Milk quietly, quickly, cleanly and thoroughly.
15. Cows do not like unnecessary noise or delay; commence milking at exactly the same hour every morning and evening, and milk the cows in the same order.
16. Throw away (but not on the floor; better in the gutter) the first few streams from each teat; this milk is watery and of little value, but it may injure the rest.
17. If in any milking a part of the milk is bloody or stringy or unnatural in appearance, the whole mess should be rejected.
18. Milk with dry hands; never allow the hands to come in contact with the milk.
19. Do not allow dogs, cats or loafers to be around at milking time. If any accident occurs by which a pail of milk becomes dirty, do not try to remedy it by straining, but reject all this milk and rinse the pail.
20. Remove the milk from every cow at once from the stable to a cool dry room where the air is pure and sweet. Do not allow cans to remain in the stable while they are being filled.

MAKE YOUR POULTRY PAY.

Professor W. E. Vaplon contributes the following suggestions in a recent issue of the Colorado Dairyman:

Don't be carried away by the claims of originators and promoters of every new breed; stick to your own if it fulfills market requirements.

Some breeds are better qualified than others for certain purposes and conditions.

Build your flock by elimination. Cut out the loafers. Don't keep hens that have outlived their usefulness. Sell all cockerels and inferior pullets at frying size; by keeping them longer you gain quantity but obtain a lower price.

Corn, wheat and oats, vegetables, alfalfa and milk provide a balanced ration. Where corn is the principal feed, it will pay to buy bran and alfalfa meal to balance up. Corn alone is too concentrated and fattening. Try to furnish succulent vegetables during the winter months. Small potatoes, boiled, mixed with bran are a cheap food. It is some trouble to give poultry good care during the winter, but it pays.

Laying food, moulting food, developing food, growing food, are all found in the things mentioned, bran, shorts, and ground oats included.

We do not need a utility breed; plenty of the standard varieties are built on the performance lines.

Join a poultry association; enter the egg and carcass contests and make them educational.

Dirty eggs, little eggs, misshapen eggs, eat them; sending them to market will never create a demand for your products; people in the cities buy things because they look good. The same applies to carcasses.

No matter how glutted the market is with poultry products, there is never enough fancy stock to supply the demand, but the goods must look good and prove to be good.

Vermin, filth crowding and cold are the worst enemies of chicks. Bar these and only those hatched weak will die. There is no excuse for losing any chicks that are born strong and lively.

Is there room in the poultry business? Yes, until all the eggs hatch and all the chicks live and all prove to be pullets and all pullets lay winter eggs in abundance. Then there will be nothing in it, but there is no likelihood that these problems will soon be solved.

But go into the poultry business slow and easy. Consider soil, location as regards markets, market requirements, feed supply and price, price of land and building materials, method of management, very seriously. Then grow into the business only as fast as your knowledge and trade grows.

VEGETABLE MILK.

FROM THE LITERARY DIGEST.

Milk is not a chemical compound, but an emulsion; that is, a mass of tiny globules of fat floating in a liquid. There is no impossibility therefore, in imitating it; and it has, in fact, been imitated with more or less success, vegetable products having been mostly used for the purpose. The best known of these "soy milk," made from a Chinese bean, has been long known—witness Edward Lear's limerick about the man "who lived on warm brandy and soy." Children used to think that "soy" was one of Lear's nonsense words, like his "runcible spoon"; but it is now almost as common a food in Germany as it is in China. Says Dr. A. de Neuville, in an article on the "New Artificial Foods," contributed to La Revue Paris.

"Milk is a secretion of the mammary glands, containing water, albuminoids, fatty bodies, lactose, and mineral salts. Its very composition has made us think that it would not be possible to offer for consumption an article of food having the same elements as natural milk. It is, in fact, beyond doubt that the albuminoid or proteid substances found in the latter differ from those that enter into the constitution of plants; by modifying these, take from them their proteids and obtain the same results as those reached by nature. Soy has been utilized to this end.

"This leguminous plant, well known in the warm regions of Asia, is called by scientists soya hispida and by the vulgar the "Chinese pea." Its oil is rich in nitrogen and in fatty matter. Made into flour, it serves to make a bread that is prescribed for diabetes.

"Like other legumes of the same family soy has pods that are shelled to extract the beans, which after undergoing a process that is still kept secret, yield a synthetic milk, or more exactly a chemical product having the same nutritive effect as natural milk.

"The invention was introduced into Germany and France almost at the same time. The parts of the plant are broken up mechanically, then chemically triturated and reduced to a lactescent substance that is cheaper than the product of the cow and may replace it perfectly.

"If we cannot make six blades of grass grow where one grew before, we can get six times as much milk from the same land by plowing the grass under and planting it to soy beans. The old-time milk too has its dangers, amply told in health reports, from which the bean product may be kept free by the use of ordinary modern sanitary methods. In the words of the writer:

"The economy realized is considerable. A cow requires nearly an acre of pasturage. She turns only fifty-three per cent. of it into effective nutriment, and about five per cent. into milk. * * * * *

Two milkings a day give an average of fifteen quarts, varying with the breed. Soy grown on a field of one-sixth of an acre yields the same quantity of artificial milk. The expense is far less. * * * *

"This soy milk presents other advantages over natural milk. It is not exposed to contact with impurities, as often happens in farm and stable dairies * * * * Besides cows are not exempt from bacillary affections, and it has been proved that the pathogenic germs of their milk exist in the lacteal glands themselves. Artificial milk is not exposed to these dangers. It is made with an apparatus kept so scrupulously clean that there can be no question of microbial infection.

"In China and Japan, the soy has been abundantly cultivated since the earliest times. The Japanese make of it a kind of mush, mixed with rice. This is a very nourishing food, but of an oily taste which makes it disagreeable to Europeans. Made into milk the soy has none of these disagreeable qualities. It is digestible, pleasant to the palate, and leaves no taste in the mouth. Being a complete food, like natural milk, it is suited to children and invalids and to all who are following a diet."

But soy milk is still soy, and the physiological chemists have hoped to produce a milk substitute that shall not be identified with any particular plant product, or at any rate shall have so lost its individuality that it can not be identified. This result apparently has been accomplished by Professor Gustav Rigler, a German chemist. We quote from an article contributed to the Frankfurter Zeitung by Dr. Erwin Partos, of Freiburg:

"Milk has hitherto received more attention from adulterators than from technical chemists. The Frankfurter Zeitung tells us that there is a German manufactory of the artificial milk made from the soy bean * * * *"

"Prof. Rigler, however, is the first to attack the problem of making the milk 'from the bottom up' by removing all the characteristics of a product of the vegetable kingdom by means of a special process of transformation and mixture.

"As his results have become known only through occasional newspaper paragraphs, I went to him personally for more authentic information. Prof. Rigler received me kindly and told me as much of his results as were ready for the public * * * * As the imperfect details that had hitherto found their way from his laboratory had been more or less widely spread outside of the profession which was not particularly agreeable to him, he had no objection to my setting down his present outgiving word for word."

Prof. Rigler describes his invention as follows:

"As a basis for my invention I have made use of no new synthetic compound, but a really new method is necessary for its extraction, for it exists ready-made in plants in great quantity and cheap. The whole process of manufacture is not complicated and takes only two hours, or, with sterilization of the product, two and a half.

"The albumens are of plant origin * * * * How they are introduced into the product cannot at present be explained. Only thus far there is no by-product remaining from the process, which I consider a great advantage of the method.

"During my long investigation, lasting many years, my chief aim was to obtain the very finest possible emulsion of vegetable oils, and this has now reached such a point that my plant milk gives up its fat by agitation * * * *. The emulsion of oils is now a simple mechanical process, and the problem of making an artificial milk thus appears to me to have been solved. Artificial milk may be combined with sugar as desired, and also with saccharin for the use of diabetics.

THE LOW COST OF GOOD LIVING.

FROM THE CANNING TRADE.

About one hundred years ago a French scientist, Nicholas Appert, discovered that fresh food hermetically sealed in a container and sterilized by exposure to a high degree of heat, would keep fresh, sweet and wholesome for years.

That started the industry of canning in times of abundance to be used in times of scarcity.

Before that discovery enormous quantities of food were allowed to waste and rot because men were ignorant and did not know how to save it, while millions of people elsewhere in the world were suffering and starving for the need of it.

All that is changed now, and there is very little of the wicked waste that then prevailed. Wherever there is a surplus of food a cannery is to be found near, and it is put into cans, cooked in the cans by steam heat, and will then keep good for years.

Lieutenant Greely stored canned foods in his various "caches" when he was looking for the North Pole. They remained subjected to cold—60 degrees below zero—for three years, and were then used and found to be as sweet and wholesome as when they were gathered.

African and South American explorers and our own army in the Philippines have found that canned goods keep sweet, good and wholesome right under the equator for long periods; in fact, for any length of time.

There is nothing secret in the process of canning food. Nothing whatever but the power of heat to sterilize and prevent fermentation. Preservative drugs or preparations cannot be used. They would be worse than useless, as they would destroy the natural flavor and no coloring substance can be used. Both would be illegal, and would subject canners to prosecution, and the goods to confiscation and destruction under United States law and laws of the various States. Nothing is needed or used in preparing canned goods but "cooking in the can."

The discovery of canning by heat and the development of the industry is one of the greatest boons ever given by Providence to mankind.

It puts the June gardens into the January pantry. It places the fresh fruits of the tropics on the table of the Laplander and the fresh salmon from the Behring Sea upon the bill of fare of Havana hotels.

The modern cannery is more sanitary than a dainty woman's kitchen, because it is constructed on strictly sanitary principles and kept clean by the use of hot water and live steam.

The contents of the cans, tomatoes, peas, string beans, fruits of all kinds, are gathered when at the proper ripeness, in the vicinity of the canneries where grown, and are washed, cleansed and prepared almost altogether by machinery without being touched by the hands. No handling is done that can be avoided. Peas or corn are scarcely touched by hands in canning. Tomatoes only are peeled by hand, as are some fruits, but most fruits are now peeled by machines. Salmon and canned meats are now handled almost exclusively by machinery. Why? Because the machines do it better and cheaper.

Being packed fresh from and near the gardens, orchards, waters and farms, canned vegetables, fruits, fish, sardines and meats have the tenderness and fine flavor which is not retained by such articles when they are shipped long distances and openly exposed to the air dust, odors and decay.

SANITARY STANDARDS FOR BAKERIES

ADOPTED BY THE NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF MASTER BAKERS.

1. Building well lighted in every part with natural light, and thoroughly ventilated; air supply free from contamination by surface dust.

2. Floors, wall and ceiling of impervious materials with smooth surfaces, and kept clean. Rooms kept free from vermin, and screened against flies.

3. Plumbing, drainage, etc., ample to remove waste and prevent dampness, and kept in good order. Sanitary toilets, shut off entirely from bakeshops and storage room.

4. A plentiful supply of pure water, convenient and adequate wash-stands and supplies.

5. Garbage, refuse, etc., stored in tightly-covered cans and disposed of quickly.

6. Machinery, tools and other equipment so made, installed and used as to facilitate cleanliness and safety.

7. Stables so located and kept disinfected as to prevent odors from same reaching bakery.

8. Methods of distribution such as to protect bakery products from contamination between the oven and the home.

9. A health certificate, showing freedom of all employes from skin diseases, tuberculosis, venereal and other contagious diseases. Spitting and the use of tobacco in the bakery prohibited.

10. Employes of bakeries should be properly clothed in clean sanitary clothing.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

While there are a few egg producers who take the best care of their product, the average farmer considers the eggs produced on his farm a by-product and makes very little provision for their care aside from gathering them. A great loss is caused by dirty eggs, of which the number is enormous, amounting to about $5,000,000 annually, according to Secretary Wilson of the Department of Agriculture. The loss is caused to a very considerable extent by failure to gather the eggs often enough.

According to statistics compiled at Amsterdam that city has the lowest infant mortality among twenty large European cities, namely, 8 per 100 births. Next comes Paris, with 9 per cent.; third, London, with 10.2 per cent.; and fourth, Milan, with 12.4 per cent. The highest figures are furnished by Moscow, 32.6 per cent., and St. Petersburg, 25 per cent.; then follows Breslau with 20.7 per cent.; Munich, 19.2 per cent.; Leipzig, 17.2 per cent.; Budapest, 16.2 per cent.; Berlin, 14.6 per cent.; Hamburg, 13.8 per cent.; Dresden, 13.3 per cent., after which follow Rome, Naples, Manchester, Liverpool, Birmingham and Glasgow.

While President Roosevelt was in office his attention was called to the fact that a clerk in one of the departments owed a grocery bill which he refused to pay. The President answered by stating that there was no law to compel the payment of the bill, different from that of other individual cases, but he notified the heads of departments that failure to pay grocery bills by civil service employees was sufficient cause for removal.

Some of the professors of the University of Minnesota have conceived the theory that direct buying through co-operation will reduce prices. To test this theory a co-operative grocery is to be started. They believe that a material saving can be effected by direct buying and shipping from the producers and by eliminating the costs that represents the middleman's profit.

---

Back of all good stock keeping, back of the nicest kind of counter display and the neatest and cleanest departments, is the important work of selling goods. That work comes first. That work has to support the whole business. So everything should become subservient to it. No salesman is worthy of the name that is guilty of "taking an order" without trying to sell anything. Customers like men who are interested in their work. They hold a certain admiration for the man who legally tries to get their money. Who wants an automaton to wait on them? Who wants to do business with a dummy? I tell you people want to be sold to—they want to be considered capable of buying more and much more than their list calls for. They want to deal with a man who takes it for granted that they can buy more.—

The Grocers' Review remarks that the retail grocer who can induce his patrons to come to his store to make their purchases has made for himself opportunities which will keep any competition "hard put to" to combat and will successfully frustrate the attempts made upon his line by the department and drug stores.

According to figures compiled by the New York Coffee Exchange 22,553,250 bags were traded during 1912. The highest price for futures was 14.62 cents and the lowest was 12.15 cents. The highest price for futures was recorded in October and the lowest obtained in January.

When scalding poultry for market, it is best to first to dry pick the legs so that they will not necessarily be placed in the water and change color. Neither the heads nor feet should touch the water. The water ought to be as near the boiling point as possible without actually boiling. The way to "plump" a dressed fowl is to dip it for ten minutes in water nearly or quite boiling and then immediately in cold water. Hang in a cool place until the animal heat is entirely out. This process gives the fowl a much more attractive appearance.

The average weight of hen' eggs per dozen runs between fifteen and twenty-four ounces. A weight of twenty-two and a half ounces may be taken as a fair average for good sized eggs.

---

It used to be thought that the small pigeon size eggs were the last of a litter, but the use of the trap nest has exploded the theory. On the farm of a writer in a poultry journal, these small sized eggs were occasionally followed by eggs of normal size.

---

Charges of misbranding coffee, preferred by government pure food inspectors, have been filed in the United District Court at Portland, Oregon, by Assistant United States District Attorney Evans, against a wholesale firm, Lange & Company. It is alleged that the firm put on the market as coffee a preparation consisting of coffee, chicory and cereal.

A committee has been appointed by the president of the Tea Association of the United States, to look into the regulations governing the examination of teas. It is proposed to transfer the jurisdiction over teas from the Treasury to the Agricultural Department.

The Inland Grocer—Co-operative plans, whether of wholesale or of retail concerns, seem predestined to an early crash. There is an old adage which says that all ways lead but to the grave, which is especially trite in connection with the co-operative principle. So many of these companies have failed that it is a wonder that men of ordinary business acumen still invest their hard-earned dollars in similar organizations.

All previous records for imports and exports of merchandise at the Port of New York were broken in 1912, according to the figures given out by William Loeb, Jr., former collector of the port. Merchandise valued at $1,057,475,830 was imported, compared with $896,100,804 in 1911. Domestic merchandise exported was valued at $844,996,033. The total duties collected in 1912 were $207,867,712.31, and miscellaneous receipts brought the total to $212,730,414.28.

The salmon and fruit packers of the Pacific Northwest are making active preparations to use the Panama Canal in getting their goods to the Atlantic Coast and Europe. The salmon packers are particularly keen over the benefit which the opening of the canal is expected to bring them.

The Trade.—The wreck of the steamship Workman on the Pacific Ocean, which carried down with it 222,000 cases of canned food, was a sad disaster, mainly to the insurance companies, as the goods were largely insured. This is a consumptive movement with a vengeance, but as it took off the market 90,000 cases of salmon at one blow, there are those who are not crying over it. There is a lesson in this extensive loss, however, which is worthy of consideration. A few years ago a total shipment of 222,000 cases of canned foods to Europe in a year would have been considered good business, but so rapidly has the consumption of the canned goods increased in foreign countries that this amount means only one shipment at the present day.

Simmons' Spice Mill.—It is interesting to know that the coffee berry was first discovered in Arabia by a goat. The pleased expression in the goat's face as he was munching some of the berries was noticed by the owner, who emulated his action. Roasting the berries followed and today coffee is perhaps the most popular drink in the world.

A monograph entitled "Cocoa Production and Trade," issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic commerce as special consular report No. 50, treats of the cultivation and methods of preparation of cocoa beans in different countries of production and of the foreign trade of the principal countries engaged in the manufacture of cocoa products. Copies may be obtained by applying to the bureau at Washington.

By order of the Treasury Department, a consignment of "Old Man Tea" has been seized by the customs authorities at San Francisco, for not being manifested according to law. The tea is an inferior quality not admissible to the United States. The chests containing the tea were marked as lichee and dried peanuts and were consigned to a Chinese firm. The Chinese assert that they use this bad tea as a medicine but as it is tea it cannot be admitted for any purpose.

State Dairy and Food Commissioner Dame, of Michigan, has written to the Governor of the State telling him of how large coffee firms in the State mix cereals in the coffee and sell it to the State institutions for its inmates.

The High Cost of Living Committee of Pittsburgh had a meeting in the rooms of the Chamber of Commerce at which many of the city's grocers appeared to answer the charge that they were instrumental in keeping the costs of foodstuffs high. The grocers passed the responsibility to the wholesalers and commission men, the latter organization having made the charge against the grocermen. Some of the speakers for the grocers stated that large margins were necessary on perishable goods.

In 1899 Minnesota had 582 creameries and in 1911 she had 814. In 1899 her creameries manufactured 44,007,933 pounds of butter, against 98,984,789 pounds in 1911.

By licensing dealers in oleomargarine and by requiring additional fees for inspection of commercial fertilizers, commercial feed and nursery stock in New York, Governor Sulzer's committee of inquiry believes the State revenues may be increased over $100,000 a year and that consumers will be more effectively protected. Commissioner C. J. Huson is preparing legislation to this effect and its members were in harmony with his ideas. The commissioner is planning to combine into one bureau the supervision of dairy products, fertilizers and feed. There are in the State about 3,500 wholesale and retail dealers handling oleomargarine, and the commissioner's proposed legislation would levy a tax of from $15 to $20 on retailers and $300 on wholesalers. Oleomargarine dealers now have to pay only a small Federal license fee.

The first bulletin of the fifth census of Canada, dealing with manufacturers of dairy products shows that the total quantity of butter made the year preceding the taking of the census was 57,328,191 pounds valued at $13,726,546, and that employes of butter factories received $690,347 in wages. The value of the cheese production was $17,524,021. The value of the condensed milk produced was $1,813,871. Compared with the previous census, that of 1900, the figures show an increase of butter production of 100 per cent., and a slight decrease in the value of the cheese production. The value per pound of butter was 25 per cent. greater than in 1900, while the value of cheese per pound advanced only a slight fraction of a cent. Imports of butter continue to increase, New Zealand coming regularly into the Canadian market now.

Milk producers in Vermont are protected from loss by non-payment of bills for their supplies by a new law which provides that each foreign creamery association doing business in the State file a fee for $5,000 with the Secretary of State.

The Montana Dairy Association has a bill which will be introduced at the present session calling for compensation for cattle killed upon reacting to the tuberculin test.

State and county officials in Kentucky have decided that all milk furnished to public institutions must be tuberculin tested. The United States Department of Agriculture will do the work and will also test the herds of any dairymen who request it.

Kansas City has joined the cities provided with certified milk.

The Michigan State prison at Jackson has installed a creamery and will supply its own butter.

The National Poultry, Butter and Egg Association is gathering material for a complaint to the Inter-State Commerce Commission against express companies which are said to transact commission business in produce.

A dairyman sued the health officer at Meridian, Mass., for damages sustained when he was ordered to discontinue selling milk from six of his cows which had been found infected with tuberculosis. The action was claimed to be unreasonable and the law under which it was taken unconstitutional. The judge before whom the action was brought decided in favor of the health officer.

The Lincoln County State bank at Davenport, Wash., has offered to loan farmers in the vicinity money without interest for the erection of silos.

NEW LAWS RELATING TO FOOD PRODUCTS.

The legislature of 1913 took some important action in connection with the manufacture, preservation and sale of food products in this Commonwealth. Elsewhere in this number of the Bulletin we reprint the act of 1909 regulating the sale of eggs and also the supplementary act of 1913 in relation to the same.

The supplement to the egg act requires that eggs which are decayed and unfit for food shall be denatured by the application of kerosene. This must be done promptly. The eggs must be broken and thoroughly saturated with the fluid so as to prevent their use for any purpose whatsoever in connection with food or in the manufacture of food products. This act was made necessary by the discovery that a considerable traffic was in progress in Philadelphia and other cities in rotten eggs which were used by some bakers in the cakes they baked for sale. It is believed the supplementary act will break up this odious and repellant practice.

The act of June 5, 1913, is amendatory to the act of May 29, 1901, relating to the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine in this State, and was enacted to meet a condition which has recently developed. The amendment deals only with the color or appearance of the product and provides that oleomargarine and all similar products shall be made and kept free from all coloration or ingredients causing it to resemble butter of any shade of yellow. This means exactly what it says; that oleomargarine offered for sale in this state must not be in resemblance of or in imitation of butter of any shade of yellow.

Perhaps the most important and far-reaching bit of legislation enacted at the recent session was the cold storage act, approved May 16, 1913, which went into effect August 14, 1913. The law provides that the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall formulate and publish rules and regulations for its enforcement, which rules and regulations, together with the law, are printed in full in this number of the Bulletin.

The act is threefold in its purpose.

First. It aims to protect the public against fraud and deception in the sale of cold storage products coming under its provisions by requiring that all such articles shall bear the date when they were placed in cold storage, the date when they were taken out of cold storage and be plainly labeled, "Wholesome Cold Storage Food." These requirements keep the purchaser clearly informed, since it is also the duty of the retailer to follow the requirements of the act every time he sells cold storage food to a customer.

Second. The act likewise requires a rigid inspection of all cold storage warehouses as to their sanitary condition and equipment and prohibits the placing in cold storage of any foods that are unsound or unwholesome.

Third. The act fixes a time limit wherein the various products designated may remain in cold storage. At the expiration of that limit they must be taken out of storage. By this regulation it is hoped to prevent the use of cold storage as a weapon whereby the market may be cornered or the prices of products regulated in the interest of those who desire no reduction in the high cost of living. Already the revelations made to the eyes of the state's agents who have begun the work of inspecting the warehouses and their equipment and condition more than justify the wisdom of the act.

SELLING ADULTERATED VINEGAR.

The crusade against the venders of adulterated vinegar was undertaken after ample warning had been given and every effort made to induce all grocers in the state to exercise caution in the purchase of their vinegar supply. It is not the desire of this bureau to prosecute any citizen who makes an honest effort to comply with the provisions of the act of assembly. It is true that a certain proportion of grocers who have been caught with adulterated vinegar on hand have been deceived by the dealers from whom they made their purchases. In other instances it is to be feared the element of cheapness was a powerful consideration in the purchase.

Pennsylvania has a very reasonable and sensible vinegar law. It was enacted largely for the purpose of encouraging the farmers of the state to utilize their surplus apples in the manufacture of cider and to transform the latter into pure and wholesome cider vinegar. We are sorry to say that the act has failed to accomplish all that its projectors hoped for. This is probably due to a variety of reasons, although the preponderating one seems to be the inability of the farmers to compete with the manufacture of bogus cider vinegar which has been entirely too much in evidence throughout the state. The counterfeit is always much cheaper than the genuine article.

The legislators had a perfectly proper motive in view concerning the consumer also when they enacted legislation prohibiting the adulteration of vinegar and provided certain penalties for violation of the act. Vinegar is an important article of diet. It is in general use in the homes of the land. The consumer has a right to know the quality of the article he is purchasing. A good lady who was amazed to hear that her grocer had been arrested charged with violating the law was greatly surprised, exclaiming with charming simplicity: "Why, I always asked for cider vinegar!" Of course you did, dear lady, but to ask for a thing is one thing and to get it is another. It is to make an end of this deception that the power of the law has been invoked.

When one considers the matter carefully it must be admitted that the adulteration of vinegar is a rather serious business. To employ for cider a substitute which eats holes in every substance with which it comes in contact is to put the purchasers of that sort of vinegar in peril. The human stomach is a delicate instrument and while it is long-suffering and not easily provoked, there are some things it is powerless to resist. We imagine a powerful and virulent acid is one of them. The manufacturer of "pure cider" vinegar who never employs a particle of genuine cider but who deliberately uses a substance that eats and destroys takes a considerable risk. There is little likelihood that he will ever be tried in earthly courts for the crime of murder, but in the court of moral jurisprudence he is certainly guilty.

This Bulletin is not an advocate of reckless extravagance; it never will be. It does not hold that an article to be good must necessarily be the highest priced in the market. Very frequently the contrary is true. But it has constantly insisted that extraordinary bargains are usually snares. It has said that the clamor for cheapness for the sake of cheapness has been a curse to our country. And it has warned grocers that the man who offers an article "just as good as any," at a very low price is usually one to watch or to avoid entirely. We realize the pressure brought by consumers for cheap things, and that they are responsible for many of the counterfeits now on the market, but the grocer who wishes to avoid trouble will resist this sort of temptation and will insist upon a legal guaranty from every wholesaler or jobber from whom he makes a purchase.

AN ACT

For the protection of the public health, by prohibiting the sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, of eggs unfit for food, as therein defined, and prohibiting the use of such eggs in the preparation of food products; providing penalties for the violation thereof, and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself or themselves, or by his, her, its or their agents, servants or employes, to sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, eggs that are unfit for food, within the meaning of this act.

Section 2. This act shall apply to eggs that, either before or after removal from the shell, are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed, and to eggs in the fluid state, any portion of which are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed, or that are mixed with parts of eggs that are derived from eggs that are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed. This act shall also apply to frozen masses or broken eggs, if the mass contains eggs that are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed, or that are mixed with parts of eggs that have been taken from eggs that are wholly or partly decayed or decomposed.

Section 3. That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself or themselves, or by his, her, its or their agents, servants, or employes, to use eggs that are either wholly or partly decayed or decomposed, in the preparation of food products: And provided further, That there shall be no delivery, sale, purchase, or acceptance of wholly or partly decayed or decomposed eggs in or at any establishment where food products are prepared or manufactured.

Section 4. That any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction thereof, shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not less than two hundred ($200) dollars, nor more than one thousand ($1,000) dollars, or to undergo an imprisonment of not less than three (3) months, nor more than nine (9) months, or both or either, at the discretion of the court.

Section 5. That the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall be charged with the enforcement of the provisions of this act.

Section 6. That all fines and penalties imposed and recovered for the violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, and, when so collected and paid, shall thereafter be, by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, paid into the State Treasury, for the use of the Commonwealth.

APPROVED—The 11th day of March, A. D. 1909.

AN ACT

Supplementary to an act, entitled "An act for the protection of the public health, by prohibiting the sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, of eggs unfit for food, as therein defined, and prohibiting the use of such eggs in the preparation of food products; providing penalties for the violation thereof, and providing for the enforcement thereof," approved the eleventh day of March, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and nine; providing for the denaturing of kerosene of all eggs unfit for food, within the meaning of said act; and providing penalties for the violation thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporate body, by himself, herself, itself, or themselves, or by his, her, its, or their agents, servants, or employes, to sell, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell eggs that are unfit for food, within the meaning of an act, entitled "An act for the protection of the public health, by prohibiting the sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, of eggs unfit for food, as therein defined, and prohibiting the use of such eggs in the preparation of food products; providing penalties for the violation thereof, and providing for the enforcement thereof," approved the eleventh day of March, Anno Domini one thousand nine hundred and nine, for any purpose, use, cause, or reason whatsoever, unless the same shall have first been denatured with a sufficient quantity of kerosene to render all of the same unfit for use in the preparation of food and food products; and further providing, that the shells of all such eggs that may be unfit for food, as hereinbefore mentioned, shall first be removed or broken, by smashing or otherwise, so as to permit a free impregnation of the whole of the egg substance by the denaturing fluid; and all persons violating any of the provisions hereof shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and subject to the same penalties as provided in the act to which this is a supplement.

AN ACT

To amend the act, approved the twenty-ninth day of May, one thousand nine hundred and one, entitled "An act to prohibit the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, and other similar products, when colored in imitation of yellow butter; to provide for license fees to be paid by manufacturers, wholesale and retail dealers, and by proprietors of hotels, restaurants, dining-rooms, and boarding houses; for the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine, butterine, or other similar products, not colored in imitation of yellow butter; and to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine or other similar products, not colored in imitation of yellow butter, and prevent and punish fraud and deception in such manufacture and sale as an imitation butter; and to prescribe penalties and punishment for violations of this act, and the means and method of procedure for its enforcement, and regulate certain matters of evidence in such procedure."

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That the first section of an act, entitled "An act to prohibit the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, and other similar products, when colored in imitation of yellow butter; and to provide for license fees to be paid by manufacturers, wholesale and retail dealers, and by proprietors of hotels, restaurants, dining-rooms and boarding houses; for the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine, butterine, or other similar products not colored in imitation of yellow butter, and to regulate the manufacture and sale of oleomargarine, butterine, or other similar products not colored in imitation of yellow butter, and prevent and punish fraud and deception in such manufacture and sale as an imitation butter; and to prescribe penalties and punishment for violations of this act, and the means and the method of procedure for its enforcement, and regulate certain matters of evidence in such procedure," which reads as follows:—

"That no person, firm or corporation shall, by himself, herself, or themselves, or by his, her, or their agent or servant, nor shall any officer, agent, servant, or employe of any person, firm, or corporation, manufacture, sell, ship, consign, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, article, product, or compound, made wholly or partly out of any fats, oils, or oleaginous substance, or compound thereof, not produced from pure unadulterated milk, or cream from the same, without the admixture or addition of any fat foreign to the said milk or cream, and which shall be in imitation of yellow butter, produced from pure, unadulterated milk, or cream of the same, with or without coloring matter, unless such person, firm, or corporation shall have first obtained a license and paid a license fee as hereinafter provided; nor unless the said article, product or compound, so manufactured, shipped, consigned, offered for sale, exposed for sale, or had in possession with intent to sell, shall be made and kept free from all coloration or ingredients causing it to look like yellow butter; nor unless the same shall be kept and presented in a separate and distinct form, and in such manner as will advise the purchaser and consumer of its real character; nor unless such person, firm or corporation shall, in all other respects, comply with, and observe the provisions of this act," be and the same is hereby, amended to read as follows:—

That no person, firm or corporation shall, by himself, herself, or themselves, or by his, her, or their agent or servant, nor shall any officer, agent, servant, or employe of any person, firm or corporation, manufacture, sell, ship, consign, offer for sale, expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, article, product, or compound, made wholly or partly out of any fats, oils, or oleaginous substances, or compound thereof, not produced from pure, unadulterated milk or cream from the same, without the admixture or addition of any fat foreign to the said milk or cream, and which shall be in imitation of yellow butter, produced from pure, unadulterated milk or cream of the same, with or without coloring matter, unless such person, firm or corporation shall have first obtained a license and paid a license fee as hereinafter provided; nor unless the said article, product, or compound, so manufactured, shipped, consigned, offered for sale, exposed for sale, or had in possession with intent to sell, shall be made and kept free from all coloration or ingredients causing it to look like butter of any shade of yellow, as hereinafter described; nor unless the same shall be kept and presented in a separate and distinct form, and in such manner as will advise the purchaser and consumer of its real character; nor unless such person, firm, or corporation, shall, in all other respects, comply with and observe the provisions of this act. For the purposes of this act, oleomargarine, butterine, or similar substance, shall be deemed to look like, be in resemblance of, or in imitation of butter of a shade of yellow, when it has a tint or shade containing more than one and six-tenths degrees of yellow, or of yellow and red collectively, but with an excess of yellow over red, as measured in the terms of the Lovibond tintometer scale, or its equivalent.

The second section of said act, which reads as follows:—

"Every person, firm, or corporation, and every agent of such person, firm or corporation, desiring to manufacture, sell, or offer or expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, not made or colored in imitation of yellow butter, shall make application for a license so to do, in such form as shall be prescribed by the Department of Agriculture through its agent, the Dairy and Food Commissioner, which application, in addition to other matters which may be required to be stated therein by said Dairy and Food Commissioner, shall contain an accurate description of the place where the proposed business is intended to be carried on, and the name and style under which it is proposed to conduct the said business. If the said application is satisfactory to the said Dairy and Food Commissioner, and said name and style shall not, in the judgment of the Dairy and Food Commissioner, be calculated to deceive or mislead the public as to the real nature of the business so proposed to be carried on, he shall issue to the applicant or applicants a license, authorizing him, her, or them to engage in the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine, or butterine, or any similar substance, which shall not contain any coloration or ingredient that causes it to resemble or be in imitation of yellow butter; for which said license the applicant or applicants shall first pay: If a manufacturer, the annual sum of one thousand dollars; if a wholesaler, the annual sum of five hundred dollars; and if a retailer, the annual sum of one hundred dollars; if a proprietor of a hotel, restaurant, or dining-room, the annual sum of fifty dollars; and if a proprietor of a boarding-house, the annual sum of ten dollars; and the said license fee, when received by the Dairy and Food Commissioner or his agent, shall be by him immediately covered into the State Treasury. Such licenses shall not authorize the manufacture or sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance at any other place than that designated in the application and license; and the said license shall not authorize the manufacture, sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, any oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, made or colored so as to resemble or be in imitation of yellow butter.

"All licenses under this act shall expire on the thirty-first day of December of each year, but licenses may be granted to commence on the first day of any month for the remainder of a year, upon the payment of a proportionate part of the annual license fee; such licenses may be transferred by Dairy and Food Commissioner, upon the application in writing of the person, firm, or corporation to which the same has been granted: Provided, The transferee shall comply with the regulations made by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner in regard to the said transfer, and shall thereafter comply with the provisions of this act.

"Wholesale dealers, within the meaning of this act, shall be all persons, firms, and corporations who shall sell to dealers and persons who shall buy to sell again and all persons, firms, and corporations who make sales in quantities of ten pounds and over, at any time; and retail dealers shall be persons, firms, and corporations who shall sell in quantities less than ten pounds," is amended to read as follows:—

Every person, firm, or corporation, and every agent of such person, firm, or corporation, desiring to manufacture, sell, or offer or expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, not made or colored so as to look like yellow butter, shall make application for a license so to do, in such form as shall be prescribed by the Department of Agriculture, through its agent, the Dairy and Food Commissioner, which application, in addition to other matters which may be required to be stated therein by said Dairy and Food Commissioner, shall contain an accurate description of the place where the proposed business is intended to be carried on, and the name and style under which it is proposed to conduct the said business. If the said application is satisfactory to the said Dairy and Food Commissioner, and said name and style shall not, in the judgment of the Dairy and Food Commissioner, be calculated to deceive or mislead the public as to the real nature of the business so proposed to be carried on, he shall issue to the applicant or applicants a license, authorizing him, her, or them to engage in the manufacture or sale of oleomargarine or butterine, or any similar substance, which shall not contain any coloration or ingredient that causes it to resemble yellow butter; for which said license the applicant or applicants shall first pay: If a manufacturer, the annual sum of one thousand dollars; if a wholesaler, the annual sum of five hundred dollars, and if a retailer, the annual sum of one hundred dollars; if a proprietor of a hotel, restaurant, or dining-room, the annual sum of fifty dollars; and if a proprietor of a boarding-house, the annual sum of ten dollars; and the said license fee, when received by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent, shall be by him immediately covered into the State Treasury. Such licenses shall not authorize the manufacture or sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, at any other place than that designated in the application and license; and the said license shall not authorize the manufacture, sale, exposing for sale, or having in possession with intent to sell, any oleomargarine, butterine, or any similar substance, made or colored so as to look like yellow butter, as herein provided.

All licenses under this act shall expire on the thirty-first day of December of each year; but licenses may be granted to commence on the first day of any month for the remainder of a year, upon the payment of a proportionate part of the annual license fee; such licenses may be transferred by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, upon the application in writing of the person, firm, or corporation to which the same has been granted: Provided, The transferee shall comply with the regulations made by the said Dairy and Food Commissioner in regard to the said transfer, and shall thereafter comply with the provisions of this act.

Wholesale dealers, within the meaning of this act, shall be all persons, firms, and corporations who shall sell to dealers, and persons who shall buy to sell again, and all persons, firms and corporations who make sales in quantities of ten pounds and over, at any time; and retail dealers shall be all persons, firms, and corporations who shall sell in quantities less than ten pounds.

AN ACT

For the protection of the public health and the prevention of fraud and deception, by regulating the storage and sale of cold storage foods; fixing penalties for the violation of the provisions thereof, and providing for the enforcement thereof.

Section 1. Be it enacted, &c., That this act shall be known, and may be cited, as the "Cold Storage Act of one thousand nine hundred and thirteen."

Section 2. The term "cold storage," as used in this act shall mean the storage of food, at or below a temperature of forty degrees Fahrenheit, in a cold storage warehouse.

Section 3. The term "cold storage warehouse," as used in this act, shall mean an establishment employing refrigerating machinery or ice for the purpose of refrigeration, or a place otherwise artificially cooled, in which articles of food are stored, for thirty (30) days or more, at a temperature of forty degrees Fahrenheit, or under.

Section 4. The term "food," as used in this act, shall mean the fresh flesh of animals, and fresh products therefrom, the fresh flesh of fowls, fresh food, fish, eggs and butter, which have been stored in a cold storage warehouse.

Section 5. The word "container," as used in this act, shall be taken to mean any bag, band, barrel, basket, bottle, box, caddy, can, canister, carton, crate, firkin, hogshead, jar, jug, keg, stopper, vessel, wrapper, frozen bulk, or any similar or analogous utensil, receptacle, band or wrapper in which food may be kept, stored, sold, or offered for sale.

Section 6. The word "marked," as used in this act, shall be taken to mean written, printed, stamped or painted, or any other means whereby words or figures may be indicated in or on a container, or on any cover attached thereto.

Section 7. The term "wholesome" as used in this act shall mean fit for human food.

Section 8. No person, firm, or corporation shall operate a cold storage warehouse without a license issued by the Department of Agriculture through its agent, the Dairy and Food Commissioner. Such license shall be issued only on written application stating the location of such warehouse. Upon receipt of the application, said Dairy and Food Commissioner shall cause an examination to be made into the sanitary conditions of such warehouse. If it be found to be in a sanitary condition and properly equipped for the purpose of cold storage, the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall cause a license to be issued, authorizing the applicant to operate a cold storage warehouse during the period of one year from the date of such license. No license shall be issued until the applicant therefor shall have paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner the sum of fifty dollars ($50.00). A license shall be required for each separate warehouse building.

Section 9. Whenever any warehouse licensed under the provisions of this act, or any portion of such warehouse, shall be deemed by the Dairy and Food Commissioner to be in an unsanitary condition, it shall be the duty of the Dairy and Food Commissioner to cause such warehouse, or portion thereof, to be closed until it shall be put in a sanitary condition. If such changes be not made within a reasonable time, the Dairy and Food Commissioner may suspend or revoke the license granted for the operation of such warehouse. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to operate any such warehouse, or portion thereof, when the same shall be closed by order of the Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Section 10. It shall be the duty of every person, firm, or corporation that shall be licensed to operate a cold storage warehouse to keep an accurate record of the receipts and withdrawals of food therefrom. The agents of the Dairy and Food Commissioner shall have free access to such records at all times. It shall be the duty of each person, firm, or corporation, licensed to operate a cold storage warehouse, to file in the office of the Dairy and Food Commissioner, on or before the sixth day of January, April, July, and October, of each year, a report setting forth in itemized particulars the kind and quantities of food products held in cold storage in such warehouse. The report shall be made on printed forms prepared and supplied by the Dairy and Food Commissioner. If, in the judgment of the Dairy and Food Commissioner, it shall be deemed better in enforcing this act to cause reports to be made at more frequent intervals than herein required, said Dairy and Food Commissioner may cause such reports to be filed in accordance herewith.

Section 11. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to place in any cold storage warehouse, to keep therein, or to sell, offer, or expose for sale, any diseased, tainted, or otherwise unwholesome food.

Section 12. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to place in any cold storage warehouse any slaughtered animals, or parts thereof unless the entrails and other offensive parts have been first properly removed.

Section 13. It shall be the duty of the Dairy and Food Commissioner to cause to be made a careful inspection of all cold storage foods, with a view to determining whether the same are wholesome. Such inspection shall be made where such food is stored; and each package of such food so inspected shall bear the marks, stamps, or other device for identification, provided for in this section. It shall be the duty of the Dairy and Food Commissioner to make such rules and regulations as he may deem proper, relating to such inspection and supervision and to the cold storage of food, and otherwise to secure the proper enforcement of this act. Duly authorized agents of the Dairy and Food Commissioner may, at any reasonable time, enter such warehouse and inspect the same.

Section 14. All food when deposited in cold storage warehouses shall have plainly marked upon the container the date that such food shall be placed in such warehouses. If such food be not in a container, such marking shall be on such food, or on a tag or label securely and permanently attached thereto. Such food, or the container thereof shall have marked plainly thereon the date of withdrawal of such food from such warehouses. The marking of food, in accordance with the terms of this section, shall be under such regulations as may be prescribed by the Dairy and Food Commissioner.

Section 15. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation, or any agent thereof, to sell, or offer or expose for sale, or have in possession with intent to sell, at wholesale, any food which is not marked and distinguished, on the outside of each container, in a conspicuous place, by a placard with the words "wholesome cold storage food" printed thereon; such placard to be placed in a conspicuous position, in full view of the purchaser; and the said words "wholesome cold storage food," on such placard, shall be printed in plain, uncondensed gothic letters, not less than one-half ( $\frac{1}{2}$ ) inch in length; and, in addition, all such food shall be marked with the date when it is placed in any such cold storage warehouse, and with the date when it is withdrawn from such cold storage warehouse.

There shall also be displayed upon every open container containing such food, in the same manner, in a conspicuous position, a placard with the words "wholesome cold storage food" printed thereon, in the same form as above described in this section; and when such food is sold from such container, or otherwise, at retail, before being delivered to the purchaser it shall be wrapped in wrappers plainly stamped on the outside thereof with the words "wholesome cold storage food," printed or stamped thereon in letters one-fourth ( $\frac{1}{4}$ ) inch square, and such wrapper shall also contain the date of first placing such food in cold storage; and the said words "wholesome cold storage food," and the date of first placing such food in cold storage so stamped or printed on said wrapper, shall not be in any manner concealed, but shall be in plain view of the purchaser at the time of the purchase.

Section 16. No person, firm, or corporation shall sell, offer, or expose for sale, any of the herein named foods which shall have been held for a longer period of time than herein specified, in a cold storage warehouse or warehouses, to wit: Whole carcasses of beef, or any parts thereof, four (4) months; whole carcasses of pork, or any parts thereof, six (6) months; whole carcasses of sheep, or any parts thereof, six (6) months; whole carcasses of lamb, or any parts thereof, six (6) months; whole carcasses of veal, or any parts thereof, three (3) months; dressed fowl, drawn, five (5) months; dressed fowl, undrawn, ten (10) months; eggs, eight (8) months; butter, nine (9) months, and fish, nine, (9) months.

Section 17. After food has been withdrawn from a cold storage warehouse, for the purpose of placing it on the market for sale, it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to return such food, or any portion thereof, to such warehouse or any other similar warehouse. Subject to such regulations as shall be prescribed by the Dairy and Food Commissioner, food may be transferred from one cold storage warehouse to another: Provided, That the total length of time such food shall remain in cold storage, for the purpose of sale, shall not exceed the time specified in section sixteen (16) of this act.

Section 18. No food shall be sold, or offered or exposed for sale, in this State, which shall have been placed or stored in any cold storage warehouse outside of this State, unless it first shall have been marked as provided for in section fifteen (15) of this act: Provided, however, That no such food shall be sold or offered or exposed for sale in this State if the total length of time that such food has remained in cold storage shall exceed that specified in section sixteen (16) of this act.

Section 19. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm or corporation to mark, or cause to be marked, any container of food with a mark or marks other than those required by this act to be marked on such food or container. It shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to change, or cause to be changed, any mark or marks on any food or container after such mark or marks have been placed thereon: Provided, That nothing in this section shall apply to the marking of such container with the name and address of the owner thereof.

Section 20. Nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the shipping, consigning, or transporting of fresh food in properly refrigerated cars within this State to points of destination; nor, when received, to prohibit the same being held in a cooling-room for a period of forty-eight (48) hours: And provided further, That nothing in this act shall be construed to prohibit the keeping of fresh food in ice-boxes or refrigerators in retail stores, while the same is offered or exposed for sale.

Section 21. It shall be the duty of the Department of Agriculture, through its Dairy and Food Commissioner, to enforce all of the provisions of this act, and to make all rules and regulations, not otherwise herein provided, necessary for the enforcement of the same.

Section 22. That all license fees, and fines and penalties imposed and recovered for the violation of any of the provisions of this act shall be paid to the Dairy and Food Commissioner, or his agent; and, when so collected and paid, shall thereafter be by the Dairy and Food Commissioner paid into the State Treasury, for the use of the Commonwealth, in accordance with the provisions of this act.

Section 23. Any person, firm, or corporation that shall violate any of the provisions of this act shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof shall be sentenced for the first offense to pay a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars ($500.00); and for the second and each subsequent offense such person, firm, or corporation shall be sentenced to pay a fine of not more than one thousand ($1,000.00) dollars, and, in addition thereto, such person, or the members of such firm, or the officers of such corporation, as the case may be, with guilty knowledge of the fact, may be sentenced to undergo imprisonment in the jail of the proper county for a period of not less than thirty (30) nor more than ninety (90) days, or both, at the discretion of the court.

Section 24. All acts and parts of acts inconsistent with the provisions of this act are repealed.

Section 25. This law shall take effect ninety (90) days after its final passage.

APPROVED—The 16th day of May, A. D. 1913.

A GOOD WORD FOR "BOB" VEAL.

The latest news from the pure food world is that "bob" veal, long condemned as unwholesome, if not poisonous, and prohibited as human food in various countries, says The Literary Digest, is really harmless. "Bob" veal is simply the flesh of very young calves. On some statute books it is defined as the flesh of a calf less than one month old. The authority who now commends this article for our consumption is Professor P. A. Fish, of Cornell University, who has carefully compared "bob" veal with market veal and beef in respect to some of its properties. He sets forth his results in an article on "Bob Veal and the Public" in the American Veterinary Review." The quotations are from an editorial notice in the Journal of the American Medical Association (Chicago). The writer notes in the first place, that an inspection of representative books on hygiene fails to disclose any evidence for the justification of this popular notion regarding bob veal. He goes on:

"Veal is commonly regarded as more difficult of digestion than beef, the reason being assigned to differences in the texture of the flesh.

"Although the experiments indicate quite a satisfactory line of demarkation between the younger bob and older veal, there are occasional individual exceptions, and the method of distinguishing between old and young veal as yet can not, therefore, be declared infallible. Dietetic experiments were also carried on in which bob veal was eaten by seven families aggregating twenty individuals ranging from two to sixty years of age. The statement that the flesh of bob veal has a laxative effect and induces diarrhea was not confirmed in a single instance throughout the work. The health in all cases was apparently normal, nor did any family refuse a second helping when another carcass became available.

"In all veal there is a deficiency of fat as compared with beef. In bob veal this deficiency is somewhat more pronounced, because it is a result of growth and age under proper nutritive conditions. In the use of bob veal this deficiency may be overcome to a considerable extent by cooking the veal with pork or other fat.

"Professor Fish is of the opinion that bob veal is in no way injurious when used as human food. The desirability of changing the present regulations and existing legal restrictions regarding the sale of very young veal is thus thrown open for discussion. The subject is one which should not be dismissed or settled by a few haphazard experiments or hasty generalizations.

A FRUIT IN A STERILE PACKAGE.

Obvious advantages appear in articles of food that are packed in germ proof packages, such as fruits or nuts with skins or shells so impervious to germs that the enclosure is practically sterile, no matter what happens to the envelope. The phrase at the head of this article is the name applied by an editorial writer in the Journal of the American Medical association (Chicago) to the ordinary banana, whose skin, he says is protective environment that calls for more than passing mention. The banana, he says, though growing in popularity, is still underestimated in American households, largely because it is eaten when not fully ripe.

"The banana consists, in its green state, largely of starch, aside from its water content, conspicuous in all such products. The essential change during the process of ripening manifests itself in the conversion of starch into soluble carbohydrates, among which sucrose, invert sugar, and dextrines are the conspicuous components. The rate of ripening is dependent upon the temperature and is thus subject to modification and control within certain ranges. This fact of itself suggests certain advantages in regulating the availability of the product to suit the needs of the market and the consumer. The edible portion of each fruit is packed away in a fairly resistant covering or peel which serves a more useful purpose and exhibits a far more efficient protection to the inner contents than has hitherto been realized or anticipated. Dr. E. M. Bailey has made extensive bacteriologic examinations of the fruits in different stages of maturation, all of which justify the conclusion that the inner portion of the pulp of sound bananas is practically sterile. The regions of the inner coats of the peel may be sparsely inhabited by bacteria which are held in check during the normal ripening processes, but subsequently may find conditions favorable to growth.

"The peel is singularly resistant to invasion by bacteria. Even when fruits were subjected to the exceptionally severe test of being immersed in fluids containing cultures of known organisms there was no evidence of a penetration into the interior. The probability of infection through the peel is therefore very slight though, of course, deposited on the peel it might be transferred to the consumer's fingers and thence to the mouth. It is not unlikely that the few organisms commonly found along the inner coat reach it through the circulation of the plant juices while the fruit is still on the tree. Apparently natural decay begins only after the biochemical changes incident to ripening are complete.

"Obviously injury to the protective coat destroys the protection of the defense against microbial invasion, and it is at the site of the abrasion on the surface of the peel that the objectional decay usually starts. It is important to appreciate this interesting example of a food delivered by nature in practically sterile packages with the ready possibility of its being distributed in this form by men, provided that the exigencies of the case are duly appreciated. Nature's wholesome service should not be undone by careless methods of marketing such foods."

AN ENORMOUS SPOILAGE BILL.

In a report issued by the health commissioner of New York, it is shown, among the 11,975 tons of food stuffs condemned in that city during the year 1912, canned food held the place of second honor, as their total amounted to 1,724,803 pounds an amount equal to 35,933 cases of No. 3 cans.

In commenting on this immense quantity of food condemned Dr. Lederle says: "The enormous quantities of canned food stuffs which deteriorate and become unwholesome offers another serious problem for solution. The canning of food stuffs is no new industry, although judging from the quantities destroyed because of deterioration, it would still seem to be in the experimental stage."

Commenting on the matter The Canning Trade says: "We are inclined to take exception to the statement that the canning of foods is in the experimental stage. It is true that all is not understood regarding this industry by any means, but nevertheless enough is known to enable careful packers to produce the goods with practically no loss whatever. And yet this tremendous condemnation would seem to bear out the Doctor's claim, that at least a great many canners are experimenting.

"Thirty-five thousand cases of canned foods destroyed in one city in a single year is not to be passed over unnoticed. There must be something wrong somewhere. Either there are a number of lots of 'clean up goods' bought by some of our careful (?) jobbers on a speculation, only to fall into the clutches of the law later, or there must be some condemnation on some immense blocks of goods held over for many years. We cannot believe that this immense amount represents the discard of spoils and swells from only one year's delivery.

"But it will serve in another manner to show the justice of the Baltimore canner's attitude in insisting upon the return of condemned goods before permitting an allowance for them. This total number represents almost 900,000 cans, and in all probability a great number more than this actually. In this number there must have been reclamation on the can companies for imperfect cans which would run up into large numbers. But if the packers had not the cans to show and be tested, they could make no such claim and the loss would be a total one to them. This is the great reason why canners insist upon having the goods returned to them and why the laws should permit this under proper safeguard.

RETAIL GROCERS REALIZE THE NEED TO ATTRACT TRADE.

"Signs are that retail grocers are more determined than ever to secure the greatest possible good from their business," says The Grocers' Review.

Continuing it says: "These indications are not isolated instances, but all through the country it is the same. Retailers are discovering that if they are to be successful in securing new business, if they hope to retain that which they have, if they expect that new customers will come to them, they must seize upon all possible opportunities to attract trade. It isn't enough, they have found, to have new goods, or better goods. Unless prospective buyers know they have them, unless their old customers are apprised of the presence of these goods, there is no possible chance of their buying.

"Formerly this condition was not generally understood, or if it was, very few took advantage of its plain teachings. But now there is a different feeling in the trade. Retailers are asking how they can bring in new business. They are employing experts to give them information upon this topic. They are recognizing the necessity of such knowledge and are employing it in the regular routine of their business.

"This assists in developing their business in two ways. It influences the purchaser to ask for various sorts of goods with which he may be to some extent unfamiliar, and it influences the dealer to exert himself to find suitable goods to offer his customers, and then think up new ways to attract favorable attention. A combination like this is difficult to beat. It means increasing business and it means that dealers will secure full benefit for their publicity efforts, while purchasers will be certain to profit as well. Under such circumstances there is small reason to doubt ultimate success where heretofore partial failure has been the rule. Once aroused, and seeing the actual increase in profits which come from such a campaign judiciously arranged and managed, retailers will not be content to have the increased profits for one. They will insist upon them all the time. This will benefit them and the buyer as well. When a dealer has accomplished this he is entitled to all the success which may come to him.

"Probably most dealers have been frightened in the past by the expense. But the scale of all expenditures has increased during the past few years, and what seemed unnecessary a few years ago is quite within reason now. And because of this many retailers now are using advertising space, who formerly felt that they couldn't afford it, with corresponding benefit to themselves and their business.

"Associations have been important factors in spreading the gospel of the new merchandising. Their leaders have pointed out the benefits derivable from pursuing a certain course. They have urged upon their members the benefits which might flow from a small excursion into this untried field, and always they have been right if expert advice was followed. It is well to remember the helpfulness of the association in spreading the publicity propaganda. Progressive men have seen the effects of this, and their ideas have been modified in undertaking to develop the sentiment among their friends. It is not too high praise to accord to associations the bulk of the present activity in publicity campaigns.

"Maybe, too, there has been a change in the dealers themselves. They have watched dry goods men who have apparently plunged into advertising without regard to expense and have achieved unparalleled success in their ventures. It is a situation which set them thinking and wondering how the same principles might be applied to their own business or how they might be modified and profitably used. Out of all this discussion and turmoil has come the present activities which promise so much for the future. Once again, dealers will not be satisfied until they, too, have reached the pinnacle of success, proportionate to their investment and the extent of their trade. This last is governed by limitations over which they have no control, but which are operative in preventing further extensions of their trade.

"It is, perhaps unnecessary to enumerate all these limitations, but they are undoubtedly such as will occur to any one in the business.

That is, he will say that his own are circumscribed by this or that influence which he cannot change. But he will recognize that within these limitations he still possesses opportunities for improving his business which cannot be questioned and which must, if properly developed, increase his trade and thereby expand his profits.

"All dealers should study their environment and acquire an understanding of what they can do and where they must stop. Development cannot be urged beyond a certain point, but there may be, within that limit, sufficient increase to make a success where now the dealer sees only discouragement. The time has passed when it is safe to proceed upon suppositions. The point now is there must be accurate knowledge. Indeed that has been the rule with all successful merchandising throughout the history of merchandising, but the situation has never been presented in this line quite so forcibly before. Now they have acquired a reasonably clear comprehension of the opportunities which surround them, they are ready to develop these possibilities and create a success. It is easy when once the key to the situation is discovered, but previous to that very few really know what they should do, nor do they understand how they should do it.

"This applies to the small dealer as well as the large. It doesn't mean that the small one is to follow in the footsteps of the large in expenditure. He is merely to expand proportionately as much. It may be that he won't even have to do that. What he does will be in an otherwise uncultivated field, and he will have full benefits from the publicity he does undertake. There is a considerable difference in results whether you are the only one who is inviting attention to a certain line of goods or whether there are many others, some of them bigger than you are, perhaps. It will require no elaborate reasoning to prove this. Any man can see for himself what the effect would be.

"It must not be forgotten, however, that one of the cardinal points of successful and profitable publicity is continuity. To begin to day and let it drop after a brief season of exploitation is a loss of money and effort because when you begin you will have to commence all new. It doesn't take the purchasing public long to forget you. Only constant dinning into their ears that you are engaged in a specific line of business and are offering certain goods will ever bring the proper returns. Spasmodic advertising is nearly as bad as none at all.

THE IDEAL STORE.

The following is taken from one of the trade journals:—

I like to go into a warm store—not steam-heated, particularly, but heart-heated—a store where the proprietor is cordial, obliging and cheerful, where the clerks act like they were glad to see me.

I like to go into a store where I feel welcome. In some stores I have felt like an intruder breaking into a private home.

I like to enter a store by being invited in by attractive window displays. I generally choose a store by the windows and I very seldom find that they misrepresent the quality of the store.

I like to deal with a store where I know the clerks work together pleasantly, where they receive proper credit for what they do, and where the proprietor treats them well.

When I go into a store I like to have the clerk take my complete order and then collect the articles, wrapping them in as few parcels as possible.

I like a store where the clerks know where to find what I want without unnecessary delay.

I like to go into a store where there is plenty of light, both in the daytime and evening, and where there is good ventilation.

I like a store where the shelves are clean and where they do not show dusty cans and packages. I always patronize the cleanest store I can find.

I like to go into a store where the clerks are anxious to wait on me, where they are desirous of showing me goods even though I may not make a purchase.

I like a store where I always get a receipt, for it is the only safe way, and I know I am getting exactly what I pay for.

When goods are delivered or I send after them, I always like to have the store send me a receipt, so that I may know that I get what I ordered.

The ideal store is the one that has these good qualities—and more.

SOMETHING FOR NOTHING.

From the Inland Grocer:

"It is a universal desire to get something for nothing. This is the actuating motive when women crowd the bargain stores. It is the motive which influences men, otherwise sane, to invest their savings in wildcat schemes. But it is always well to watch the man who offers you something for nothing. It is not human nature to freely dispense money or goods upon the consumers of a community.

"The stamp or coupon scheme leads the customer to believe she is getting something without paying for it. No more mistaken idea was ever held by the consuming public.....When the people are educated to the fact that they pay for everything they get, directly or indirectly, the stamp schemes will not increase the business of any merchant.

"Moreover, such a system not only hurts the customer, but also affects the dealer. A dealer says that he is going to give a washing machine as a premium in order to arouse interest among his trade. His proposition would be all right if he were the only grocer who could adopt such a scheme. But his competitor across the street, finding that much of his trade is going after the washing machine, also inaugurates a premium scheme, and puts up a sewing machine. So many coupons are given with every fifty-cent purchase, and are only given when the bill is paid.

"The idea is correct enough. But when one grocer finds that a competitor is drawing his trade, by means of a premium, he also tries the same stunt, but goes the other merchant one better. Another grocer further up the street, finds that grocers A and B are drawing his trade by their premiums, also decides to get into the game. He puts a splendid piano into his window, and advertises that it will be raffled off on a certain date. Coupons cannot be bought outright, but are given with every purchase of twenty-five cents or over.

"By this time the people are getting enthusiastic over premiums. Grocers A and B find that Retailer C is drawing much of their trade. Accordingly they must devise ways and means to keep customers from bidding on Grocer's C's piano. They must go him one better. Thus strife and friction are created. And when all is said and done one grocer is no better off than the other. The theory of the premium business would be all right if there was no competition. Even at that, however, the man who sells the stamps must get his commission, and this must come out of the pockets of the customer and retailer. No man in business gives something for nothing. This is the business of the philanthropist."

THE CANNING OF PUMPKIN.

Clyde Wilson contributes the following article to a recent issue of the Grocers' Magazine:—

"The canner of foods has wrought no finer art than the preserving of pumpkin in convenient tins. Even the farmer who once piled away his winter supply, to take up room and become rotten and dispoil his smoke-house or cellar floor, now hauls them all to the canner and in exchange for a part of them, takes home a year's supply of the canned article, sometimes including a case of gallons, against the coming of "threshers" and "fodder shredders."

"In the canning of pumpkin as in every other article of food now preserved in tin, the present-day factory is far better equipped than any kitchen can be. Particularly is this true in regard to sanitary conditions, for this is the pulse of the business which is constantly felt by the public. Cleanliness is next to godliness, but you will find the former in many factories where there is a dearth of the latter. At no place in the entire process of canning does the meat of the pumpkin come in contact with human hands, and at numerous stages it is subjected to the most thorough washings.

"The home canning of pumpkin is quite impracticable. The home-kitchen, however well equipped, can hardly provide the extreme heat, both for cooking and sterilization, which is absolutely necessary to render negligible the ever-menacing bacteria. In the absence of this intense heat at home, the nearest substitute is a prolonged cooking at lower temperature, which not only bowls over every economic convenience, but sacrifices the wife's leisure—and disposition—to the husband's appetite. The smooth, silken texture and uniform consistency characteristic of high-grade canned pumpkin can be produced only with the swiftly revolving fine screen finishing machines used in the modern cannery.

"A little knowledge of what really constitutes good canned pumpkin will enable the purchaser to use discretion in selecting a brand to stand by. While watery pumpkin is the abomination of every good cook, it must be borne in mind that an extremely dry product is procured only by excessive evaporation, which process is bound to detract from the virgin flavor of the fruit. Neither should one too light in color be chosen. This often betokens the presence of fruit insufficiently ripened, which gives the article a characterless flavor. A happy medium in these things is therefore to be sought.

"The canning of pumpkins is an enterprise of greater magnitude than most people imagine. One packer had on his grounds at one time last season 4,000 tons of this gorgeous fruit—a novel sight. The consumption of it will exceed its present rapid growth when more people learn its uses, other than for pies."

PRODUCING MILK BY THE ACRE.

"How much milk will an acre of land produce?" asks Hoard's Dairyman. "That depends upon two factors: First, the kind of crops raised, and second, upon the ability of the cows kept. It may seem a little far fetched to consider the production of milk by the acre, but let us see if there isn't something to be gained by viewing the subject from this viewpoint. Much has been said, and justly too, of the importance of keeping profitable producing cows, but not enough attention has been given to the crops which would produce the largest amount of suitable food per acre for the dairy cow. The growing of legumes has been urged because they are good feeds for milk cows and beneficial to the land, but there is still another side to this question. And that is, how much digestible nutrients can be raised per acre that may be used to the best advantage for feeding the dairy cow?

"An acre of land that will yield fifty bushels of oats produces 1,100 digestible nutrients, of which 161 pounds are digestible protein. The same quality of land should yield four tons of alfalfa per acre, which will contain 4,000 digestible nutrients of which 880 lbs. are digestible protein. The same quality of land will yield at least ten tons of green corn per acre, which contain about 3,500 digestible nutrients, of which 200 pounds are digestible protein, and the same acre devoted to timothy would produce about 1.5 tons of hay which contain 1,440 pounds of digestible nutrients, of which 84 pounds are digestible protein. Note that land devoted to alfalfa produces nearly 2.5 times as much total nutrients and ten times more protein per acre than when devoted to timothy and land devoted to corn yields 2.5 times as much nutrients.

"If a person desires to get the most out of the land, make it produce the greatest returns, or supply the greatest amount of feed per acre for milk production, the kind of crops to grow must be taken into consideration. If timothy and oats are grown it is plain that less milk will be produced per acre than when alfalfa and corn are grown. In other words one acre of timothy and one acre of oats will produce about 2,500 pounds of digestible nutrients, while the same amount of land devoted to alfalfa and corn will produce 7,500 pounds of digestible nutrients. If nutrients alone are considered, that is paying no attention as to how well adapted they are to milk production, an acre raising corn and alfalfa would produce three times as much milk as an acre devoted to oats and timothy.

"It requires about 750 pounds of digestible nutrients to produce a thousand pounds of milk. Calculating the amount of milk that can be produced upon this basis and ignoring the adaptability of the feeds to produce milk, it will be found that an acre of timothy will grow enough material to produce 1,920 pounds of milk; an acre of corn 4,600 pounds; an acre of oats 1,500 pounds and an acre of alfalfa 5,300 pounds."

INCREASING DAIRY PROFITS.

The following circular was recently issued by H. B. Van Norman, of the University of California:

"Profit is the difference between cost of production and the selling price. To insure the largest profit in milk production, the cow owner must know that each cow in the herd is producing enough milk to pay for the feed, labor, interest, taxes and depreciation, and then leave some for profit. In one herd eleven cows produced $200 worth of butterfat above feed cost, while four others ate $20 worth of feed more than the returns for butterfat paid for. So that the whole fifteen only averaged $15 each above cost of feed. While, if the man had had only the best eleven, he would have had $20 more money, saved the feed and labor of handling the four. The only certain way by which these robber cows can be located is by yearly records of milk production. No man has yet been found who can guess accurately on every cow in a herd. Records may be made by the owner, or by several joining together in a cow test association, and employing a man to do the work.

"Having located the unprofitable cows, and eliminating them, their places can be filled by purchase. The prices are getting high. The best way is through the purchase of a pure bred sire from a profitable cow, and the saving of his daughters out of the best cows in the herd. Each community should adopt one breed and all buy sires of the same breed. In a short time the grade surplus stock will command from $10 to $50 a piece above the common scrub stock, because of the large amount of it to be found in one community and the reputation they will acquire for breeding that one class of stock.

Profits can usually be increased by better feeding. Each cow must have enough food—first, to maintain herself; second, with which to make the milk she yields, and any surplus above this is stored up in the form of fat to be used later when she don't get enough food. The cow that has the ability to produce forty pounds of milk a day and is only fed enough to make twenty-five or thirty pounds, does not make milk as cheap as she would when fed to her capacity. In the judgment of the writer, the dairy cow that has the ability to make thirty pounds of milk a day or better, cannot eat enough alfalfa hay to enable her to do her best work, and she should be fed some sort of grain or by-product concentrate low in protein to supplement the alfalfa eaten. Every cow must have enough feed. The feed she does eat must contain the minimum amount of protein required for her maintenance and for production of milk. An insufficient amount of feed limits production.

SANITARY DAIRYING.

"The methods commonly employed in the production of milk are so faulty and the evils resulting from the use of impure milk of such a serious nature," says State Dairy Inspector R. S. Smith, of the Maine Department of Agriculture, "that everyone interested in the public welfare should be anxious to do his share to bring about an improvement. In many cities and towns of the state, much attention is paid to the water supply and Boards of Health send samples to be analyzed each month in order to secure a sanitary water supply for their people. Large sums of money are now expended in obtaining good and pure water, yet in most cities and towns no attention is given to the quality of milk furnished, which to many, especially the children, is of even greater moment than the water supply.

"But in few cities and towns of the State is it possible to get a regular supply of milk that has been produced and handled in a sanitary way, thoroughly cooled and properly bottled, and which parents feel sure is safe for infant feeding. Of course there are many exceptions and these are among the men who have their business at heart and who strive for a higher standard and to these men the public must eventually turn, reimburse them properly and receive sanitary milk.

"From analysis and samples of milk and cream secured from dealers in the past few years in this State the most common fault is that it contained visible sediment (dirt).

"This is a serious factor to be considered in the health of our people for no other article of food is so generally used by all classes. No other food is more healthful and economical than clean cold milk and more dangerous to health when carelessly handled.

"Milk being an opaque liquid its quality and cleanly condition cannot be easily detected by its appearance. Many infants and invalids subsist almost, if not entirely, upon milk, and it is of vital importance that milk for such persons be as pure and free from bacteria as possible.

"Milk is an ideal medium for the growth of germs of all kinds. Because of this fact it is especially important that it be handled with the greatest care so that no disease germs may be allowed to gain access to it. Dirt in its proper place is a valuable agricultural asset but when found in milk it is a sign of unclean dairying and criminal carelessness. It is difficult to convince a person who has never cleaned a separator bowl that average milk contains considerable quantities of dirt and manure. But an examination of separator slime would convince the most skeptical that painstaking methods in dairying are necessary if we expect to sell or consume clean or wholesome milk products.

"Dairymen pay dearly for the dirt in milk caused by using the old type of open pail and unclean methods in general. Dirt in milk usually means sour cream checks from the creamery and dissatisfied customers and low prices because of poor quality. Butter of good flavor cannot be made from cream skimmed from dirty milk and this low quality of butter is responsible in a large degree for low butterfat prices.

"The efforts that have been made to induce dairymen to use sanitary methods in handling their milk have often resulted in failure. One important reason is evident, for milk cannot be produced under strictly sanitary conditions as cheaply as in the common everyday manner. Whenever the price of the product is raised, the consumer, not appreciating any added value, to the milk, usually objects to paying the advanced price. This naturally discourages the progressive dairyman who is trying to do right and he makes no further efforts.

"Criticising the milkman and expecting officials to bring about the production and delivery of the cleanest milk without a fair compensation to the farmer and dealer is a state-wide condition. It is usually those who criticise most who are most unwilling to buy clean milk even though they have the opportunity to do so. If such critics would take the producer's place, the error they are laboring under would be quickly demonstrated and the fact that milk producers in general are none too well paid would be confirmed.

"The honest milk dealers who have been and are still furnishing clean milk have been and are still having a hard fight with dishonest competition and the indifference of the public. The most effective remedy for this difficulty at present is for the public to patronize only those who furnish a good grade of milk and are willing to guarantee it."

THE MEAT SUPPLY.

"Either more meat must be produced somewhere, or else hundreds of thousands of Americans must stop eating it," says the Youth's Companion. "If any one doubts the remark, he has only to consult the government reports on the subject to be convinced. They show that on January, 1907, there were 75,534,000 cattle on the farms and ranges of the United States, and that on January 1st of the present year the number had fallen to 56,527,000, a decrease of 19,000,000 in six years.

"Our exports of cattle and fresh beef have almost ceased, but as we never sent abroad in one year more beef than could have been produced by 1,500,000 cattle, we cannot console ourselves with the thought that we are keeping our beef at home instead of selling to foreigners. There has been an actual decrease in the supply of beef available for home consumption, and at the same time an increase in the number of people to eat it.

"The scarcity has affected the price of meat in all parts of the country. On the Pacific coast consumers have been forced to seek relief from Australia. When this article was written three ship-loads of Australian beef had arrived, consigned directly to the retail butchers, who sold from fifteen to twenty cents less a pound than they charge for native meat.

"Three ship-loads would supply San Francisco and its suburbs for a little more than a week, if none but Australian beef were eaten, but the incident shows we can draw on the rest of the world when prices at home become intolerable.

"And yet, even if the Pacific coast should get all its meat from Australia, the Atlantic coast would be little better off. The eastern part of the country must look to Argentina or to some other South American country for relief. American business men of foresight marked the signs of the times several years ago, and began to buy cattle ranges in Argentina. They and others are now shipping frozen beef to Europe to supply the market once filled by American beef. In the Netherlands, for example, Argentina beef sells for one third less than European meat, and finds a ready market. In all probability it will soon be sold in New York and Philadelphia and other Atlantic coast cities—if, indeed, it has not already found its way there.

"Unless American farmers raise more meat, this country will inevitably be dependent on Australia and Argentina, and when that happens the price of meat from those countries will raise to the American level. The Department of Agriculture is trying to prevent that. It points out that, as the great western ranges in this country have been cut up into farms, the small farmers, being freed from its competition of the big ranches, can now raise beef with profit at home."

THE GREAT WASTE.

It is figured out by department at Washington that the waste in skimmed milk and buttermilk in the manufacture of butter in the whole country contains an aggregate of over a billion pounds of protein and more than a billion and a half of milk sugar. If to this is added the 81,000,000 pounds of protein and the 186,000,000 pounds of milk sugar contained in the whey left from the manufacture of cheese, they make an aggregate of 2,760,000,000 pounds of very valuable food materials. This gives thirty-seven pounds for each inhabitant of this country, and it is unfortunate that the greater part of this goes to waste. Of course it is true that the skimmed milk carried from the creameries back to the farm is well utilized in feeding stock, but too much valuable by-product is thrown away with most of the buttermilk and all the whey.

THE HOUSE FLY AND BACTERIA.

From the American Journal of Public Health:—In response to a general demand for more definite knowledge on this subject Doctors Cox, Lewis, and Glynn, working in the Thompson-Yerkes laboratories in Liverpool, have made a very thorough comparative study of "the number and varieties of bacteria carried by the common house fly in sanitary and unsanitary city areas." Their study is reported in the Journal of Hygiene. Descriptions of the areas investigated are given, together with the method of catching the flies, of estimating the number of bacteria carried, etc. It is possible here to indicate only the most important conclusions reached in the summary of the work.

1. Over 450 naturally infected flies were examined, and it was found that the amount of pollution of a liquid from the flies vomitus or excrement, or from their wallowing in the liquid, varied from 2,000 bacteria in five minutes to 350,000 in thirty minutes.

2. Flies from sanitary areas carried from 21,000 to 800,000 bacteria, while from the congested unsanitary districts the number was from 800,000 to 500,000,000 per fly.

3. The number of intestinal organisms on flies from the two types of districts held the same relationship, sanitary areas showing 100 to 10,000, unsanitary areas 10,000 to 333,000,000 per fly.

4. Pathogenic bacteria and those allied to the food-poisoning group were isolated from flies from the unsanitary areas, never from the sanitary areas.

5. Other organisms isolated were streptococci, staphylococci, sarcina.

6. Flies caught in milk stores were more highly contaminated than those from food establishments.

7. If food is abundant flies migrate only very short distances, so that the number and degree of contamination often may be taken as criteria of the sanitation of the area.

8. Organisms identical to Morgan's infantile diarrhea group were isolated.

9. As the amount of dirt carried by flies in any particular locality, measured in terms of bacteria, bears a definite relation to the habits of the people and the state of the streets, it demonstrates the necessity of efficient municipal and domestic cleanliness, if the food of the inhabitants is to escape pollution not only with harmless but also with occasional pathogenic bacteria.

FARM LAND FOR FARMING.

Minnesota knows how to advertise, says The Country Gentleman. The State Board of Immigration of Minnesota is conducted by men who are going about the big work of settling Minnesota in a live way. The immigration board is also an information bureau. It is run by men who are earnestly endeavoring to attract the right kind of settlers. They are advertising the state's farm land as farm land—not as one-crop gardens that reduce farming to the pleasant pastime of lotus eating and coupon clipping. Farming is represented as a business and not as an ideal form of recreation.

There are 19,000,000 acres of developed farm land in Minnesota and there are 27,000,000 undeveloped acres. There are 155,759 developed farms and room for the development of 165,000 more of the average area of 160 acres. The cost of these farm lands, you are informed ranges from $8 an acre for wild land in Northern Minnesota to $125 for improved land in Southern Minnesota.

These are alluring prices in view of what some of the far western states are advertising their land to be worth. Minnesota is not emphasizing the high spots, which is the wisest policy. The immigration board has general statistics to offer, but there are few suggestions of the get-rich-quick variety. This official advertising and boosting board is located at St. Paul and it yearns to get the ear of the land seeker. There is no doubt that the gentlemen who conduct the board have a lot of interesting information on tap.

When a public service organization of this kind does not bear too heavily on the loud pedal it is worth listening to.

CONCERNING THE OYSTER AND ITS DETRACTORS.

The observance of "Oyster Week" all over the United States during the month of October has drawn renewed attention to the "luscious bivalve," and induced its friends to come to its defense against certain sensational and libelous utterances calculated to frighten timid souls into abstaining from an article of food which is not only delicious but also healthful and nourishing to an extraordinary degree. A sincere effort has been made to present the facts of the case to public attention in a practical and forcible way, so as to show conclusively by the testimony of acknowledged experts that the stories circulated some time ago to the effect that the oyster is peculiarly susceptible to typhoid germs and is often grown in infected waters are absolutely false and that no article of food on the market is grown or prepared for the trade under greater safeguards. As thousands upon thousands of dollars are invested in the oyster trade—aggregating many millions, and as the bivalves furnish a cheap and nourishing food it is encouraging to observe that sensationalism is being routed while the facts are coming to the front. Stories which are wholly false should not be assisted to permeate the community and it is especially important that fallacious and injurious declarations concerning so vital an article of daily use in the household should be met at the outset and shown to be founded upon a vivid imagination rather than on the facts.

As a Cheap Article of Food.

Mr. Henry S. Rowe, of Groton, Conn., is the president of the Oyster Growers' and Dealers' Association. In a recent interview with the Daily Traveler-Herald, of Boston, that gentleman called attention to the fact that while the prices of many food products have advanced tremendously in a comparatively few years, making them too expensive for daily or frequent use, oysters may still be had at prices no higher than those of ten years and more ago. President Rowe quoted from the bureau of chemistry at Washington upon the subject of possible dangers in the use of oysters: "I wish that the number of dangerous sources of milk supply was as small and the percentage of pure, wholesale milk as great as the percentage of wholesome, safe oysters that reach our tables."

Coming to the Defense of the Bivalve.

The Boston Sunday Herald recently indulged in an exhaustive review of the claims of the oyster upon public confidence. Referring to the various accusations made against it the Herald said that the men who are back of the oyster have determined to make complete and sufficient answer to the stories set afloat by sensational writers. In the past, the oyster growers say, timid people have been deprived of a nutritious, easily digested, valuable and economical food simply because they have been frightened by misstated facts. It has been decided that the whole controversy must be settled once and for all, and, with that in view, eminent scientists have been called in to give opinions that will be of real value.

The experts who have come to the defense of the oyster include Professor E. B. Phelps, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology; Professor Julius Nelson, of Rutgers College, biologist of the New Jersey State Agricultural College experiment station, and Dr. Frederick Gorham, associate professor of biology at Brown University and sanitary expert of the Rhode Island Shellfish Commission.

The Testimony of Dr. Alsberg.

To the evidence of these gentlemen, even more effective, the Oyster Growers' Association adds the testimony of Dr. Carl L. Alsberg, successor to Dr. Wiley as chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture. The gist of Dr. Alsberg's testimony has been quoted in connection with the statement of Dr. Rowe. It expresses the conviction that if the milk supply of the country were as safe as the oyster supply it would be a fine thing for the health of the consuming public and would very materially reduce the number of cases of typhoid fever.

Oysters Good in May.

Oyster growers say that it has been satisfactorily proved that oysters are in better flavor in March, April and May than they are in February. This statement is particularly interesting because it runs counter to the popular superstition that the delicacy should be eaten only in months that contain the letter "R." But oysters are good in May just the same. So far as the other months without the "R" are concerned the old rule holds. If the winter is severe, the experts assert, oysters do not have as much of their natural food as they should and frequently lose a little of their plumpness in January and February.

As soon as the weather begins to get warmer in March and April the beautiful little microscopic diatoms, which constitute the principal food of the oyster, multiply much more rapidly, and consequently the oysters grow fat and improve in texture and flavor, so that they are frequently at their best in April and May. In June they begin to grow milky, and while perfectly wholesome, the flavor is not so appetizing as during the fall, winter and spring. The oyster growers point out that during the past two years there has not been a single authenticated case in the United States in which death has been traced to the eating of oysters, although one case has been claimed by the critics of the oyster.

Pleads Not Guilty.

"During the same period," reads the association's official statement, "hundreds of thousands of persons have died from drinking impure water or impure milk, and yet sensationalists have published much about the oyster because it is a novelty. So far as the evidence goes, it is a thousand times as dangerous to drink milk as it is to eat oysters, and it is a hundred times as dangerous to go on a railroad train, or to go in an automobile, or to walk the streets as it is to eat oysters."

There have been some instances in the past fifteen years in which illness was ascribed to eating oysters, but in most of these cases, where circumstances permitted a thorough investigation, it was found that the accusations against the oysters originated in the imagination and in one or two cases at least, to a desire to attract attention on the part of persons who placed the matter in print.

Beds Carefully Selected.

"It is no longer permitted to market oysters from the grounds formerly used in the vicinity of large cities. Bacteriologists are employed by State authorities to examine the oysters and the waters where they grow and certificates are issued covering only such grounds as are suitable. Wherever the standard of purity is not fully maintained the marketing of the oysters is strictly forbidden."

"The cause of most of the complaints against oysters consists in the fact that if a writer can acquire public notice by making a sensational attack upon oysters or any other food, he can thereby place himself in a position of great personal advantage, although to the reckless injury of others. The slogan of 'pure food' is a very effective one and deserves to be so, but if it is abused in order to build up a personal prominence which can then be used for the purpose of financial benefit to its possessor, then the assertions need to be carefully scanned in order to make due allowance for exaggeration. The best authorities pronounce oysters wholesome and easily digested. They are certainly economical, as there are no bones or waste and the price is reasonable."

Refutes Slanders.

In a paper upon "The Wholesomeness of Oysters as a Food," presented to the International Fisheries Congress held at Washington as long ago as 1908, Henry C. Rowe, who is now president of the Oyster Growers and Dealers' Association of North America, as has been noted already, first started the movement to overcome the unreasonable prejudice which has been inculcated by sensational writers. After showing the unreasonable nature of this prejudice, he closed as follows:

"The limits of this paper forbid the introduction of a vast amount of available evidence along these lines, but it is clear that compared with the conclusive proof of the occasional danger in the use of milk and water, the evidence against the wholesomeness of oysters is so trifling as to be negligible. Let me repeat that I do not urge or imply the disuse of milk and water but merely use a comparison with which we are all familiar, and I believe it is clear that so long as milk and water are freely and universally partaken of, it is unreasonable to harbor the least prejudice against oysters as food."

The Boston Herald sums up by declaring that during the time that has elapsed since the delivery of this paper, Mr. Rowe has been in constant conflict with the forces of slander and sensationalism. One scientist after another has joined in rebuking the intemperate and indiscriminate attacks that have been made upon oysters until the present most important utterance upon the subject which has been made by Dr. Alsberg.

Bacteriology as Applied to Oysters.

Among the many applications of scientific research in recent years is the employment of bacteriology in connection with oysters. Most of the oyster propagation, or oyster farming, is now carried on in the great open bodies of waters where they are constantly swept by the great currents of salt sea water, which produce perfectly pure and delicious oysters.

The supply of wild oysters from the creeks and estuaries where they formerly grew has become exhausted, the said creeks and estuaries having long since been depleted, and the use of oysters from the rivers and harbors has been almost entirely discontinued. In the few places of that sort still used bacteriology has been applied to good advantage, as for instance, in the "Providence river," so-called, or upper part of Narragansett bay. The marketing of oysters from these grounds has been discontinued, upon bacterial examination, by order of the state authorities, who have directed that when any of the oyster beds fail to measure up to the required standard they are not allowed to be marketed, while the oyster beds that are found to be bacteriologically pure receive certificates permitting their use. Regular official examinations are made of both the waters and the oysters. In the state of Rhode Island the examinations are made by the official state bacteriologist, Dr. Frederick P. Gorham, who is also assistant professor of bacteriology in Brown university. Dr. Leo F. Rettger, of Yale university, examines oysters in Connecticut, while other well-known scientists perform similar work in other states.

Oyster packing houses, packages and equipment are also inspected, and the oyster men declare that those who are fond of this delicacy can always obtain oysters which are not only delicious, economical and palatable, but are also certified to be pure and wholesome. It is interesting to observe the precautions that are taken by the various states within whose borders the oyster grows as well as by the packers and venders throughout the country to protect the public against mishap through infection and it is clear that they are entitled to much credit for their effective action. It is a fine example they are setting to others who supply the food of the people.

AN OPINION OF CONSIDERABLE IMPORTANCE.

Some months ago the Erie county court, Judge Walling presiding, tried a case of much interest to ice cream manufacturers and venders as well as to the general public. One Crowl was arrested on the charge of selling ice cream containing butter-fat below the standard fixed by the act regulating the manufacture and sale of ice cream. He was convicted. The attorneys for the defense then made a motion in arrest of judgment, declaring unconstitutional the act under which conviction had been secured, and advancing many arguments in support of their contention. Judge Walling declined to consider the motion favorably, affirmed the verdict and held that it is properly within the police powers of the state to regulate the sale of ice cream. The case was then carried to the superior court where, after argument, Judge Henderson, speaking for the entire court, handed down an opinion sustaining Judge Walling in every particular. The case has since been appealed to the supreme court of Pennsylvania and it is said that if that body sustains the superior court there will be a further appeal to the supreme court of the United States. The defense in this case is backed by the National Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers and the proceedings are attracting national interest. Copies of Judge Henderson's opinion have been requested by the Dairy and Food Departments of many states. On account of the great interest it has evoked we reprint the opinion in full, as follows:

IN THE SUPERIOR COURT OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Commonwealth { No. 71 April Term 1913.
v. { Appeal Q. S. Erie County.
A. B. Crowl. { Filed February 27, 1913.

Henderson, J.:

The first proposition presented by the appellant is that the title of the Act of March 24, 1909, does not comply with the requirements of section three of article three of the Constitution of Pennsylvania, in that it does not give sufficient notice of the provisions of section four of the statute under which the indictment was drawn. The title to the act is: "An act for the protection of the public health and to prevent fraud and deception in the manufacture, sale, offering for sale, exposing for sale and having in possession with intent to sell, of adulterated or deleterious ice cream; fixing a standard of butter fat for ice cream; providing penalties for the violation thereof and providing for the enforcement thereof." The fourth section provides that; "No ice cream shall be sold within the State containing less than eight per centum of butter fat, except where fruits or nuts are used for the purpose of flavoring, when it shall not contain less than six per centum in butter fat." We need not refer to the numerous cases which hold that it is not necessary that the title to an act be an index of the subjects legislated about. It is sufficient if it comprehend the subject involved and fairly puts the inquirer on notice. This act has a single subject and the title covers it with a comprehensiveness more complete than is usual in legislation. It declares the purpose of the act and gives notice that penalties are provided for a violation of its terms. One of the things particularly brought to the notice of the reader is that it fixes a standard of butter fat for ice cream, and it was for the violation of the law with reference to this provision that the defendant was convicted. We have no doubt that all the provisions of the statute are cognate with the title. It is next contended that the enactment is not within the police power of the State in so far as it fixes a standard of butter fat for ice cream. We do not understand that there is any contention that that portion of the fourth section which forbids the manufacture or sale of adulterated or deleterious ice cream is not a proper subject of legislation. We are only concerned, therefore, with the inquiry whether a statute which fixes a standard of quality for ice cream is within the police power. The purpose of the act was to suppress false pretenses and to secure honest dealing in the sale of an article of food. That ice cream is in general use is admitted; that it is largely composed of milk and cream is shown by the evidence in the case. Its name implies the use of cream in its composition and all of the authorities to which the learned counsel for the appellant refers show that milk and cream are constituents in its composition. It enters so largely into the food supply of the public as to have become a proper subject of legislation especially in view of the opportunities which its manufacture affords to practice imposition. In the popular understanding it is largely composed of milk of which butter fat is an important constituent. If by the exercise of ingenuity and by the practice of unwarranted thrift a product can be put on the market having the name and appearance of ice cream, but lacking the chief element which gives its value as an article of food, a large opportunity would be afforded to dealers in that article to profit by deception and it is the opportunity for such deceit of which the police power takes notice and seeks to take away. It is not necessary that injury has been done or a wrong perpetrated. The possibility that such results may take place warrants legislative intervention under the police power. We are not concerned with the wisdom of legislation under this power. Our only inquiry is whether the power exists. Sovereignty is in the people and is expressed through their legislative representatives by the enactment of their will into laws. Their authority is general except as restrained by the Constitution of the Commonwealth or the Constitution of the United States, and among legislative capacities one of the largest is the exercise of the police power. It is more easily described than defined, but that it extends to the protection of the lives, health and property of the citizens and to the preservation of good order and the public morals cannot be questioned and these objects are to be provided for by such legislation as the discretion of the law making body may deem appropriate. It is not a successful denial of the exercise of these powers to say that the prohibited article is wholesome and not injurious to the consumer. The wholesomeness of the prohibited thing will not render the act unconstitutional. The temptation to fraud and adulteration may be a consideration leading to regulative or prohibitive legislation. If it were not so courts would become the triers of the expediency of such legislation and the authority which the people committed to the Legislature would be transferred by judicial action to the courts. Where a statute is clearly and palpably violative of the Constitution it is the duty of the courts to declare it invalid in the respects in which it is repugnant to this supreme law, but the presumptions are all in favor of the validity of legislative enactments and the burden is on him who asserts the contrary to make it clear beyond doubt that the constitutional power has been exceeded. It has been the policy of this State to legislate on the subject of milk and milk products and statutes have been enacted which made it unlawful for any person to sell milk which contained less than a fixed percentage of butter fat and less than a certain percentage of milk solids; making it unlawful to sell cream which contained less than a fixed percentage of butter fat; which classified cheese and fixed the percentage of butter fat which the various classes of cheese should contain; and similar legislation has been enacted in other states; State v. Campbell, 64 N. H. 404; Com. v. Waite, 11 Allen 264; State v. Smyth, 14 R. I. 100. Legislation of a like character is found in the Act of May 21, 1901, forbidding the sale of vinegar which contains less than four per cent. of absolute acetic acid. If the sale of pure milk containing less than three and one fourth per cent. of butter fat may be prohibited it is not apparent why the same principle does not apply to ice cream. Milk is a natural product—wholesome and useful for food. The milk of many cows contains less than three and one fourth per cent. of butter fat. The owners of such cattle have a constitutional right to sell the product of their dairies but this right has been held to be subordinate to the public welfare and this welfare demands that a fixed minimum standard of butter fat shall exist in the whole milk sold in this Commonwealth. The known disposition of some dealers to cheat and the opportunity afforded them by the absence of some regulation of the business is the justification of such legislation under the police power. Through such laws the consumers have the assurance that that which they buy is what it is called and what it appears to be and the opportunity for imposition in selling an adulterated or inferior article of food for that which is wholesome and of a supposed standard of quality is removed. The integrity of the act is not affected by the provisions that where fruits and nuts are used for flavoring six per cent. of butter fat shall be required in ice cream. It is obvious that the addition of fruits and nuts to a given quantity of ice cream would diminish the percentage of butter fat and it was apparently a consideration of this fact which caused the distinction between ice cream flavored with extracts and that to which nuts or fruits were added. No discrimination is made between individuals or preference given to particular manufacturers by this legislation and no substantial reason is advanced which would make such a regulation destructive of the whole statute.

It is not an objection to the prosecution that it was not commenced by the Dairy and Food Commissioner. That functionary was specially charged with the enforcement of the provisions of the statute but that did not disable any citizen of the Commonwealth from appearing as a prosecutor. The offense is a misdemeanor and a prosecution for a violation of the act might be instituted by any person inclined so to do.

The appellant further contends that the act under consideration was repealed by the Act of May 13, 1909, relating to food; defining food; and providing for the protection of the public health and the prevention of fraud and deception, etc. A comparison of the two acts shows that the latter contains no provision with reference to the quantity of butter fat necessary in ice cream, nor any provision which is inconsistent with the fourth section of the act of March 24, 1909, and as there is no express repeal, none arises by necessary implication. An earlier statute is repealed only in those particulars wherein it is clearly inconsistent and irreconcilable with later enactments. The antagonism must be so great as to convince the mind that the last enactment repealed the former. The objects of the two statutes are not the same and if so both can stand, though they may refer to the same subject. Moreover, both of these acts were passed at the same session of the legislature and the latter only a few weeks after the former. Under such circumstances there is a presumption against an implied repeal.

We do not regard the examination suggested in the 12th and 13th assignments as permissible. The evidence of the experts as to the possibility that samples of ice cream taken from different parts of a can might or would exhibit a variation of butter fat content would not aid the jury in determining what were the constituents of the sample which the prosecuting witness bought and which the chemist for the Commonwealth analyzed. Mr. Pelton, a witness for the Commonwealth, testified that he bought a pint of chocolate ice cream from the defendant; that he asked for chocolate ice cream and that the defendant delivered to him a pint of ice cream which had the appearance of chocolate ice cream. It was this pint of ice cream which was analyzed and for the sale of which the defendant was prosecuted. It was shown to have had less than three per cent. of butter fat. Theories about what might have been found in some other part of the can from which the witness got his pint would not throw any light on the case. We are unable to obtain a point of view of the case from which we can observe any error in its trial. The case was fairly presented by the learned trial judge and the law expounded in accordance with the principles which govern the case on the undisputed facts.

The assignments are overruled, the judgment is affirmed and the record remitted to the court below to the end that the sentence may be carried into execution.

THE DAIRY FARMER AND HIS CRITICS.

Those who abuse the dairy farmer for what they are pleased to style his greed would come to a different conclusion if they were to embark in the business of producing milk and its various products. The farmer of today has been affected by the high cost of living just as his town neighbors have been, although scarcely to the same extent. Still his expenses have increased enormously. Twelve years ago a farm hand could be procured for about $15. a month. Now he demands and receives $35. A cow that was worth $40. then is worth $70. today. Bran meal, which is fed extensively for producing milk, cost about $12 a ton, now it cannot be had for less than $28. Just what tremendous increase of expense this has been to the farmers of Pennsylvania can be understood when it is stated that the Keystone State has approximately 218,000 farms, averaging 100 acres, each, on which there are about a million cows used for dairy purposes.

Here are a few more figures of suggestive interest: During the twelve year period mentioned above there has been a considerable growth in the population of Pennsylvania and of the nation. There are perhaps no more cows in the country now than at the beginning of the period; if anything there has been a decrease. There is a greater demand for milk from many quarters. The increased population naturally enlarges the call for this essential fluid. There has been an increase in the dairy demand. The cheese consumption has doubled. The demand of the ice cream manufacturers has increased from 50,000,000 gallons to 120,000,000 gallons.

We have collected and presented the foregoing figures for the information of that portion of the public who spend much time in berating the dairy farmers for the high price of dairy products and charging them with gathering riches at the cost of the people who must eat to live. According to unchallenged figures every pound of butter made by the farmer costs him, at least, twenty-five cents and he makes practically nothing out of his herd of cows save the enrichment of his soil by the manure obtained. We ought to look into the facts before accusing anybody and the facts in connection with the farmer and his cows show that he is not the cormorant some folks are disposed to believe him. On the contrary he passes more than one anxious hour and the profits gathered from the milk industry and its products are very largely of the invisible kind. If some of the critics were to go into the business of raising cows and selling milk they might change their tune as have many who have gone into the dairy farming as a fad.

THE SALE OF ADULTERATED VINEGAR.

Early in the summer a state wide crusade against merchants who sell vinegar as "cider vinegar," when in reality the stuff is a concoction, was announced by State Dairy and Food Commissioner, James Foust. Already many samples have been lifted and more than half of these have been tested and found to be impure. A corresponding number of prosecutions have already been ordered, and the Commissioner stated emphatically that the entire pure food department will do nothing but wage war against the vinegar business, until it has been raised to the standard prescribed by law.

There are a score or more of merchants who are selling vinegar which they claim is pure cider vinegar, but which never knew an apple. The grocers, in the main, are ignorant of the fact that they are violating the law, although the fact that they are only paying twelve cents a gallon for the vinegar should be sufficient proof that it is not cider vinegar they are selling.

The State law provides that "no vinegar shall be sold or exposed for sale as apple or cider vinegar which is not the legitimate product of pure apple juice, or vinegar not made exclusively of said apple cider."

During the past year or two, a large percentage of the merchants have been purchasing their vinegar from the Western part of Pennsylvania or Ohio. This vinegar can be purchased at twelve cents a gallon, while most of the firms give an extra barrel when five or six barrels are purchased. This vinegar is made from wood acid, which is injurious to health. Up until a short time ago, it was impossible to detect, by analysis, the presence of wood acid in vinegar; but recently the United States Bureau of Chemistry discovered a system for accurate tests whereby the fraud can be discovered.

Pure cider vinegar sells for about 16 to 18 cents a gallon, and cannot be purchased below this price. It is retailed for 8 cents a quart, or 25 cents a gallon, so that there is still a good profit in selling the bonafide article.

During the spring every agent of the food department was engaged in lifting samples of vinegar. And the four chemists of the department did nothing else but analyze these samples. It has been found that over fifty per cent. of the samples of the so-called cider vinegar were the poorest kinds of imitations.

Arrests have been ordered, and the State law regarding vinegar does not contain a guarantee clause, so that every grocer who sells the vinegar has been or will be prosecuted.

The sale of doped cider vinegar has spread over three states, viz., Pennsylvania, New York and Ohio, and in discussing the matter the Commissioner stated that he would advise every merchant to examine his vinegar supply closely, and if he has a stock of so-called cider vinegar that was purchased at a low figure, it should be poured into the drain, as being more economical than paying a stiff fine and the costs.

In speaking of the matter, Mr. Foust said: "In almost two out of every three grocery stores, the stuff that is sold for cider vinegar was manufactured without being near an apple. The stuff the vinegar is composed of is injurious to health and until the vinegar supply in the State comes up to the requirements, I will have my men continue the investigation.

There is a goodly profit in vinegar, even when the best brands are purchased. The season for preserving and pickling stuffs for winter consumption is rapidly approaching, and I want to protect housewives against fraud. I will not stop the crusade until every drop of doped vinegar is out of the State."

WHAT THE COURT SAYS CONCERNING DIRTY MILK.

The following article dealing with a court decision concerning the sale of dirty milk is taken from the Weekly Bulletin of the Department of Health of the City of New York:

A milk dealer in the city of Washington was tried before the police court of the District of Columbia for having sold milk that was adulterated in that it "consisted in whole or in part, of filthy, decomposed and putrid animal and vegetable substances" and had thereby violated the national food and drugs act. The milk in question contained large numbers of colon bacilli and streptococci, indicating unsanitary production or handling of the milk. The defendant was found guilty and appealed, but the court of appeals of the District of Columbia sustained the conviction in a decision rendered February 25, 1913. Mr. Justice Van Orsdel in delivering the opinion of the court spoke in part as follows:

"The facts established by the evidence are that on February 27, 1911, a pint bottle of milk was purchased from one of the defendant's wagons, and taken to the laboratory of the Bacteriological Bureau of the Health Department where it was analyzed and found to contain 4,500 bacteria on ordinary agar, 37 degrees centigrade, grown for twenty-four hours, and 89,400,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. On ordinary agar, 25 degrees centigrade, grown forty-eight hours, it contained 83,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter of the colon group. It showed gas fermentation in one ten-thousandth of a cubic centimeter, apparently fifteen drops and one streptococcus to one ten-thousandth of a cubic centimeter.

"It appears that the bacterium known as B coli or colon bacillus originates in and is a normal constituent of the colon of all warm-blooded animals, is discharged in the excreta and found in milk as the result of fecal contamination. When present in milk it always occurs from either direct or indirect fecal deposit therein; directly from carelessness in permitting particles of feces to get into the milk during the process of extracting the milk from the cow, or in handling it afterwards; indirectly from dust, vegetation, water, and air where the bacillus is found—originally derived, however, from animal feces. The evidence disclosed by scientific investigation is that colon bacillus is a vegetable formation originating in animal intestines, and nowhere else. It is not found in air dust, water or vegetation under conditions indicating different origin or its original favorable conditions colon bacillus will multiply and develop in milk with great rapidity. The present analysis, in the light of the evidence, reveals the presence of colon bacillus to have resulted from a direct deposit of feces in the milk, due to uncleanly methods in handling the milk.

"It is urged that since it is impossible to produce milk entirely free from bacteria, the statute imposes a duty impossible of performance, and cannot, therefore, be applied to milk, or, if possible of performance, it could only be complied with at so great a cost as to result in the destruction and confiscation of the business. It is not clear from the evidence that the enforcement of the act will produce this result. The present case does not present this difficulty, except in theory; since the contamination was so great as to place it within the statute beyond the domain of speculation. Not only did the milk in question contain bacteria of the colon group, but, as incident thereto, fecal matter, all of which, it appears may be eliminated by the adoption of cleanly methods in handling milk. In fact, it appears that samples from the dairy of plaintiff in error have been analyzed which were free from bacteria of the colon group. One witness testified that he has encountered milk, samples of raw milk and samples of pasteurized milk, free from bacteria of the colon group; has seen samples of defendant's that did not contain them, milk sold as raw milk and analyzed on that assumption.

"We are not dealing with a regulation relating to milk alone, but with an act generally regulating the sale of food products. Milk is a food product; and, if found to be impure, it will be held to be "adulterated" within the provisions of the act. There is evidence that it is impossible to produce raw milk which does not contain bacteria; that a limited number of bacteria in milk are practically harmless. It is unnecessary to decide whether, under such circumstances, milk would be held to come within the act, since in the present case adulteration is clearly established. The dividing line between pure and impure or adulterated food is in each instance a question of fact; but, because of the scientific distinction involved, and the impossibility of producing raw milk entirely free from bacteria, it may be much more difficult of ascertainment in the case of milk than of other food products. Owing to the great difficulty which may be encountered in justly enforcing the law, in the absence of a fixed standard defining what is marketably pure and impure milk, in a case where the adulteration consists alone in the presence of comparatively small numbers of so-called harmless bacteria, it may well be that congress should give attention to this subject, as has been done in many of the States, and establish a fixed standard for marketable milk, whereby milk found to contain a greater number of bacteria than that fixed by the act should come within the condemnation of the law."

The state of Pennsylvania has a special act dealing with the milk problem and the milk supply is gradually reaching the proper standard. True, a good many prosecutions are still entered from month to month, but the situation is already much better than it was before the passage of the present act and we are confident that the improvement is going to prove continuous. As has been said many times in these pages the state of the milk supply is necessarily a matter of vital importance since it is the one essential food of infancy and childhood and is likewise indispensable in the daily living of the adult population also. Unfit milk, adulterated milk, poisoned milk, has been responsible for thousands of deaths every year. The courts do well to supplement the efforts of the health and food authorities to make the business of purveying dirty milk or adulterated milk a very risky one. This they have been doing in a very gratifying manner. The result of their work is seen on every hand and is as gratifying as it is important. Already a satisfactory decline in infant mortality has taken place in several large cities of the country and we are merely at the beginning of the campaign.

THE HOUSEKEEPERS' LEAGUE AT WORK.

Acting upon a suggestion made through the St. Paul Dispatch by the editor of the Dairy Record, the St. Paul's Housewives' League started out not long ago to investigate conditions in the ice cream plants and creameries of the city. Up to the time this was written they seem to have confined their investigations to the ice cream plants, and the Record declares that the conditions found were "horrible." This is what Mrs. Marion Cole Fisher, a member of the investigating committee told the St. Paul Dispatch.

Among other things the lady said: "We had no idea that conditions were so unsanitary. In one of the plants we made up our minds that conditions there were almost irremediable. We have decided to go through all the dairies and creameries in the city, but we know that conditions could not be any worse than in this plant." The lady added that it was the purpose of the members of the committee to visit the plants when visitors were not expected. The idea was to observe the factories at work under ordinary conditions. And naturally, that is the only fair way.

The editor of the Dairy Record applauds the useful work of the ladies and urges them to keep right on and to give the public the benefit of their investigations. He also urges them to enlarge the scope of their work so as to permit the examination of the raw material used in the creameries. He believes in pure butter and is convinced that this cannot be made from cream from four to fourteen days old. No doubt they will take his advice and thereby do a powerful sight of good. For no force is more powerful, none more effective than that of aroused and resolute womanhood, determined to remedy evil conditions concerning ice cream factories and creameries that should never have been allowed to exist.

The Bulletin is confident that few localities in Pennsylvania would show the same deplorable conditions existing as has been revealed by the St. Paul inquiry. Some investigations have been made concerning the sanitary conditions existing among creameries and ice cream factories and the result has been eminently satisfactory. Still, the Bulletin would be pleased to welcome the existence and lively co-operation of a Housekeepers' League in every town of this Commonwealth.

WHAT HOUSEKEEPERS HAVE ALREADY DONE.

In various sections the ladies have already done yeoman service in the cause of pure food. They realize that the movement on that behalf is one of the most important the world ever saw, and they understand, too, that the health and happiness of husband and children, as well as of every member of the household, depends upon the quality of food supplied at their daily meals. What they have accomplished already is merely a foretaste of what they may be able to do in the immediate future.

The Dairy and Food Commissioner of Pennsylvania as well as all his assistants or agents, has been placed under repeated obligations by the women of the State by reason of the effective service they have rendered in a quiet way, either as individuals or in combination. Where they have unity of effort the most potent results have followed, for the food dealer who expects to win success in his business is generally very responsive to public sentiment. It doesn't take him long to discover what's in the wind.

When a dealer observes increased attention to the quality of the goods purchased among his women patrons he begins to order a better quality. When they ask for a certain brand of goods and reject with a knowing smile something "just as good," it dawns upon him that they have been reading up on food subjects and probably know at least as much as he does concerning the quality and the ingredients of the goods on his shelves. He perceives the entrance of the new spirit and strives to conform to it, for he feels that it is something no wise dealer can afford to disregard.

The impression is gradually disappearing that any sort of food is good enough for the human stomach. Its passing must be ascribed in large measure to the awakened interest of the housekeepers of the country and to their determination to banish the inferior and the harmful. The general antipathy to food containing chemical preservatives was largely a woman's movement but it was a very proper and beneficial one and has done much to protect health and preserve life. In short, the men of the country owe a very substantial debt of gratitude to the women for the successful manner in which they have set about increasing the quality of the various food products on the market and the least they can do to show their appreciation would be to join in this commendable crusade for the right sort of food everywhere and always.

WHAT HOUSEKEEPERS CAN DO.

This Bulletin must repeat, what it has frequently said: The progress of the pure food cause, the enforcement of the laws, the elevation of the quality of the food products retailed in this Commonwealth, depend largely upon the diligence, the determination and the intelligence of the housekeepers. The administration of the law receives a powerful boost when the women are really interested in the food problem. Where they are indifferent its agents find themselves confronted by many formidable difficulties.

Suppose the ladies of a certain section belong to a club, organized for purposes of mutual improvement. The food question comes up. It is disclosed that some of the farmers and townspeople who have stalls at the semi-weekly market are very careless in handling their goods and indifferent to exposure to flies and dust. Others are very cleanly. They keep their goods in cases or screened in some other way. They show by their conduct that they are up to date, willing to obey a righteous law for the general good.

Now, suppose these club ladies, having noticed this condition of affairs at the local market, discuss the situation informally at their meetings. Gradually more and more interest is aroused and they finally determine to patronize those dealers only who show a decent solicitude for the cleanliness of the articles they desire to sell. They carry this resolution into actual practice, letting it be known that their patronage goes to cleanly folks only. How long do you suppose it will be until a great change occurs.

The same course can be pursued easily toward the groceries of the town. The dirty grocery may be ignored by the ladies and should be. And care ought to be taken to make sure that man whose custom is languishing should be made acquainted with the cause. It would not be many weeks until the most careless market vender or the most indifferent grocer woke up to a realization that he was losing custom because he didn't live up to twentieth century conditions. And there would be an immediate and radical change for the better. And that change would probably be permanent.

This is merely a hint of what a few active and resolute women might be able to accomplish by way of promoting needed and sanitary reforms. The same course might be pursued in other departments of life and labor. Every housekeeper ought to know the various brands of food products. They ought to be expert students of labels. They should never purchase any article of food without acquiring some knowledge of its value and its reputation. They should never be content with second best products.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

John Burroughs, nature lover and friend of all animal life, high or low, says this about man's good friend, the humble cow; "There is virtue in the cow; she is full of goodness; a wholesome odor ex-hales from her; the whole landscape looks out of her soft eyes; the quality and the aroma of miles of meadow and pasture lands are in her presence and products. I had rather have the care of cattle than be the keeper of the great seal of the nation. Where the cow is there is Arcadia; so far as her influence prevails there is contentment, humility and sweet homely life.

A prosperous looking business man who drove cows to pasture in his boyhood days, declares that he has a high regard for the cow and her products. At the same time he has never been able to reach the poetical elevation suggested by the rhapsody of Mr. Burroughs. He asserts that he had experiences with the cows of his youth which impress him with the conviction that the original cow was a participant in the tragedy which drove our first parents out of Eden. He has known moments when the perversity of the cow drove him almost frantic and he is quite sure he was in a place quite the opposite of Arcadia. But that man has forgotten his real youth.

VALUE OF FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

A recent number of the Weekly News Letter of the United States Department of Agriculture contains the following: The balanced ration of many Americans today is made up something as follows:

Bread	Meat and Fish
Eggs

Patent Medicine Laxatives.

Many Americans customarily suffer from one of the following complaints: Indigestion, constipation, rheumatism. A simple change of the daily menu might go a long way to remedy these ailments, according to the Bureau of Plant Industry's specialist in charge of canning club work. This specialist recommends a change to a menu more in keeping with nature's plans, something as follows:

Bread	Greens
Butter	Meat
Fruit	Fish
Vegetable	Eggs

He recommends that every family provide a diet of fruit and vegetables for every day in the year. This would do much to eliminate the need for patent medicine laxatives that figure so prominently in many Americans' bill of fare. If every home kept on hand enough canned products so that there might be a can of fruits, a can of greens, and a can of vegetables for every day during the winter, there would be little need for the laxatives now so regularly purchased from the corner drug store. There would also be great economy in the substitution of an inexpensive food for more expensive ones.

More canning, done at the proper season, would enable the average family always to have the proper quantity of canned products, and would save an astonishing amount of food that goes to waste every year. It is estimated that over 50 per cent. of all the vegetables, greens, fruits and berries that grow in this country go to waste and are actually lost to those who need them. This is simply because some housewives have not learned to care for these surplus products efficiently and to make them available for the winter months by canning.

THE WASTE OF FRUITS AND VEGETABLES.

A housewife who chanced to look over the editor's shoulder while he was preparing the foregoing article for the printer, ventured to express the conviction that a portion of the last paragraph was a libel upon many American housekeepers. She does not believe the waste of fruits, greens and vegetables, amounting to half the annual crop, is entirely "because some housewives have not learned to care for these surplus products efficiently and to make them available for the winter months by canning." She imagines there is some exaggeration about that.

She further avers that the wife of the poor man is by no means responsible for the conduct of the grower who prefers to permit a large part of his annual crop to rot on the trees, on the bushes or in the ground rather than ship it to market below a certain price. The poor housekeeper cannot afford to visit the orchards or gardens containing these surplus products and even if they could there is some reason to believe they would be obliged to carry considerable sums with them if they wished to persuade the owner to separate himself from the products of nature which have ripened on his premises.

This lady admits that the old-fashioned habit in which our grandmothers indulged of putting up large quantities of fruits and vegetables from their own gardens or orchards has become almost a lost art. In the country districts it is still carried on to a considerable extent, but the townswomen have largely forgotten it. This, however is due to the existence of large quantities of canned fruit and vegetables which may be purchased for so low a price as to make private enterprise in the canning business almost a waste of time and effort. But there are thousands in the tenement sections of our large cities, and some in the smaller towns, who would be glad to put up fruits and vegetables if they could afford to do so, or if they could get the raw material at a moderate price, one within their reach.

This lady expresses herself highly gratified by the evidently rapidly advancing tide of state socialism. By that she means, as we took trouble to elicit from her, the ever increasing pains the federal government is taking to teach its people something really worth while. And she hopes to see the day speedily arrive when the servants of the people located at Washington or Harrisburg, or at any other State capital will be able to provide a method of swift and general distribution of fruits and vegetables.

THE CANNING OF EGGS.

According to the Grocers' Magazine, of Boston,, the government is conducting experiments in a number of egg-breaking establishments in order to aid the manufacturers in canning perfect eggs for winter use. "Government experts say there is no reason why eggs cannot be broken, canned and kept as an excellent food. Perfect eggs must be used, the factories must be sanitary and kept at a low temperature so the eggs will have no chance to spoil.

"For years eggs have been canned for bakers' use and Boston has been headquarters for some of the best eggs of this kind. Under the new system of canning the rooms in which the packing is done are absolutely sanitary, as are even the utensils used. Only perfect eggs, already candled, are brought into the breaking room.

"Each egg is broken separately into a cup, and if by the merest chance the egg is not first-class it is not dumped into a can, but removed from the room, the breaker, as the grill is called, sterilizing all the instruments she has used and carefully washing her hands.

"The eggs are cold when broken, the room is cool and the can of eggs, after being sealed, is frozen and placed in cold storage, where it remains until desired for use by a baker. These eggs are not to be confounded with poor quality eggs placed in cans and sold to bakers with whom price is about all there is to it.

"Good quality eggs, thus preserved, continues the Grocer's Magazine, are likely to be used by economical housewives with large families before a great while, it is claimed. Canned eggs would be rather a novelty in grocery stores, but stranger things have happened."

Some folks who are familiar with the deplorable and peculiarly offensive condition of affairs which existed in several of the larger cities of the country a year ago or less, and which compelled the legislature of Pennsylvania to enact a drastic egg act, feel a deep-rooted antagonism to canned eggs. The associations have been unsavory and are not easily forgotten. They prefer that the eggs should go to the cook in their natural covering and some are so radical as to insist upon having them come to them in the shell. All these and their children after them, are likely to remain rooted in their antagonism and will remain unfriendly toward the rumored arrival of the canned egg. Under proper conditions, however, and honestly handled, there is no reason why the canned article should not be perfectly fresh and wholesome.

NUTRITIVE VALUE OF THE BANANA.

EXTRACT FROM EATING AND DRINKING, BY ALBERT H. HOY, M. O.

It is a remarkable fact that the albuminates are present in the banana in almost the same proportion they are found in milk, this substance, according to three investigators, containing them to the extent of 4.03 per cent. Dry wheat flour contains 12 per cent. of albuminates, and hence one pound of it would be equalled in nourishment by three pounds of fresh bananas. Were these dried and reduced to flour, one pound of this flour would probably equal two pounds of wheat flour in nourishment. The analysis of the banana, then, but confirms that which experience has proved to be true, that it is a fruit of high nutritive value. In fact, it stands alone in this respect, as well as in being the only sweet fruit which can be obtained fresh and in a suitable condition in all parts of the country and at all seasons of the year.

Objection is frequently made to the banana in our markets that it is brought here green and therefore unfit to be eaten, implying that like the succulent fruits it should ripen naturally on the tree. This is not a valid objection, as those starchy fruits, the bread fruit and the banana, are in their native land frequently gathered before fully grown and allowed to ripen off of the parent stalk, being buried in covered pits for this purpose. The change that takes place is a chemical one, simply and consists mainly in conversion of the starch into sweet substances easy of digestion, with the formation of essential oils and volatile ethers giving the aroma. Now, the longer this process is allowed to go on, up to the very point of souring, by so much is the banana easier of digestion, because it is thus predigested, or, more properly, is brought into that condition which results from cooking starchy foods. This is a very important point, and explains why many people complain that the banana disagrees with them. They eat it too much in a raw state, that is, when the skin is simply yellow. They think the banana is then in a condition for eating; as a fact, the skin should begin to darken and shrivel before the fruit is in its proper edible state. The difference between a raw potato and a mealy baked one is about as great, in flavor and digestibility, as that between a banana imperfectly ripened and one in proper condition for eating. We should learn by experience when the banana is at its best for eating, and use it then. Remember, also, that the banana contains so much nourishment that it would best be taken when the stomach is not burdened with other food. Further, before eating a banana, the rough surface remaining after the skin is removed should be carefully scraped off, containing, as it does, some of the indigestible ingredients of the skin.

A flour made of dry bananas is now procurable in our markets, and is certainly a valuable addition to our food stuffs, and a most acceptable form of diet for invalids, when made into a porridge, either with water or milk, and suitably flavored. Its use is supported by the theory and experience, for travelers in Africa tell us that for months together they have lived almost entirely on banana flour.

For further illustration of the nourishing properties and acceptability of the banana by a weak digestion, the writer here quotes from a personal report he has received from Dr. William C. Ussery, of Kentucky, who says he has used the banana as the only food in cases of typhoid fever with the happiest results. He further says: "In no case did I see ill results from this solid food. On the contrary, it seemed to me the cases entered the convalescent stage with convalescence more than half established. I am not prepared to say that the course of the disease was in any way changed, except what might be due to the preservation of bodily strength and repair of waste.

In this connection we classify fruits into natural food fruits, and cultivated fruits under this arrangement will be found marked differences. The first fact is that the natural food fruits are all nourishing and free from digestion-inhibition effects. The second fact is that those fruits which man has developed from wild, unpalatable varieties, which never were intended as food for man, into edible forms, are likely to produce abnormal conditions of digestion and interfere with nutrition when used as food.

Let us illustrate this point. The date, the banana and the fig are true examples of natural food fruits; they are today simply wild fruits man has not, by any process of forcing seedlings, cross-fertilizing, or grafting, changed their form, or natural composition, or flavor; they are today the same fruits; that is, have the same combination of substances in them as first made by the Creator, and are, as we have shown, admirably adapted to man's use as a food, and are plainly intended for his use as such.

SELECTING THE MILCH COW.

Nearly every good milch cow possesses certain points of conformation which indicate her milking qualities. The first important point is that she shall show a lean or bony form with a sharp prominent backbone, ribs wide apart, sharp withers and incurving thighs. This indicates "dairy temperament." or, in other words, that she will turn her feed into milk instead of beef.

Next she will have a long, lean and bony barrel, well sprung ribs, broad muzzle and a strong jaw, these points indicating capacity for consuming large amounts of feed.

Third, she will show a hardy constitution, which is indicated by a large heart girth, a deep chest, large open nostrils and a large wind pipe and lung capacity.

Fourth, a good dairy cow should have an udder of good size and running well forward and hung well up behind. The region of the pelvis or hips is wide, as is also the space between the thighs as viewed from behind, giving ample room for a large udder. A large udder is not always an indication of a large milker. The udder must not only be large, but it must be free from fleshiness. After the milking is completed the udder should fold up like an empty glove.

In the show ring other points are taken into account, such as size and shape of horn, levelness of rump; color markings, etc. These, however, are fancy points and the practical farmer gives them slight consideration. The vital points are thin, angular appearance, a large barrel, good constitution and a capacious udder free from fleshiness.

It must be remembered that a cow's looks cannot always be depended upon to indicate whether or not she is a good dairy animal. Some dairymen make a rule to buy a cow only upon the condition that they be allowed to give her a trial before she is paid for. Even with this plan some risk is run for the cow may be a good milker when fresh and fall off rapidly in her flow in a few weeks or months. The habit of persistent milking is very important.

When buying a cow, after learning of her milking ability, and judging her according to the method outlined above, the purchaser should satisfy himself on a number of other points. Is she a kicker? Does she suck herself? Is she an easy milker? Is she free from disease? Do her teeth indicate that she is young?

After all has been said concerning judging and selecting cows for dairy merit, the fact remains that in most cases the only sure means of securing good cows is to raise them on the farm by mating the best cows in the herd to well bred bulls, which have come from a strain of large milk and butter producing cows. Heifers produced from such matings are quite likely to develop into good milch cows.

MEDICAL MILK COMMISSIONS AND CERTIFIED MILK.

The first bulletin in the new departmental series of the United States Department of Agriculture is a contribution from the Bureau of Animal Industry, entitled "Medical Milk Commission and Certified Milk," which is a revision of a previous bulletin on the same subject.

The organization and the objects of the first milk commission are described and the origin and meaning of "certified milk" are set forth. The word "certified" has been registered in the United States patent office and may only be used by a duly organized medical milk commission.

The first milk commission was organized in 1893. Since that time over sixty commissions have been established but nearly one-third of that number are inactive at present.

About 125 dairies are engaged in producing certified milk and the daily production is nearly 25,000 gallons, an increase of 300 per cent.

in five years. While this seems a remarkable increase, it should be remembered that only about one-half of one per cent. of the total milk supply of the country is certified.

While the chief demand for certified milk is for infants and sick people, it further serves to teach the public the value of careful methods in milk production and the extra cost of absolutely clean milk.

The bulletin describes the equipment and methods necessary for the production of certified milk. It is pointed out that expensive equipment is not a necessity so much as a careful and unremitting attention to details.

For the above synopsis this Bulletin is indebted to the Colorado Dairyman.

ROOTING FOR THE PORKER.

FROM THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

In past times it was considered enough to say: "Root hog, or die." Today, at least in certain quarters, it is found necessary to root for the hog or he is likely to pass out of existence and our menus.

One great system of railroads in the west employs a man to raise the porker, advocate his production and show farmers how to make the most out of the feeding pens. This gentleman is an enthusiast as to pork, and, like all enthusiasts, he slips into exaggeration now and then. He passes lightly over the diseases to which pigs are liable; he paints a too rosy picture of the possibilities of the producer. And yet at bottom his contention is sound—the great west, the region to the westward of the Missouri, is losing millions by reason of the slowness of its farmers to foster and improve their herds of swine.

Hogs do not need to be milked or dehorned or branded, and if they are properly fed and given a dry, warm place in which to sleep they know enough to come home at nightfall. They yield from two hundred to three hundred per cent. profit under ordinary farm conditions. Any day from the time they are weaned they are usually in demand in the market or by breeders. A skilled grower can market two lots of hogs each year. Now that a reasonably successful serum for cholera has been discovered the greatest losses in the pens can be prevented. In the higher altitudes cholera is rare. The high altitudes are adapted to the growing of peas and rye and barley for fattening and there is always alfalfa for growth. Surely the farmers of the west are missing a great opportunity in letting the Mississippi valley do the bulk of the raising of swine.

It is well enough to root for your home baseball team, but a little lung power might be expended in advocating the claims of the portly porker.

COOKING IN ALUMINUM.

Most metals are affected by acids, or by alkalies, or by both. The chemical action between the two is increased by heat, so that when we cook in a metal vessel we should be careful to understand the possible reactions and the effect of the resulting compounds on the human body.

Lead and copper are now recognized as unsuitable metals for cooking utensils and recently those of aluminum have been subjected to scrutiny, although it would appear that they have survived the test. Says American Medicine (New York):

"It occurred to the Lancet laboratory to start a series of investigations as to the extent and way in which various aluminum cooking utensils were affected by the usual articles of food and savory substances used in cooking. All the experiments were conducted 'as in a kitchen,' so far as the vessels used for cooking were concerned, the food materials cooked in them being reserved for further testing in the laboratory. The conditions studied were the effect on aluminum of water, cold and boiling, of common salt (1 per cent. in tap water), of water and acetic acid, the same with the addition of common salt, tartaric acid, carbonate of soda, of bacon, beefsteak, and tomatoes with butter, salt and pepper, fried in an aluminum pan, of preparing soup, and of boiling various vegetables—such as onions, with salt and pepper, carrots, Brussels sprouts, and apples in an aluminum saucepan.

"The only case in which any result worthy of consideration was attained was the use of carbonate of soda, when the metal showed distinct darkening and the solution responded decidedly to the tests for the metal. The use of carbonate of soda should therefore be avoided with aluminum vessels, though, as the Lancet report points out, a warning to this effect is frequently issued when the aluminum vessels are sold. Some darkening of the metal and the merest traces of aluminum were found in the experiments with common salt, beefsteak, tomatoes, soup preparations, Brussels sprouts, and apples, but it was declared to be entirely negligible from a hygienic viewpoint in all cases. No darkening showed and no trace was found with acetic or tartaric acids, with onions or carrots. As for the effect of water, no evidence was found of the presence of soluble salts of aluminum or of suspended particles of the oxide in water boiled in an aluminum saucepan bought in the open market. When cold water was allowed to stand in it for twenty-four hours, however, a white, gelatinous substance sweated out, and this was found to contain aluminum and silica.

"Wet aluminum, therefore, seems to oxidize when left long in contact with the air, so that the leaving of water in aluminum water bottles when not in use is to be avoided. Covering the surface with a film of hydro carbon oil is recommended to protect this metal against the combined action of moisture and air. The upshot of this interesting and practical inquiry seems to be that the use of pure aluminum cooking utensils need occasion no misgiving as to any possible evil effects."

SANITARY ICE-CREAM.

Persons who are cautious to an extreme about the milk they admit into their houses frequently relax their vigilance as soon as the milk is frozen. They want to know precisely the source of the article as long as it is furnished in liquid form, but they cease to push these queries when it arrives frozen from the confectioner's. The underlying cause of this discrepancy seems to be the idea that everything below 32 degrees Fahrenheit is sanitary. This idea is false. Some germs it is true, flourish only in warm media, but others grow much better below the freezing point; and among these are a few that it is well for us not to admit to our digestive passages. The Medical Review of Reviews (New York) in an editorial on the subject says:

"Taking ice-cream to be a product of sugar and cream with a natural flavor, it becomes patent that the sanitary aspects of the ice-cream become of importance. Cream itself contains a large number of micro-organisms which are not destroyed in the processes of converting the cream into ice-cream. General investigations of the bacteriological contents of ice creams in Philadelphia, Washington, Boston and New York have demonstrated that ice-creams commonly contain from two millions to five millions bacteria per cubic centimeter. In fact, twenty-five million micro-organisms per cubic centimeter and above represent frequent indications of the lack of sanitary conditions in the manufacture of ice-cream.

"Municipalities have not been properly concerned in the unsanitary conditions surrounding the places of manufacture of ice-cream. Unclean cellars, with the absence of proper light, with wretched ventilation, or with inadequate toilet facilities, suggest the impossible conditions under which too much of our ice-cream is made. It is impossible to secure a clean product in unsanitary cellars, where personal cleanliness is impossible and where the manufacture of ice-cream in a cleanly way is impaired by the presence of old furniture, filthy matting, and unclean sinks and foul toilets.

"It is needless to state that the harmful pollution of ice-cream is not all due to the unsanitary conditions of the ice-cream manufacture. The first step in the wholesome production of ice-cream demands the protection of the cream or milk which enters into its manufacture.

The presence of streptococci or bacilli coli communis indicates that the source of pollution comes from cattle as well as from man.

"Bacterial infection of this nature should be destroyed before any use is made of such contaminated foodstuffs in the preparation of frozen products. The destruction of bacteria becomes more imperative when it is recalled that ice-cream is used largely as a food by children and invalids whose susceptibility to infection is greater than the normal healthy adult. The various outbreaks of poisoning from ice-cream with the nausea, vomiting, diarrhoea, abdominal cramps, and general malaise bear loud testimony to the necessity of protecting the consuming public from the disease-breeding qualities of impure ice-cream.

"It has generally been regarded as a fact that the low temperature maintained during the storage of ice-cream suffices to destroy the bacteria. The investigation by Stiles in Washington and Pennington in Philadelphia has shown that the bacterial content is not generally decreased by storage. The general tendency is to secure a decrease in the number of organisms which thrive with an optimum temperature of body heat. The decrease, however, is soon followed by a pronounced rise which indicates the importance of having a clean, low bacterial cream to begin with.

"The toxicity of impure ice-cream has been demonstrated in the various epidemics due to the general consumption of contaminated ice-cream. Ice-cream has served to spread typhoid fever in addition to causing numerous other gastro-intestinal diseases.

"The ptomaines which are grouped under the general head of tryptoxicon are formed in impure creams, particularly where the cheap grades of material are used. Such ptomaines are most likely to occur in the cheaper grades of ice-creams, where milk, eggs, and thickeners, as gelatin and glue are used so as to lessen the necessity of using a high standard cream.

"It seems important at this time to call attention to the necessity of labeling ice-cream truthfully, so that the consumer will be protected from adulterated articles consisting of other constituents other than fresh cream, sugar, and flavoring matters. The use of skimmed milk and condensed milk should not be permitted in the products which are advertised as frozen or iced creams.

"In the interests of the public health. (1) it is necessary to safeguard the production, handling and storage of the cream; (2) to demand clean, sanitary, well ventilated, sanitary kitchens or establishments in which ice-cream is made; (3) to provide for sanitary oversight of the ice-cream industry; (4) to establish chemical and bacteriological standards for ice-creams; (5) to secure the honest labeling of frozen products.

FRESH TOMATOES FOR WINTER.

Z. D. Evans contributes the following to the September number of Suburban Life:

Even without the aid of the expensive hothouse, it is possible to have a constant supply of fresh tomatoes up to New Year's day and frequently beyond. In fact I have them late in January, and have sold my surplus often until Christmas, buyers believing, and very naturally so, that the tomatoes were hothouse grown. As they were as fine both in appearance and quality as those artificially grown, there was no injurious deception.

I always arrange to have a large supply of fine, very late tomatoes growing, the varieties which produce a good average-sized, smooth and solid tomato, so that by the time the first frost comes, there will be an abundance of almost or quite matured green ones on the vines, for from these come our supply for the winter ripening. The supply can be very materially increased and lengthened by protecting the plants from frosts at night with suitable coverings, removing the coverings during the heat of the day.

Just about the coming of the first frosts, take one or more ordinary hot-beds, such as you use in the spring for raising vegetable plants in, and remove or pack down the old filling. Then put in about three inches of good, warm stable manure, trample it down solid, and put on a 3-inch layer of fine soil. Trample this down and put on a layer of well broken straw to the packed down depth of, say, three inches, and then put on your sash.

As soon as the first heavy frost comes, pick off all the well developed green tomatoes, and lay them carefully on the straw bed, stem end down, just close enough not to touch each other. Be sure to ventilate well during the middle of the day, especially, when the day is warm, and when the weather is merely cool and frosty, just keep the sash down tight at night. As the weather gets really cold, protect the sash at night (and during the day when necessary) with sacking or with straw held on with strips of lumber, removing during the day to admit light. Remember that the manure underneath the tomatoes liberates considerable heat, so do not confine the tomatoes too much or they will soon rot.

As they ripen up properly, remove them and any which commence to decay. By properly attending to the method outlined, you can prolong the tomato season about three months, and have the finest kind of specimens constantly at a minimum cost, the small care required being about the only outlay. It seems to me strange that those who grow vegetables have not generally adopted this practical method.

ARGENTINE BEEF SELLS FOR NINE CENTS A POUND IN ENGLAND.

Dr. A. D. Melvin, chief of the Bureau of Animal Industry, who has returned from an official inspection trip to Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay recently said that while statistics showed that Argentina was already slaughtering up to the limit of its present stock of cattle, he was impressed with the great resources of that country for cattle raising. He believed it possible for the stock raisers to bring about a large increase in the meat output if present prices are maintained.

The cattle slaughtered for export in Argentina, Dr. Melvin said, are fed no grain whatever, but are raised and fattened on alfalfa pastures.

"At the time of my visit," said Dr. Melvin, "cattle that dressed 820 pounds were sold for $64.80, gold. This grade of Argentina beef which is of very rich quality, is selling in England from eight cents to nine cents a pound wholesale."

"Besides the price received for the meat there is a considerable return from the hide and the offal, and since the entrance of American packers into the South American trade the by-products are being carefully prepared and utilized. A very high quality of mutton is also produced in Argentina."

Doctor Melvin reported that the federal governments of both Argentina and Uruguay maintain veterinary inspection of all of the establishments exporting fresh beef. United States packing firms own four of the large plants in these two countries, and the competition with the native firms is keen. Municipal abattoirs, with official inspection, are maintained very generally at all of the South American cities of any importance, and in this instance these countries are ahead of the United States.

LARGE CHINA TEA CROP AND EXPORT.

In an extended commercial and industrial review of China, Vice Consul general C. E. Gauss located at Shanghai, says that the tea crops of this year were larger than the average, but, while the total shipments abroad exceeded those of the year before, the trade was not profitable to the Chinese dealer on account of the effect of high exchange on prices.

"The decline in the shipments of black tea was attributed to the large supplies of India, Ceylon and Java teas, which are entering the market at prices with which the China product, notwithstanding its claims of superior quality, apparently cannot compete. Green tea shipments to the United States increased from 55,820,000 pounds in 1911 to 134,328,000 pounds in 1912. This recovery may be credited to the fact that the green tea shipped to the United States now conforms more satisfactorily to the standards established in that country. Mediterranean ports took twice as much green tea as in 1911, but the Batum market was unfavorable and there was a heavy drop in the exports to that section."

Tablet tea shipments reached 1,113,200 pounds the entire amount going to Russian Pacific ports, tea dust exports amount to 1,071,867 pounds.

IMPORTANCE OF ROASTING OF COFFEE.

So far as the records show, coffee was used raw until the Persians discovered the art of roasting, in about the year 1550. And it is without doubt the most important part of the coffee importer's business. You buy the very best quality and yet sell most inferior coffee; although it must not be thought that good roasting can make inferior coffee into a fine quality. Still it is quite certain that some inferior coffee, if carefully and correctly roasted, will make a more palatable beverage than if badly or incorrectly roasted. It takes a good deal of experience to roast all kinds of coffee and get the best results from each coffee.

The roaster must be careful at all times not to over-roast his product. Neither can he have it turn out small, shriveled and flinty. He must know just how much fire to have and when to check it. The successful roaster has to roast to type and must take his roast off at exactly the right shade, and this means to the inexperienced a problem that is difficult to handle.

The whole secret in roasting coffee is in regulating the heat and in knowing just when to take the roast off. If the coffee is the average green coffee, the full heat may be applied at the start. If, however, the coffee is old and dry like a Pandang Jave or an old yellow Santos, the heat should be less. When the roast begins to snap, then the flame should be turned down lower so as not to roast the outside of the bean too much. A successful coffee roaster must be a man of experience and be able to carry the type and shade of the roast in his eye, and when almost ready to take off, the fire should be turned down very low, thus lessening the heat and allowing the roast to finish more slowly. It is far better to take a roast off too soon than to make an over-roast. The former may be put on again, but the latter is done for.

RICE PLENTIFUL IN THE EAST.

From a report of Consul-General George E. Anderson located at Hong Kong:

In marked contrast to the famine conditions in the rice situation of the Far East a year ago and for some time previous there is something of an oversupply on hand in practically all producing countries of southeastern Asia and in the markets of Hong Kong as well.

While Hong Kong produces no rice, and is not even near a district producing rice for export in material quantities, it is nevertheless the center of the general rice export trade of nearly all the countries of southeastern Asia and handles more of the crops of Siam, Burma and Indo-China than are shipped to all parts of the world. The machinery of the great rice export trade is in Hong Kong and for that reason is immediately reflected in Hong Kong conditions. There is considerable trade in rice, but it is at prices fully 30 per cent. below those of a year ago and about what they were eighteen months ago. The crops of nearly all the Far East have been exceptionally heavy. That of the Saigon district, which to a considerable extent controls some markets, will reach 420,000 tons, exceeding the crop of the previous year by 115,000 tons. The Tonkin district seems to have shipped something like 80,000 tons, about 40,000 of which came to Hong Kong, and a considerable portion of the finer grades of which, known as Packing rice, is shipped to the United States in the uncleaned state. The crops in Siam and Burma have exceeded those of recent years by wide margins.

As against the oversupply in the exporting countries there has been a falling off in the demand from various countries which usually import rice in large quantities. The rice crop in the Philippines has been exceptional, and the result has been that in spite of the unusually low prices so far this season, the imports of rice into the Philippines have fallen to a third of what they were a year ago.

The oversupply of rice in the Saigon district has led to a demorization on freight rates on this commodity from that district; freight rates recently in 10 days from 18 cents to 9 cents per picul. The producers in Saigon are in a position to hold considerable of their rice at present prices, and it is unlikely that prices will be further lowered until it appears that there is a good to a large new crop.

MILKING TWO OR THREE TIMES A DAY.

Carefully conducted experimental work in Denmark supplies a contribution to the vexed question of the advisability of milking two or three times a day, remarks Farm and Dairy. In these experiments several groups of 20 newly calved cows were divided into two divisions of ten each. The cows were so divided that each division was giving practically the same amount of milk and of butterfat. One group was milked twice a day and the other three times a day, and when the order was changed so that those previously milked twice were milked three times and vice versa. Where two milkings was the rule the interval between milkings was twelve hours, and where the cows were milked three times daily the interval was eight hours.

The outcome of this work was that cows which yield 28 to 30 pounds of milk a day, milking three times produced an extra yield of one and three-fourths pounds per cow as compared with the animals milked twice. Nevertheless from these experiments of brief duration no correct judgment can be formed as to the influence which more frequent milking exerts on the development of the milk productiveness of the cow. One is readily inclined to assume such an influence, particularly if the three milkings are practiced on young cows.

Though the extra yield was not so large as is usually counted on in practice, the report of the experiments ascribes this to the fact that in practice, when changing over to three milkings a day, the food ration is at the same time increased as a rule, and therefore a portion of the extra yield must be put down to this increased food supply.

A GREAT DANISH COW.

A recent report of the cow testing associations of the little country of Denmark tells of the record of "the best cow in Denmark." The cow is ten years old at this time. For the past three years she has averaged 12,206 Danish pounds of milk or 13,560 English pounds. This milk averaged 4.07 per cent. fat, making a total of 618 pounds of butter. This is without doubt a wonderful record and one to be proud of, says the Milk Dealer, but as we have stated before, it is not a few producers like this cow that raise the dairy industry to a higher standard, but it is the high production of the whole.

MILK AT TEN CENTS A QUART.

PROFESSOR E. G. HASTINGS IN THE COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

The market for the highest grade of milk at the prices asked—twelve to twenty cents a quart—is limited, even in the larger cities.

So it would be though that the demand in places of from 10,000 to 25,000 inhabitants would be too small to justify anyone's undertaking production of such milk, at least as a money making proposition. That this is not true has been proven in a number of instances. The following is the story of one of the most successful of these undertakings:

In 1906 a professional man was forced on account of deafness to give up his work and to seek other ways of maintaining his family. A farm of 115 acres was purchased two miles from a city in southern Wisconsin. His plan was to produce the highest grade of milk for sale in this city. He believed that when the consumers once became accustomed to the use of clean, rich, healthful milk, no difficulty would be encountered in disposing of it at prices that would leave a fair profit if the cost of production was kept as low as possible.

With this idea the sale of milk was begun at the prevailing market price, five and a half cents a quart. The first month the sales amounted to $70, the second month to $120. The owner soon realized that he could not afford to produce the same grade of milk, which he desired to continue to produce, for this price. The price was increased to six and one quarter cents a quart, and somewhat later to eight and one-third cents a quart.

The demand for the milk was constantly increasing, for customers were constantly recommending it to others, as were the physicians of the city. New customers were told they could obtain the milk for eight and one-third cents a quart and within a few months the sale of milk doubled. The old customers were still paying six and one-quarter cents but they realized that they soon would be asked to pay the higher price. When the time came few ceased to purchase the milk. The sales had been doubled and at the same time the price increased thirty-three and one-third per cent. The demand for the grade of milk produced was evident.

In the fall of 1910 the price was increased to ten cents a quart for whole milk, forty cents for cream, and three cents for skim milk. At these prices the dairy has almost constantly a waiting list of would-be customers. The business has increased $1,000 annually for the past four years.

The demand for the milk arises from the recognition of customers that ten cents for the grade furnished is better value than eight cents for ordinary milk. The fact content is in excess of four and a half per cent.; the bacterial content is comparable to that of the product of the best farms producing certified milk, averaging over a long period much below 10,000 per cubic centimeter. The cows are groomed daily, the udders are washed before milking, sanitary pails are used and an effort is made to hire men who appreciate the value of cleanliness. It is believed that the extra care devoted to the animals is repaid by an increased yield.

The utmost precaution is exercised in keeping the herd free from tuberculosis, and to safeguard the milk still further from the presence of disease-producing organisms no man is employed who has ever suffered from typhoid fever, since it is known that the typhoid bacilli may be harbored in the body and given off more or less constantly for unknown periods after recovery.

The dairy thus provides clean healthful milk for infants and for use on the table; milk that has only the flavor of milk, not of dirt, and that will keep until the last drop is used. The customers have shown a willingness to pay a just price.

The dairyman has done his share in lowering the cost of production by building up an efficient herd. Grade Guernseys have in large part been purchased. The poorer animals have been sold, and only those retained whose daily records prove them to be profitable producers. The cows have produced an average of 6,300 pounds or four and a half per cent. a year.

On this farm there is no getting up in the night to eat breakfast nor letting the work drag into the night. Work is over and all are ready for supper at 6 o'clock. Every man is allowed a half day off each week, as well as a large part of Sunday.

PROSECUTIONS ORDERED DURING AUGUST.

During the month of August, 1912, a total of 127 prosecutions were ordered by Dairy and Food Commissioner Foust. A comparison with August, 1913 shows a very gratifying improvement, since the number of prosecutions ordered during the latter month totalled 52, a decrease of 75, as compared with twelve months ago. This decrease was the result of a veritable improvement in conditions, since there is every reason to believe that the agents of the Bureau have been quite as diligent and active as in former years. It is our earnest hope that the day is not far distant when all manufacturers and venders will strive earnestly and sincerely to obey law so that there may come a legitimate and gratifying end to the unpleasant business of prosecuting men and women for violations of the several acts dealing with the food supply of the people of this Commonwealth.

More than one-third of the prosecutions ordered during August, 1913, were for violations of the vinegar act. These prosecutions were instituted in the counties of Allegheny, Cambria, Clinton, Crawford, Dauphin, Lawrence, Northumberland, Potter, Tioga and Venango. The specific charge in each case for the sale of an adulterated product was as follows:

White vinegar, a distilled vinegar, low in acidity, 1; vinegar, low in acidity, 1; cider vinegar, a distilled vinegar, uncolored, 1; cider vinegar, an acetic acid and product high in reducing sugar and mineral matter, 1; cider vinegar, containing added water and substance high in reducing sugar, 1; cider vinegar, not made exclusively from apple cider, contained distilled vinegar and foreign material high in reducing sugar, 2; cider vinegar, a distilled vinegar low in acidity and colored with caramel, 2; cider vinegar, not made exclusively from apple cider, contained added water and foreign material high in reducing sugar, 5; cider vinegar, a distilled vinegar, 4. This made a grand total of 20 prosecutions ordered.

Eighteen prosecutions were ordered under the cream and milk act. These were instituted in Allegheny, Erie, Lawrence, Philadelphia, Warren and Westmoreland counties, and were for the sale of cream or milk violating the act in the following particulars: Cream, low in butter-fat, 2; milk, low in butter fat, 1; milk, watered, 1; milk low in fat and solids, 4; milk, low in fat and solids, skimmed, 10.

Only four prosecutions were ordered for violations of the general pure food law of the State and these were all in Philadelphia. They were: selling cold storage products, diseased, decomposed and unwholesome, 1; selling cold storage products, not properly marked with date of withdrawal, 1; selling cold storage products, not marked "Wholesome cold storage food, 1; macaroni, colored with a coal tar dye in imitation of eggs, 1; a total of 4.

The prosecutions ordered for selling adulterated fruit syrups also numbered four and were all brought in Philadelphia. They were as follows: Orange syrup, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; strawberry syrup, colored with a coal tar dye, 1; raspberry syrup, colored with a coal tar dye, 2; a total of 4.

Three prosecutions were ordered in Philadelphia for violation of the provisions of the non-alcoholic drinks act. They were: Lemonade, containing saccharin, 1; root beer, containing saccharin, 2.

Two prosecutions were ordered against dealers in eggs in Philadelphia on the charge of selling eggs unfit for food purposes.

One Crawford county dealer will be obliged to answer the charge of selling Vienna sausage containing vegetable flour and added water.

On the whole the showing for the month is eminently satisfactory. The decrease of seventy-five in the number of prosecutions entered as compared with the corresponding month a year ago we regard as fairly indicative of the progress that is being made in the effort to secure the purest possible food products for the people of Pennsylvania. If we eliminate the prosecutions for violating the vinegar act and those coming in contact with the cream and milk act, the others become inconsiderable. As this Bulletin has said upon numerous occasions, the chief desire of the Dairy and Food Bureau and its head is to prevent the adulteration of food. Prosecutions are always ordered with reluctance and the Commissioner will rejoice when the honesty of dealers and venders has reached such a point as to render further prosecutions superfluous.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

Food Commissioner Ladd of North Dakota is fighting for a law to prohibit the sale of snuff in that State. He says the sale of snuff is a menace to the community, that there are those whose health has been undermined by its use, whose mental balance has been disturbed and whose ability to make a livelihood has been taken away. He states that snuff is thrust into the hands of small children and that many school children of eight to ten years are addicted to the habit. He also says the objection to his efforts comes mostly from the pool rooms, and that the whole State is flooded with samples to create a demand for the product. Mr. Ladd says that some day laborers have trembling and almost palsied hands from its use and are unable to do a decent day's work, and that hoboos and lumber jacks are among the largest users of snuff.

One Joseph Leiman has a grocery store, so-called, in Portland, Me. Deputy sheriff's recently visited the place and noticed that the supply of extracts on his shelves was exceptionally large. Being of a curious turn of mind they took one of the bottles down and examined it. It didn't smell like any extract they were familiar with but smelled like and was whiskey. There were also bottles of supposedly liquid veneer on display. The veneer bottles contained the same kind of stuff the extract bottles did. The grocer was arrested and it is said he has been in similar trouble before.

A Vermont general merchant offered a prize to the one who wrote the best letter describing the reasons why people should trade at his store. Each week he published the letters in the local paper and in this way soon had nearly all the people in that locality talking about him. Prominent men of the town were mentioned as judges in the contest, and everybody appeared to be satisfied with the awards.

The first man to make commercial ice cream on a farm was Mills M. Barnard, of Forestville, Conn. He recently celebrated his seventy-fifth birthday. He began making ice cream on his farm many years ago. His son continued the business in the village where his father now lives.

When butter is being packed it seems that this is where a good many of us are in our greatest hurry, and often it is not done just as well as it might be done. A tub should be packed so as to hold every pound possible. In cutting of butter great care should be taken not to cut the butter below the top of the tubs, as it takes only a small amount across the top of a tub to weigh a pound. When a tub is properly prepared, and packed as it should be, and kept in a good refrigerator it should hold 62 to 63 pounds of butter when it arrives on the market. If more care were taken in preparing the package and weighing the butter there would be less complaint about shrinkage, as oftentimes the shrinkage is due to slack methods, poor workmanship or short weights that are often charged up to commission houses.

In twelve years seventeen co-operative creameries have been established in Todd county, Minnesota. Last year these creameries made nearly 4,000,000 pounds of butter for which the farmers received over a million dollars. The first creamery was started twelve years ago. Then land was selling from $5 to $35 an acre; now it sells from $20 to $95 an acre. The deposits in the banks of the county have gone up from $164,660.11 to $1,641,132.58.

Speaking of eminent grade cows of various breeds which have made a high record in milk and butterfat, that of a grade cow on the Sedgely Farms in Illinois deserves mention. This cow was the product of the mating of a pure bred Brown Swiss bull with a grade Guernsey cow and the result shows that in this case at least the "nick" was a harmonious one. The record made by this cow was 11,444 pounds of milk and 5.1 of butterfat.

Professor B. L. Galloway, chief of the Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture, notes that the rapid extension of the peanut industry through the boll weevil district has created a great demand for information concerning the methods of cultivating, harvesting and utilizing the peanut crop. "It is estimated," Professor Galloway adds, "that the increased acreage in Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas for 1912 was more than for any previous year, and that the increase in Mississippi alone was more than 50,000 acres. While the peanut is of great economic importance as a stock food, it is also valuable as a cash crop. Peanuts have a commercial value in the manufacture of such food products as peanut butter and oil and various confections. Peanut butter is rapidly assuming importance among food products, and a few of the oil mills which hitherto have devoted themselves to the expression of oil from cotton seed are now installing machinery for the expression of peanut oil. The high food value of peanut oil and the fact that it is adapted for all classes of table use to which olive oil can be put, makes apparent the importance of producing it in commercial quantities.

On an area of 15,000 square miles Switzerland produces yearly $8,000,000 worth of goats and goats' products. Spain, Italy and Greece are also heavy producers of goats and goats' products. In Bavaria the country is noted for its large number of centenarians. This fact is attributed by doctors to the daily use of Yoghurt, a product of goat's milk. The goat is immune from tuberculosis, so common among cattle and people. With millions of acres of the finest brush land in the world lying idle in the mountains, with babies in the cities clamoring for proper food, the Pacific northwest, and in fact the whole United States, offers opportunities for the milk-goat industry, the possibilities of which can hardly be estimated, remarks the Milk Dealer.

The gentlemen who make butter prices are showing no disposition to lower figures. They are rather disposed to raise them a bit at every opportunity.

---

A new dairy in Wisconsin has vacuum cleaners located at the doors of the barn, so that when the cows come in vacuum brushes may be passed over them to remove any flies.

---

The Rhode Island senate has refused to pass two bills providing for a tuberculin test for cattle brought into the State, and to prevent milk being imported unless it comes from tested cows.

The vigilant housekeeper who watches the labels and tests the foods is not only promoting the health of her own family but also greatly aiding the Dairy and Food Bureau in its efforts to provide pure and wholesome food products for the use of the people of Pennsylvania.

Perhaps there are some defects in the cold storage act which may need remedying when the legislature again assembles. At present, however, there is nothing to do but enforce the act as it stands, no power except the general assembly being gifted with legislative authority.

---

Cold storage has its uses and under proper administration cannot be complained about. If it were always used prudently to maintain the balance of the seasons, modifying both the summer's fullness of supply and the winter's slackness and keeping no article in cold storage beyond a certain safe limit, nobody would have any grounds for complaint. But there is a widening popular impression that certain unscrupulous speculators are using this method as a convenient means of maintaining high prices.

There is every reason to suspect that those who insist that the general adoption of pure food laws and the enforcement of sanitary regulations under those laws has increased the price of food products are quite right. But the new departure has also added to the length of human life and increased the sum of human comfort, making happiness in families a more common thing. So it will be perceived that it is worth all it has cost, and more, too.

---

Violations of law must needs come, for the reason that some men and a few women are so constituted as to be quite unable to resist the temptation to engage in a contest of wits with the laws of the land. The result is almost invariably the same—the discovery and complete discomfiture of the violator of law. But the next fellow learns no wisdom by what has happened and so the thing goes on in one everlasting round of folly and expense.

of many adulterated products and the proneness of some human nature to take advantage of any opportunity to make money wrongfully and without the least regard to the ultimate effect of their conduct upon their fellow beings. The history of food production as well as of drink production shows that eternal vigilance is ever the price of good health.

Hoard's Dairyman suggests that the great reduction in the corn and cotton crops of the United States, with no prospect of compensating imports from other lands, will play an important part in the feeding of live stock and this shortage is bound to affect the cost of producing milk.

---

Many hundreds of citizens of Indiana attended a conference on rural life during the month of October. The conference was held at Perdue University and is believed to have done much good in various practical ways.

---

The live stock breeders of Maine held their second annual meeting with the University of Maine in November. Nearly every county of the State was represented by a prominent breeder.

---

Professor Julius Erdman, of Colorado Agricultural College, advises the farmers and gardeners of his State to save the falling or fallen leaves instead of burning them. He calls attention to the fact that there is hardly a better mulching material than the leaves of our trees and shrubs, and no better soil can be found in our woods and forests than where the leaves have fallen and decayed.

---

An experienced farmer declares that so far as the western country is concerned at least this ought to be a good year for the silo manufacturer since it has been the observer's experience that a good drought is the best sort of a silo educator. It makes the farmer compare his results with those of the neighbor feeding from the silo.

The English agricultural papers speak of the extremely high prices demanded for all good milch cattle, so it will be perceived that this feature does not belong to the United States alone. It is the impression of one who has considered the matter carefully that the advance in the market value of cows is due to the increased demand for milk for family consumption. The milk bill of the average family of today is two or three times what it was a quarter of a century ago, and there seems to be no let-up the demand.

Montana has bumper crops this year and the State's farmers are in a quandary as to whether to sell their hay and grain or ship in cattle from other states for feeding.

Turnips and pumpkins are good feed for dairy cows. Turnips should be fed after milking as there is danger of them giving an objectionable flavor to the milk. Pumpkins may be fed before or after milking. These feeds may be fed in large amounts, ranging from fifty to one hundred pounds daily per animal.

A PRESSING PROBLEM.

Following is an address delivered by James Foust, Dairy and Food Commissioner, at the Seventh Annual Convention of the Ice Cream Manufacturers, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., November, 1913.

Mr. President and Members of the Association of Ice Cream Manufacturers of Pennsylvania: It affords me much pleasure, in response to the invitation of your officers, again to greet you and to extend my congratulations to you upon the growth and vigor of your organization and business.

You doubtless have many important matters requiring your united attention, so I shall not weary you with a long speech.

I wish, however, to express my sense of the public importance that the ice cream manufacture has reached within a very few years.

The growth of your business in the United States has been marvelous. Your output has grown from 55,000,000 gallons in 1899 to 120,000,000 in 1909, and the development continues without decrease in the rate.

The growing demand for your raw materials has gravely affected the distribution of dairy supplies. The increase in the output of individual factories has called for numerous improvements to manufacturing machinery and methods, for the purpose of securing greater economy and more perfect control over quality.

You could not have reached the present state of production except by a change in the popular use of ice cream and similar products.

A few years ago, ice cream was a luxury for the rich or well-to-do, and was made in the kitchen or in the shop of the small confectioner. To-day, it is an article in the diet of the children of the poor, is sold by every corner drug store, and by the push-cart man and the lunchstand keeper at every public gathering, and is made and shipped in large quantities in central factories, as well as in thousands of petty, often ill equipped and poorly conducted small establishments.

Let me ask your especial consideration of the problem presented by these small, poorly conducted establishments. I ask your consideration of the subject because the product appears to the public under the same name as that made in your large, clean places, and it is your interest carefully to guard the good name of your product. The problem is not so much one of guarding against the use of foreign materials or substitutes for the normal ingredients, as it is that of securing a satisfactory sanitary condition of material, making and handling of the product.

In the tenement wards of our cities, and equally in many of our industrial villages, the so-called ice cream manufacture is largely in the hands of foreigners, thrifty and industrious, but absolutely ignorant of American standards of cleanliness and other sanitary conditions. I have seen numerous little places where ice cream, so-called, has been made under revolting conditions; places that are dark, unventilated, ill drained, and filthy; cellars, bed rooms, spaces in which filthy, ill-smelling water-closets are located. We all have seen the push cart with its ice cream cones, filled and ready to sell to the school children, standing or pushed about through the breezes laden with the filthy dust from our streets and gutters.

Now the American public is restive under conditions that permit such lack of sanitary care in food making and selling. The difficulty of the subject has kept our laws indefinite, but the people really care more about the sanitary history of an article than they do about it being composed in part of a clean substitute.

Public opinion makes it impossible, even if I desired so to do, to disregard the unsanitary conditions prevailing in hundreds of little ice cream establishments. The problem of correcting the evil without injuring the business, is to-day a pressing one.

And because it affects your industry, I bring it to you and ask your counsel as to the method most suitable and practicable for effecting the needed correction.

The sanitary history of a food article cannot be satisfactorily determined by any of the present scientific methods of examining the product. For that reason, I have been able to devise no method except one involving a sanitary inspection of the places of manufacture,—a method to which manufacturers usually object and to which government officers feel equal reluctance. Such method to be effective, must be accompanied by a restriction of the manufacture to licensed, approved establishments, even though the license fee be made almost nominal,—say five dollars a year,—so as not to destroy the business of the small establishments.

I do not however bring the problem to you with any plan to which I am committed and that I wish you to endorse. It is my purpose rather to present the problem in such relations that I may have the benefit of the broadest discussion on your part, and the fullest counsel of your legislative committee.

It is an old saying that "Rome wasn't built in a day." This same applies truthfully to all great improvements in public practice. It is, however, too often used as an excuse for inaction and to cover the shirking of responsibility. We shouldn't expect to build our Rome in a day, but we should expect of ourselves that in our day we should do a good, strong, honest day's work upon it.

Pennsylvania and her seven millions of inhabitants spend collectively about $600,000,000 annually for food products, and to each of these millions of citizens life and the hard bought earnings from the day's labor are most important. It is the duty of the Food Bureau to protect the consumers of the State from imposition by those who would deliver to them food products that are injurious to health, unclean, or fraudulent in character. The officer of the law, however broad his authority, cannot go far unless the people support him. Much of the progress we have made has been due to the vigorous support given by honest dealers and the public press.

THE HELPFUL HOUSEKEEPER.

A recent contributor to an up-State newspaper sings the praises of the modern woman and describes realistically the wonders wrought by the Woman's Civic Club of a certain small city in this State. They took hold of the town and simply revolutionized it, bringing the men into such a vivid sense of shame that they also organized and went to work to finish what the good women had begun in such an energetic manner.

We have not the slightest doubt concerning the truth of this story. Our sisters have developed lots of energy and have employed it in wise and judicious ways. Instead of following the example of their English cousins and destroying things, they have entered upon the work of reconstruction in such rational and helpful ways as to shame man for his lack of goaheadativeness, and stirred him up to active imitation of their labors.

This Bulletin has had frequent occasion to speak of the very great assistance rendered the Dairy and Food Commissioner and his agents in the work of law-enforcement by the Women's Clubs of the State as well as by the individual housekeeper. The influence of woman has always been exerted in the right direction and it has always been potent for good. This is true whether it was the result of organized effort or of individual initiative.

The most effective way in which the housekeeper can aid in the work of enforcing pure food laws is to discourage the grocer from keeping in stock any goods which do not strictly comply with the law. Whenever a majority of the householders of any community unitedly demand from their grocers goods which comply in every respect with the provisions of the State law refusing to accept any others on the ground that they are "just as good" and a "little better" than the genuine article the battle for pure goods will have been won.

The Bulletin is glad to report that an increasingly large number of women who manage their own households are doing this very thing. They insist upon reading the label every time and if there is anything suspicious about it they are declining to buy it. Nothing works more rapidly or more effectively in the right direction than conduct like that. It teaches the dealer that his customers know exactly what they want and that they are no longer to be put off with cheaper but inferior goods.

DISCOVERIES IN MILK.

Science knows no finality, and so long as milk is used for food so long will new discoveries be made, both as to its nature and its uses. A recent issue of the Standard states that with all the research that has been expended on milk ever since man began to wonder what the fluid was made of, we are constantly coming across new facts about its composition and its general properties, and each new discovery opens our eyes to new ways of using it, or of improving its health-giving qualities. Not very long ago it was found to contain a substance to which the name vitamine has been given. There is no need to describe its exact chemical constitution. It only occurs in very minute quantities, and it is probably destroyed by boiling the milk. Yet its removal profoundly changes the milk as a food. Boiled milk is as nutritious as unboiled, and there is no great difference made in its digestibility, yet a person fed on a diet of boiled milk would not thrive so well as one who lived on fresh milk. Of course no one is likely to make either experiment, and with a mixed diet our bodies have an ample supply of the strange substance, vitamine, without which they would find it difficult to keep healthy. To show how important the substance is to health, we must seek out some one who lives almost entirely on one article of diet. Such an example is to be found among rice eaters. Now rice, as has been amply proved, contains quite enough vitamine to keep the eaters healthy, but it contains it all on the outside of the grain, so that when the rice is "polished" it contains none. Since "polished" rice has been used in India the eaters have been afflicted with the terrible disease known as beri-beri. On having the natural rice restored to them the disease dies down.

At the outbreak of the war between Russia and Japan the sailors on the Japanese warships were given as rations their customary diet, which consisted in large measure of rice. But the stores taken aboard were "polished," and sickness during the first few months of the war had disastrous effects among the sailors. At that time no one knew the cause. The very existence of vitamine was unknown. So the Japanese authorities had recourse to strong measures. They had imitated the British navy in all matters of organization and war-like equipment, and had found it good so they determined to protect the health of their seamen by giving an exactly similar diet to that of the British sailors. The effect was instantaneous, and with the new diet the health of the men was completely restored.

HIGHER PROFITS FROM MILK.

J. B. Morman, a practical dairyman and horticulturist, in an article in the Sunday Sun (Indianapolis), says:—

The dairy farmer must seek a higher price for his product for the following reasons: Higher cost of feeds, heavier freight charges and more rigid dairy inspection. Now what can be done about it? Perhaps the successful plan of the New England dairy farmers as told the writer by one of them may prove suggestive: "About thirty years ago the dairy business was in bad shape but a number of us who kept a few cows thought we could better ourselves if we formed a co-operative society to help each other, and the way in which we did it was along these lines: We formed a society in a district covering several square miles. The society issued shares of stock at a low price of $10, $20 or $30 a share, each member taking the number of shares he wished. Then we sold our milk in bulk, and thus secured better freight rates and higher prices for our milk. The wholesale dealers had to pay our price or go without our milk, which they couldn't afford to do, so they came over to our terms. That helped us a little. Later we thought we would turn some of the milk into butter and cheese, so we branched out and either built or purchased a creamery. The money invested would be anywhere from $1,000 to $3,000.

"The next thing was to run our creameries economically, so we never employed more than one or two men. We soon learned to save expenses and to get the best prices. The milk of each member or patron of the creamery was tested and recorded and they were paid according to the quality of the milk. This encouraged the production of the best grade of milk, for which we secured the top prices. The problem of getting the milk to the creameries was easily solved, although our country is hilly. Nearby farmers brought their milk or cream daily to the smaller factories, while the large societies sent out milk gatherers, who went from farm to farm. Where farms were much scattered local stations were named for the outlying farmers to bring the milk to, where the gatherers got it and carted it to the factory. What have we gained? Business methods of farming, shorter hours of work, more neighborly interest in each other, improvement in our herds and farms and a four to six per cent. return on our co-operative stock. Finally we have grown from one society to 125, with a business amounting to $4,000,000 annually, thus proving the benefit of co-operation."

POOR CREAMERY BUTTER DUE TO QUALITY OF CREAM.

(From Hord's Dairyman.)

Investigation by the Department of Agriculture shows that only a small per cent. of the butter sold at the principal butter markets can be graded as "extras." This is because much of the cream is sour and tainted when delivered at the creameries. Only poor grades of butter can be made from such cream.

In many creameries there has been no incentive for the farmer to deliver the good cream at the price he receives, as the price paid for sour, stale cream is the same as for sweet cream. Competition has driven the creamery men into accepting cream regardless of quality, age, or condition. This method of paying has resulted in poor cream, and consequently poor butter.

Through the dairy districts, such as Iowa, Minnesota, Wisconsin, Illinois, Michigan, Ohio, etc., the farmers a few years ago delivered to the creameries clean, sweet milk, which was made into a first grade of butter that brought the highest price. Many of the same farmers are to-day delivering cream a week old.

This is done not because of lack of knowledge, but because their cream, bad as it is, is accepted by the creamery. If one creamery does not accept it another will; the farmer, therefore, simply is following the lines of least resistance.

If the creamery men would pay for cream according to its true value, there would be a rapid improvement in the quality. The proportion of good table butter that would grade "extras" is very small. This assumption is justified by the results obtained from the introduction of the grading system in the State of Maine. The dairy authorities in that State inform us that at one time at least 90 per cent. of the cream was sour when it reached the creameries, but that within a short time after a system of grading was established, by which sweet cream received a premium of two to three cents per pound of butterfat, 95 per cent. of the cream was sweet when it reached the creamery, and this condition still prevails. This simple system of grading has proved to be of mutual advantage to the creameries and their patrons in this section. The latter have received a price for their product several cents above the market quotations, while the creameries have maintained a high standard for their finished product.

An investigation of the conditions in Maine has brought out the fact that the farmers are delivering their cream only two or three times a week during the summer months, but most of it is sweet when it reaches the creamery. In fact, a large amount of this cream is used to supply the sweet cream trade in the cities, and is from four to seven days old when consumed. The Maine farmer's milk or cream is cooled immediately by being placed in ice water. The result of doing this is generally understood, but not often practiced, except on compulsion or when made remunerative to the producer.

The plan that seems to have been the most successful in operation is to make two grades of cream, No. 1 and No. 2.

No. 1 cream must be sweet, with a clean flavor, and for it a premium of from 1 to 3 cents a pound of butterfat is paid.

No. 2 cream may be sour, but must have a clean flavor, and for this grade a straight price based on quotations is usually paid.

Cream that is not clean in flavor and consequently not included in either of these grades is rejected. Good butter cannot be made from such cream, and it is not profitable to either the producer or manufacturer at any price.

The butterfat content of cream is usually given some weight in grading, as it is desirable that cream may be of the proper consistency for churning without requiring either dilution or concentration. When cream is received at the creamery it is carefully inspected, the two grades being weighed, ripened, churned and marketed separately. The butter made from No. 2 cream will usually bring the quotation price, while the butter from the sweet cream, if properly made, will bring a premium over quotations. In this way the creamery can afford to pay its patrons a higher price for fresh, untainted, raw material, and so the farmer gets some substantial reward for the care he has exercised. The consumer should be willing to pay an extra price for a clean and wholesome product handled under sanitary conditions.

THE HEN AN EGG LAYING MACHINE.

The story of the hen as revealed in census statistics is like that of a man who began life as an office boy and ultimately became head of a giant corporation. She rivals the dairy cow in importance, says the New York Sun.

Census figures partly explain the reason. The total value of the poultry products in 1909 was $509,000,000, an increase of 81 per cent. in ten years. But the Census Bureau takes care to explain that the figures were incomplete and the valuation an underestimate. Semi-official and private estimates have placed the total value for 1912 at upward of $800,000,000 and this undoubtedly is a fair approximation.

A comparison of this output with the valuation placed on the different crops by the Department of Agriculture will show the hen in no insignificant light. The hay crop is worth only seven per cent. more. The country is proud of the big wheat crop, yet Biddie can cackle in decision at the wheat, rye and potatoes combined for all of them together are worth only $791,000,000. Weigh the oats, barley, buckwheat, tobacco, rice and flaxseed against her, and it still would be necessary to throw in the silver mined last year to balance the scales.

Some railroads have difficulty in earning their dividend requirements while others have never paid any. Yet this willing little worker, the hen, could pay a five per cent. dividend on the net capitalization of all the railroads of the country and yet have enough left to displace her aluminum leg bands with anklets made from the gold mined in the United States last year. Or if she fancied gold nest eggs in seven months time she could purchase the world's production of gold for the whole year.

Scientific methods have relieved the hen from all domestic duties. She is not even expected once to look into the nursery to see how the broilers are coming on. She is now an animated egg machine. Careful breeding and careful understanding how to manage her have increased the egg output of poultry plants from an average of 100 eggs per year to 175, and even in some instances to 200 per annum, while the time required for maturing a bird for the table has been materially shortened.

Agricultural schools are giving attention to the subject from hatching the chick to marketing the product. The poultry industry is passing into the hands of trained experts who make it a science and it is yielding large returns. Some day when swords are beaten into blades for reapers the hen will take the place of that unproductive emblem of noisy patriotism, the eagle.

FISH FOR BEEF.

Mrs. Honore Willsie, writing in Harper's Weekly, details the work of Dr. Carl Alsbury, chief of the Bureau of Chemistry of the United States Department of Agriculture, as follows:—

"With the decline of beef production and the increasing cost of beef Dr. Alsbury realizes the necessity of providing a fitting substitute which will supply the necessary protein for the upbuilding of the human structure. Fresh fish does this. Upon the average a pound of edible fish will supply pretty much the same food substance as a pound of beef, and it is much cheaper. Besides, the eating of fish as a staple food means much less drain upon our agricultural resources and the release of more land for other purposes than the growing of beef cattle.

"This, of course, does not mean that efforts towards increasing the beef production should flag. But it does mean so long as the beef supply fails to keep pace with the demand for fresh food, fish is a very acceptable substitute.

"Dr. Alsbury is, therefore, co-operating with the Bureau of Fisheries in popularizing the use of fish, as food. He is causing a survey of the oyster fields to be made, both to increase the quantity of the yield and to ascertain which of the commercial oyster beds may be tainted. As a rule oysters are wholesome and the popular idea that a large portion of the yield is tainted is unfounded. When the survey is finished, however, we shall have definite data upon the subject and no further fears need be entertained.

"Besides the staple fish whose flesh is usually eaten, Dr. Alsbury is trying to persuade Americans to eat other fish now viewed with distaste. These include dogfish, swordfish, skate, squid and other varieties whose flesh is excellent and wholesome and which are plentiful in our waters.

"In addition to the oyster Dr. Alsbury also recommends the mussel and abalone as a plentiful, wholesome, toothsome shellfish, which have the additional merit of being cheap. These are at least as nutritious as beef and their use, together with the use of other fish, should both reduce the cost of living because of their cheapness and bringing it near to accordance with supply."

FISH IN THE BIG DITCH.

The Government Fisheries Bureau thinks it likely that a fish hatchery may be profitably established on the banks of Gatun Lake,—the largest artificial lake in the world, across which all ships will pass on their way through the Panama canal. The water of the lake will be fresh, and the experts think it may be possible to introduce into it some of our valuable northern fishes, such as bass, crappies, sunfish and other kindred varieties.

It is believed that the great lake can be made to serve as a large source of food supply for the Canal Zone, and that ships passing through the ditch will be able to obtain all the fresh fish they want from the waters of Gatun.

There should be good fishing, not only in the lake, but also in the canal itself—unless the government forbids. It has already been suggested that some of the desirable food fishes of the Pacific Ocean may find their way through the canal into the Atlantic and vice versa.

This would supplement by natural means a work in which the Fisheries Bureau has been engaged for some time past. Thanks to its efforts shad to-day are more abundant in the rivers of Oregon than in the Delaware or Potomac, and shad eggs are being taken for hatching purposes from "ripe" mother fish on the Willamette, a tributary of the Columbia river. Fishermen are even catching shad in salt water off the river mouths of Oregon.

THE CATTLE SITUATION.

Gustave Bischoff, contributes the following on the cattle situation in the November issue of the Retailers' Journal:

Next month I celebrate the fiftieth anniversary of my first entrance into a slaughter house. I got an early start, beginning at 13 years, but from the outset I liked the business and have stuck to it through thick and thin during what is more than the lifetime of an average man. It's a fascinating industry, with its constantly changing phases, and one who fears the hard work and close application to a business incident to ever-constant watch on these shifting conditions, should seek other and easier occupations.

In the early years of my slaughtering experience the main problem that confronted us was how to find an outlet and a broad enough consumptive demand for the surplus stock that was offered us from every quarter. In those early days the ranges and farms were full of cattle, hogs and sheep, and the corn belt States were not so hard hit as now by the ravages of hog cholera, so that we never worried over insufficient supplies of live stock.

I well remember the days of a generation ago when we could buy grass cattle shipped off the Indian reservations of the southwest at the old Pacific yards in St. Louis. The prices for these cattle frequently ran as low as a "dollar and spit" per hundred pounds. To those of you who are not familiar with this term I will state that this was a local slang expression meaning a dollar and five cents per hundredweight. Similar cattle to-day are bringing four or five times the money and are scarce at that.

Refrigeration methods of those early days were crude and the early packers experienced great difficulty in preventing fresh beef from spoiling. The supplies were very often in excess of the demand, and in spite of the low cost of the cattle we would frequently lose money on our purchases through inability to find a ready outlet for the beef. This condition of affairs prevailed for many years.

* * * * Modern methods of refrigeration have aided materially in this work. Through the means of refrigeration we have been able to handle successfully large runs of cattle and other animals as it is now possible to keep meat products in prime condition for several months before they are consumed. These changes have not only been helpful to the packer, but also to the farmer and the consumer. They insure a good market for the animals on the foot and a uniform supply of good meat the year round at reasonable prices to the consumer.

Those conditions of abundance have now utterly changed, and the surplus of cattle that this nation boasted of fifteen years ago has been wiped out and in its stead there is the gaunt spectre of a beef famine staring us in the face. The best grazing land of western ranches that formerly abounded with cattle are now being cut up into farms and the poorer ones are devoted to sheep. This transition has been so rapid that even those of us who have been in close touch with the situation fail to grasp the gravity of conditions. According to Government figures in 1907 there was about one head of cattle of all kinds for each man, woman and child in the United States, whereas at the opening of 1913 there was in this country only six-tenths of one head of cattle per capita. This shows the alarming decrease of 40 per cent. in our cattle supply on the hoof in a period of six years. I could go more extensively into statistics covering the world-wide scarcity of cattle.

To sum up, I will state that if the next ten years show the same percentage of decrease in our beef cattle supply as we have experienced during the past decade the price of fine steaks will be absolutely prohibitive as far as the masses of our people are concerned. Should this percentage of decrease continue until 1923 porterhouse at a dollar a pound retailed will be cheap. If this comes to pass it will mean nothing more or less than that the great working class of this nation will go on a potato and rice diet. Once that era sets in it will mark the beginning of a decline of the American people, for many of the wonders we have achieved since 1776 have been accomplished through the aid of good rich, red, juicy beef. Once our workmen are forced to the scanty diet of the Chinese we will see the industrial productive genius and ability of the United States dwindle away.

A COMMUNITY MILK PLANT.

A co-operative system of handling milk and cream is rather a new idea in the milk and cream business, says W. Milton Kelly, in Hoard's Dairyman. In a small village in New York there are about thirty dairymen who are producing 6,000 quarts of milk daily under the community idea. An abandoned shipping plant was purchased and properly fitted with washing sterilizing, cooling and bottling apparatus.

Each morning when the dairyman drives to the shipping station with his load he comes up to the first door where his cans of milk are discharged; then he drives to a window where the soiled cans and pails are discharged; he then drives to another window where he receives a complete outfit of cans which have been sterilized and washed, and of covered pails in sufficient number to provide for the next night's and morning's milkings. All the cans and pails have covers to protect them from dust. The dairyman also receives ice for the cooling of his milk, if he is not provided with an ice-house. When he arrives at the farm the milking cans and pails either remain on the wagon or are placed in some closet or room outside the stable. Each farmer is provided with a water-tight box or trough for cooling his milk. At milking time he milks into covered pails, and when each pail is filled with milk it is emptied into 40-quart cans which are standing in the cooling trough where the milk is cooled with ice water. The farmers use no strainers or any other dairy apparatus than that above described.

At the central station there is a laboratory where all milk received, both morning's and night's milk, of each dairyman is tested every day. The manager of the central station is a trained bacteriologist and chemist. All the processes of washing and cleaning and sterilizing the utensils are done under his supervision. On the wall of the office is a large chart containing the names of the dairy farmers, and opposite each man's name is the daily record of the results of the laboratory tests made upon his milk. The inducements offered the dairy farmers at this place for the adoption of sanitary measures described consist first in the payment of premiums. One premium is paid for the tuberculin testing of the cattle; a small second premium is paid for the use of covered pails and ice water; a third and most important premium is paid for all milk containing less than 10,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. There is also a premium for butterfat. Finally, there are three prizes for the dairymen who produce milk containing the smallest number of bacteria during the month.

The payment of this extra prize money to the producers has resulted in the improvement of the milk supply and enables these dairymen to obtain better prices for their milk. In discussing this new phase of milk production with one of the men who is associated with the movement, he said:

"To pay farmers on the basis of bacteria in milk production makes it necessary to locate the laboratory near the farm. The daily analysis of the milk in the laboratory for bacteria is a most potent influence. The record is carefully watched by each dairyman because it means financial loss or profit. Therefore, I will say that the bacteriological laboratory is of the utmost importance in insuring a better system of milk handling on the farm. The dairymen recognize that if they are careless it is immediately shown in the laboratory test. One dairyman said that the laboratory can watch milk far better than the dairy inspector can. I wish to say that it is my experience that the bacteria test for milk far outweighs in importance the value of dairy inspection which can only be watched by the constant presence of the inspector in the cow stable each milking.

"Our plant has some inspection. The manager visits the farms about once a week. After the laboratory tests had been in operation for several months, and he had made a number of inspections, he reported to me that the appearance of the buildings and stables and equipment on the farms bears no relation whatever to the laboratory tests. That is to say, some of the worst appearing places habitually produced milk containing the fewest number of bacteria."

The 6,000 quarts of milk now produced in this community have a character which corresponds closely to that of certified milk. The milk comes from between 700 and 800 tuberculin tested cows. It arrives in New York City averaging close to 10,000 bacteria per cubic centimeter. It fully warrants the statement that our present dairymen are capable of furnishing a high grade of milk which satisfies the highest demands of sanitary experts. This can also be done at low cost for sanitary equipment and measures.

The establishment of a central sterilizing station, as above described, in any dairying community eliminates immediately all danger of milk pollution from farm wells, farm kitchens and wash tubs and insures the proper care of every utensil. The concentration of so much work in one central plant is business economy and reduces the expenses compared with the common system where the work is done on the farm. It is obvious that where all the work of caring for the utensils is done at one central plant, many possible chances of milk contamination are eliminated.

SEAWEED AS A FERTILIZER.

Dr. R. F. Griggs, of the Botany Department, Ohio State University, was one of a party of scientists to spend the past summer along the Alaskan coast investigating the possibilities of using the giant kelps found there for fertilizer. Starting last May, the party in the service of the United States Department of Agriculture, investigated the kelp beds about half way up the Alaskan peninsula, almost to Behring sea. Many of the beds, as mapped out, were found to contain huge quantities of kelps, from which samples were taken and are now being tested by the Government. The size of the seaweed may be judged from a statement by Dr. Griggs who said he saw kelps with leaves measuring nearly eight feet wide and up to seventy-five feet long. The kelps in the extensive groves along the Pacific coast annually extract huge quantities of potassium from the sea water. Several factories for the utilization of these kelps along the coast line of the United States proper from California to Puget Sound, are now being operated and great things are hoped from them in breaking the monopoly in the potash industry which has hitherto rested in Germany, and caused the American fertilizer companies great difficulty in filling the increasing demand for potash fertilizers in this country. The process of manufacture in changing the raw kelp into available fertilizer is comparatively simple.

SOIL NEEDS LIME.

To be careless in the treatment of the soil is as fatal to profitable agriculture as to be indifferent to the care of live stock on the farm. When a cow is taken sick, the sensible owner does not wonder why she doesn't give more milk. He first determines, if possible, her ailment, and if suffering from a curable malady, promptly applies a remedy. Too often we are far more careless with our soils. We seem content to stop with the knowledge that there is something decidedly wrong with our fields. We know that at one time they yielded much better crops. In short, that they look sick. For example, it has been estimated that two-thirds of the soils of Wisconsin are sand and as a consequence will not yield as plentifully as they should.

To emphasize the need of correcting the acidity of these soils and to suggest the best and most economical methods of doing this, A. R.

Whitson and W. W. Weir, of the College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin, made a careful study of acid soils and the effect of liming them, with the result that they finally prepared a bulletin, "Soil Acidity and Liming," to be distributed among the farmers of the State.

Whenever a farmer finds that he cannot get a good stand of thrifty clover on his land, when sees that certain weeds, such as corn spurry and sheep sorrel, grow readily in his fields, he could by obtaining a small quantity of blue litmus paper at his drug store, easily test his own soil to determine whether or not it is acid.

Soil acidity is responsible in many instances, for the failure of seedings of alfalfa and clover. Growing in soils well supplied with lime, these plants are able to obtain the nitrogen essential for their growth through the work of certain kinds of bacteria, or germs, which penetrate the smaller roots, forming lumps or swellings, called nodules. Each of these nodules is a tiny chemical laboratory in which the nitrogen gas is built up into compounds for use by the plant.

Lime is the only economic corrective for soil acidity which is within the reach of the farmer. Wisconsin, as well as other States, does not lack the materials for neutralizing acidity in soils as burnt lime and carbonate of lime are within the reach of all. The only difference in these limes is in the quickness of their action. Burnt lime has a quicker action on the soil than ground limestone. Natural carbonate of lime is recommended as a safer material to put on light soils, while burnt lime is all right for stiff clays. The concentration and fineness of the product should in a large measure determine the real value of agricultural lime. In order to avoid excessive freight rates, lime should be bought by the carload.

In this matter of freight rates, it has been suggested that with a little community organization and good leadership the railroads can be induced to reduce the expense of freight on ground limestone to its bare cost in carload lots. Besides this local companies could be organized where limestone abounds to undertake the work of grinding it.

CHEAP OR PURE MILK.

J. M. TRUEMAN, in the Country Gentleman.

It is hardly necessary at this date and in this article to spend much time in discussing the need for milk inspection. Pure food laws are so universal that the public has come to expect someone to look after the food it eats, and to guarantee its wholesomeness

Milk is one of the articles of our food diet that is eaten raw to a very large extent. It is produced from animals that are often kept under unsanitary conditions. It may contain a large amount of contamination without any visible change in its condition. It is an ideal medium for the growth of a number of different kinds of bacteria. All these characteristics make it possible to sell milk that is not pure to the unsuspecting consumer. There will probably always be many producers and dealers who will take advantage of the character of milk and sell an impure article. They will do this not because they wish to sell poor milk, but because it costs more money to produce and handle milk of high quality. It is cheaper and easier to let things slide along in the old careless way than it is to clean up, to rebuild, to inspect, and to improve methods generally.

At this point we are confronted by two obstructions to reform: The conservatism and don't-care attitude of the producer and dealer, and the reluctance of the consumer to pay what clean milk costs.

From my acquaintance with farmers and dairymen, which is extensive, I am convinced that they generally have a pretty good excuse for their lack of interest in clean milk production. When the consumer makes no distinction in the milk he buys except on the basis of price, and is willing to use any milk so long as he can buy it cheaply, there is little inducement for the farmer to spend money producing a first-class article. We may as well dispose right here of the argument that clean milk can be produced as cheaply as dirty milk. It cannot be done. Clean milk means whitewashed barns, means cows kept clean with brush and comb, means bedding on the floor, means tight floor and ceiling, and sanitary surroundings, free from excessive dust in the air. It means men of enough intelligence to milk in a sanitary manner and to be able to appreciate what it means to obey regulations whether the inspector is at hand or not. All these items cost money.

The dealer or the milk retailer should understand that a great part of this educational work must devolve upon him. He is the link between the dairyman and the consumer. He must know the value of clean milk and the cost of clean milk. He must demand of the farmer a properly produced article and then must demand of the consumer a proper price for that article. If producer and retailer are one and the same man then he must combine the requirements just stated for dealer and producer in one man. In other words, the business of retailing milk in cities should not be left to ignorant or irresponsible parties. It is too important a matter. The health and welfare of your children depend too closely on the milk they use for you to be unconcerned about the knowledge, the morals or the legal responsibility of the men who deliver that article at your homes.

All these considerations then, point to the necessity for careful regulation of milk trade. This must be the work of the city. Where must this regulation begin? Evidently where the milk is produced—the farm where the cows are kept, the barn in which they are milked, the men who do the work.

The farmers have objected in the past to the work of the inspection. Perhaps we should not blame them too much for their unfriendly attitude toward the inspector. Too often he has secured his appointment because of political affiliations rather than on account of his knowledge of farms and cows. When an inspector shows by his attitude and conversation that he is entirely ignorant of all ordinary dairy and farm operations and is at the same time high-handed and dictatorial concerning what must be done to please the city, we can hardly expect the farmer to receive him with open arms. Nevertheless, here is where inspection must begin. The conditions under which the milk is produced must be right. Failure at this time can never be remedied. Dirty milk can never be made clean; no amount of straining, clarifying or pasteurizing will entirely remove the harmful effects of bad handling at the start. Collecting milk in the city and analyzing it in the laboratory keeps the inspection too far behind the sale. By this method you may fine a man for selling impure milk, but the fine is not imposed until weeks after the offense is committed, and in the meantime poor milk is being sold continuously. The only way to accomplish what is necessary is to regulate the production at the farm.

The city must send to the farm a man who knows farmers and dairying, and who understands the difficulties under which the farmer labors; a man who, knowing these things, also knows the needs of the city consumer and is determined to see that every child in the city has an opportunity to drink good milk. Such men cannot be had for $50 a month, but the right salary will find the right man.

The methods whereby the inspector is to reach the farmer and improve his conditions can only be very briefly discussed in this article. The most successful method used so far is the score card. This card puts on paper in tangible form the facts concerning each farmer's equipment and method of doing work. The tactful inspector furnishes the farmer with a duplicate card and points out to him the weak places in his work, and shows him how they may best be remedied.

You may say, "Why be tactful, why take all this trouble to keep the farmer good-natured? Why not tell him straight from the shoulder in so many words that he must clean up or get out of business?" It cannot be done in that way, because the city is dependent on the farmer for its milk supply. It is very easy to drive his milk out of the city, and he can go into some other line of farming, but has that helped the milk supply any? Too many may be eliminated and the remaining few will not be able to supply the market and away up will go the price. Of course some incorrigibles will have to be driven out, but the majority should be encouraged to improve their methods and to furnish the market with what is wanted.

Farm inspection should be supplemented by occasional collection of samples on the street. Wagons should also be inspected, and temperatures of milk should be recorded when delivered. City bottling plants or other centres for distribution should be under direction of the milk inspector and should be required to maintain sanitary conditions. Bacterial counts should be made frequently in order to check up the work of inspection on the farms and in milk plants.

The carrying out of this work must be undertaken by the city. A competent head of milk-inspection work should be appointed or elected. He should be given charge of all milk work, and furnished with men enough to inspect dairies.

As an example of what may be done, the city of Springfield, Massachusetts, may be cited. It is doing excellent work along this line. The president of the Board of Health has general charge of the work, and an expert inspector has immediate charge under him. The dairies supplying milk to the city are all scored and copies of the scores are kept in the milk inspector's office, where they are accessible to the general public. The score cards give the location of each dairy, the number of cows kept, the kind of cows, the feeds fed, and the amount of milk produced daily. They also give the name of the dealer to whom the milk is shipped. Samples for chemical analysis are taken every thirty days from the milk of each dairy.

Any consumer by calling at the department can find out all he wishes to know regarding the dairy from which his milk is obtained. This work will cost the city a comparatively small sum of money. It will require a few thousand dollars to pay the inspector's salary and furnish him an office, printed matter and assistance.

Furthermore, it will cost every consumer of milk something on account of an increased price for milk. The improvement of the product, as already stated, means increased cost of production. The increased wholesomeness of the milk and the safety from disease producing germs will many times offset the increased cost.

You can have cheap milk if you want it, but remember that cheap milk means slack methods of production, means intestinal troubles in children, means an occasional outbreak of scarlet fever, or typhoid, means anxiety and trouble.

GETTING FISHED OUT.

Two bills have been introduced in Congress, the object of which is to place under Federal regulative control the waters of Chesapeake Bay and of the broad rivers which enter into it. Behind these bills there is said to be a strong popular movement, headed by the Governor of Maryland.

The reason is as clear and definite as are the bills themselves, remarks the Gloucester (Mass.) Daily Times. The Acting United States Fish Commissioner has informed Secretary Redfield that the catch in Chesapeake Bay is only one-third of what it was three years ago. Short-sighted and unscrupulous fishermen have been using methods by which the supply of fish has been tremendously depleted. And Maryland is facing the loss of what has been a very profitable fishery. The case of the rivers is not different. In the Potomac, for instance, there are not now caught annually as many fish as were once caught in a single day. Considering our experience in northern rivers, however, this is not strange.

The report of the Fish Commissioner, as a whole, makes definite the somewhat alarming reports which in late years have been circulated regarding the depletion of the fish supply in the larger bays of the Atlantic coast. Regulations have not been strict enough to conserve for posterity the bountiful life which once swarmed these waters. Unless something is done now, the process will soon be carried to its logical conclusion.

The same problem faces these interests in larger fishing grounds. Modern methods of fishing have thus far proved very destructive of fish life. If anything is to be done to stop the wasting of the fish field it must be soon.

The question is one of interest to all of us. For fish is an important article of food in almost all our families. An increase in price touches our pocketbook. The loss of the food article altogether is an issue we do not care to face.

PROSECUTIONS DURING THE MONTH OF SEPTEMBER.

During the month of September the prosecutions ordered by Dairy and Food Commissioner James Foust exceeded by eight those brought in August. It is just a bit distressing that violations of law occur, but so long as they do it will be both the duty and the disposition of the Dairy and Food Bureau to prosecute the guilty parties. The record of the month follows:

For violation of the ice cream act the prosecutions numbered three. These were brought in Jefferson and Philadelphia counties. The specific charge in each instance was selling vanilla ice cream low in butterfat.

Three instances of violation of the non-alcoholic drinks law were reported from Carbon and Mifflin counties. These were: Strawberry soda, misbranded, contained no strawberry juice, 1; swankey, sold as a non-alcoholic beverage, 2.

Under the oleomargarine act prosecutions were ordered in Crawford and Philadelphia counties, the specific charges being: Oleomargarine, bought as and for butter, colored, 1. The same, uncolored, 2.

Three prosecutions were also ordered under the general pure food law. They were instituted in Blair and Philadelphia counties. Of these one was for selling beefsteak that was tainted, wormy and unwholesome; one for selling chocolate cake, colored with a coal tar color; one for selling canned peas, colored green with a compound of copper.

Seven prosecutions occurred under the vinegar act. They were brought in Cambria, Lawrence, Potter and Somerset counties. One was for selling cider vinegar containing added water not derived from cider vinegar; one for the sale of cider vinegar not made exclusively from apple cider; containing added water and foreign materials high in reducing sugar; five for the sale of cider vinegar not made exclusively from apple cider; containing added water.

Eight prosecutions were brought in Philadelphia, under the egg act, for the sale of eggs unfit for food purposes.

The act regulating the sale of cold storage products has just come into force. Nine prosecutions were ordered, all in Philadelphia, as follows: Cold storage eggs, not marked with the date of withdrawal, 1; cold storage eggs, not marked with date of transfer and "wholesome cold storage food," 1; cold storage eggs, not properly marked as such, 2; cold storage eggs, not marked "wholesome cold storage eggs," 4; meat and butter, not marked with date of entry, 1.

Ninety-six of the 132 prosecutions ordered were for violations of the milk and cream law. These were entered in Allegheny, Armstrong, Beaver, Blair, Butler, Cambria, Clearfield, Crawford, Cumberland, Dauphin, Delaware, Elk, Erie, Jefferson, Luzerne, Montgomery, Philadelphia, Schuylkill and Venango counties. The specific charges were as follows:

Cream, low in butterfat, 34; milk, contaminated, unwholesome, unfit for food purposes, 1; milk, low in solids, watered, 1; milk, adulterated, 2; milk, low in butterfat, 2; milk, watered, 3; milk, containing formaldehyde, 3; milk, skimmed, 4; milk, watered and skimmed, 4; milk, low in fat and solids, watered, 6; milk, low in fat and solids, 14; milk, low in fat and solids, skimmed, 22.

The number of prosecutions ordered for violations of the milk and cream act indicates that the law was not placed on the statute books any too soon. The act is by no means severe in its requirements. Some of the charges made against venders shows that the State needs to exercise constant watchfulness on behalf of the consumer and that the greed of some venders is not restrained by considerations of the effect upon the consumer. Milk is the one essential food; the food without which human life would soon become extinct. For that reason the consumer needs the ceaseless protection of the State. Greed would rob the cradle and the grave and by putting into the family watered milk, skimmed milk, milk that has been both skimmed and watered, would shorten the life of the young and hasten the death of the aged in order that it might heap up riches to itself, the riches that perish in the using.

The Bulletin is conscious of the gratifying fact that the majority of dairymen are honest and conscientious, doing their best to comply with the mandates of the law. It is to their interest to assist in the prosecution of those who have neither conscience nor honor.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

There is a bakery in Germany that turns out 20,000 loaves of sawdust bread daily and finds a ready market for this output. Although this "wooden" bread is intended for consumption by horses only, it is asserted by the manufacturers that in case of a famine it would furnish a nutritious and highly satisfactory food for human beings. The sawdust is first subjected to a process of fermentation and various chemical manipulations, and is mixed with one-third part of rye flour. It is then formed into loaves and baked like any other bread.

Honey is often adulterated with glucose, cane sugar and invert sugar.

Butter would keep sweet longer and retain its flavor longer if it were made from a properly pasteurized cream, a subject which has not been generally discussed through the columns of the dairy press in recent years, but will be in the future, as it is a factor we can not set aside, and as time advances this subject will be reopened for discussion among the men who do the work, remarks the Butter, Cheese and Egg Journal.

Certified milk is growing in favor, according to the Department of Agriculture, which has announced that the daily production of 126 dairies in the United States is nearly 25,000 gallons, an increase of nearly 300 per cent. in five years. This is only one-half of one per cent. of the total supply. The department officials lay emphasis on the fact that expensive apparatus is not so necessary to the production of certified and absolutely clean milk as is careful and unremitting attention to sanitary details.

An executive decree of Argentina provides that every shipment of foreign potatoes shall be accompanied by two certificates, one attesting the healthful condition of the soil in which the potatoes were grown, and the other certificate of the soundness or wholesome condition of the potatoes under consideration. These certificates must be issued by Government experts in the country of origin and vided by an Argentinea consul. The decree becomes effective two months from date of publication.

The grocer who takes particular pains to keep his place of business neat and clean is likely to secure an ever-increasing patronage. Women prefer to shop where the habit of order and the practice of cleanliness prevails. They believe the clean store harbors clean goods.

There is nowhere about the Dairy and Food Bureau any disposition to prosecute violators of law simply for the purpose of making a record or to create the impression that eternal vigilance is the habit of that bureau and all its employees. There is a clear and convinced purpose to enforce law because it is the duty of the bureau chief to do so.

---

The practice of adulterating the food of the people is an uncommonly vicious one from any standpoint. Some of the adulterators protest that they use nothing of a harmful nature; but they admit that the materials employed have a tendency to reduce the efficiency and therefore to cheapen the articles adulterated. That is to say the poor man who buys their cheap stuff is cheated in every way. Others do not scruple to use adulterating substances that are positively injurious to the human body and well calculated to shorten human life. Persons of this sort engage in the work of shortening the lives of their customers as calmly as though they were doing a philanthropic deed. They need very severe punishment.

The value of the agricultural products of the United States last year was immense. While there was a decided decrease in the yield of foodstuffs the increased price more than made up the difference to the consumer.

There is no disposition among State or national officials to restrict the sale of oleomargarine so long as it is sold for exactly what it is. On occasions when the vender names it something else there is reason to interfere on behalf of the consumer. Any every reasonable citizen will consent to the truth and reasonableness of that proposition.

---

Vinegar is one of the substances concerning which frequent and successful efforts are made to defraud the housewife. Special efforts will be made to secure the arrest and conviction of violators of the act.

---

An expert who has looked into the matter reports that the present outlook for the future of the oyster and clam industry in Florida is very bright. He says if the shell fish commission receives the support of the people this business is likely to grow to enormous proportions within four years. That ought to please those interested in Florida's prosperity.

---

It is rumored that several enterprising gentlemen have formed a large company with the purpose of erecting drying stations at various places along the New Foundland coast. They will buy and process fish into shredded, boneless, etc., and they will undertake to dry fish for the fishermen.

---

It is the opinion of Irving A. Field, as reported in the Transactions of the American Fisheries Society, that the sea mussel is not only as palatable as the oyster, but also the cheapest and most nutritious shell fish that can be placed on the market.

---

It is said that the sardine business is going from bad to worse and that there is hardly a fish to be had in Norway.

More than one billion fish, equivalent to 3,000,000 barrels or 300,000,000 tons of fish, were caught by the menhaden fisheries and converted into oil and fertilizer scrap during the year 1912, according to information gathered by the United States Bureau of Fisheries.

Illinois is the leader in the fresh water fish industry of the nation. The annual catch of fish ranges from 25,000,000 to 30,000,000 pounds. The Illinois river produces the bulk of the catch.

A report has been submitted to the fish commission of Kentucky which shows that there is a yield annually of 500,000 pounds of fish from the streams which at 10 cents a pound means $50,000. And this means a great saving to the people in these times of the high price of meat.

A dispatch from Halifax says that mackerel fishing is good all along the shore in the vicinity of that city, and that the fish are all that can be desired as to size and quality.

It is said that Milwaukee is the largest fishing port on the Great Lakes. Nearly half a million dollars is invested in the business in the city.

It is reported from Wheeling, West Virginia, that a live black bass about an inch and a half long was found in one of the big Rock-away oysters when it was opened in a city cafe. During shipment the oyster had been out of water several days, but when it was opened the fish was still alive and kicking. It is supposed the bass lived on the juice of the oyster while a prisoner.

AN IMPORTANT OPINION.

The following opinion is of vital significance to the people of Pennsylvania:

JOHN C. BELL,
Attorney General.

J. E. B. CUNNINGHAM,
First Deputy Attorney General.

WILLIAM M. HARGEST,
Second Deputy Attorney General.

MORRIS WOLF,
Third Deputy Attorney General.

Office of the Attorney General,
Harrisburg, January 14, 1914.

Hon. James Foust, Dairy and Food Commissioner, Harrisburg, Pa.:

Sir—Some time ago you requested an interpretation of sections 3 and 20 of the "Cold Storage Act" of May 16, 1913, (P. L. 216), as applied to the shipment of beef from Argentine Republic.

I understand the facts upon which the request is based to be as follows:

Large quantities of fresh beef are shipped from Argentine Republic to this country and sold at a price somewhat lower than the beef raised here and it takes from thirty to forty days from the time the beef is shipped until it reaches the consumer; the shipments are made in vessels having compartments, so that the fresh beef is kept, during shipment, at a temperature of slightly under 40 degrees Fahrenheit.

The precise question upon which you desire advice, is whether these vessels should be termed "Cold Storage Warehouses" and whether the beef which is thereby shipped should be marked "Cold Storage Food," or whether the shipment should be treated the same as if made in refrigerated cars and sold in the State as fresh beef. The practical effect of the determination of this question is that if the Argentine beef must be sold as "Cold Storage Food" it will be withdrawn from the markets of Pennsylvania, and sent to other States, where such restriction is not put upon it, and the people of Pennsylvania will be deprived of the benefit of the reduction in the price of that commodity.

Section 3 of the Act defines "Cold Storage Warehouse" as follows:

"An establishment employing refrigerating machinery or ice for the purpose of refrigeration, or a place otherwise artificially cooled, in which articles of food are stored for thirty (30) days or more, at a temperature of forty degrees Fahrenheit, or under."

This language is broad enough in its terms to cover a vessel employing refrigerating machinery, because the articles of food are stored therein at forty degrees Fahrenheit or under.

But section 20 of the Act provides for the transportation of products and is as follows:

"Nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit the shipping, consigning, or transporting of fresh food in properly refrigerated cars within this State to points of destination; nor, when received, to prohibit the same being held in a cooling room for a period of forty-eight (48) hours; And provided further, That nothing in this Act shall be construed to prohibit the keeping of fresh food in ice boxes or refrigerators in retail stores, while the same is offered or exposed for sale."

The term "Cold Storage Warehouse" as defined in section 3 is also broad enough to include refrigerated cars referred to in section 20. It seems that the term as used in section 3 is not intended to apply to cars or vessels used in transportation, but means a stationary establishment in which articles are stored at 40 degrees Fahrenheit, or under.

This Act must be construed so as to carry out the legislative intent as far as possible. It is not to be presumed that the legislature intended any effect which would result in depriving the people of the State of securing Argentine beef at a lower cost than that paid for beef produced from cattle raised in this country.

I am of opinion that section 20 was intended to include the transportation of fresh food and should be interpreted so as to apply to such transportation, whether in refrigerated cars or in refrigerated ships.

Specifically answering your inquiry, I advise you that a ship used in the transportation of beef from Argentine Republic is not a "Cold Storage Warehouse," within the meaning of section 3 of the Act of Assembly, and that beef so transported is not required to be marked "Cold Storage Food" but that the shipment of such beef is governed by section 20 of the Act, may be sold as fresh food and when it reaches its destination may be held in a cooling room for the period of forty-eight hours, as provided therein.

Very truly yours,

WM. M. HARGEST,
Second Deputy Attorney General.

ABOUT THE WORK OF THE YEAR.

Elsewhere in this number of the Monthly Bulletin will be found a summary of the operations of the Dairy and Food Bureau during the seven years beginning with 1907. The report shows a steady increase in the receipts of the bureau while the expenditures have been almost the same each year. Thus the receipts during 1907 were $55,732.63; in 1913, they amount to $173,789.76. The expenditures in the first named year were $78,455.88; in 1913 they were $75,587.12, an actual decrease of 2,868.76. This is surely a very gratifying exhibit.

The year 1913 was the busiest in the history of the Dairy and Food Division, as the figures given in the article above referred to will show. Of the prosecutions instituted and terminated, the largest number was under the milk act. Under the general food act there was a marked decrease as compared with other years. Among the other noteworthy work of the bureau was a general crusade against the sale of spurious cider vinegar, 215 prosecutions having been ordered. A great deal of this so-called "cider" vinegar never saw an apple or the juice of an apple. The new cold storage act went into effect August 14. About one hundred prosecutions were ordered and terminated. We are happy to say that the benzoate of soda problem is eliminating itself, very few prosecutions having been necessary this year, as manufacturers are now installing sanitary and sterilizing methods.

SOME INTERESTING FIGURES.

The eight million people of Pennsylvania spend annually about $90 each for food, making their food bill reach the interesting total of $720,000,000. Large as this sum is, the value of the public health and of the business morals to the community is vastly greater. The State Dairy and Food Commissioner is charged with the supervision of the food trade to see that the foods are clean, sound and unadulterated, and their sale kept free from fraud. He presents a summary of the operations and cost of his branch of the public service for the years during which he has been responsible for its direction. His figures show that the cost of the service is about twelve cents for each $1,000 of food purchased, but that the receipts from fines and license fees are about twice the expenditure, so that there is no direct tax upon the consumer. The Commissioner notes that the Cold Storage Act has been in force only about four months, but that the experience gained shows the desirability of improving the Act so as to make it less vague at certain points, to make the owner and warehouseman jointly responsible for promptly disposing of foods made legally unsalable by over-long storage, and to provide more perfectly for the care of cold storage foods after their withdrawal from the warehouse for sale.

The facts set forth by the Commissioner are:

Year.	Samples analyzed.	Cases terminated.	Receipts.	Expenditures.
1907.	7,400	664	$55,732 63	$78,455 88
1908.	8,300	300	54,580 62	69,968 20
1909.	6,200	797	86,594 15	83,700 00
1910.	5,594	667	110,802 95	79,661 65
1911.	8,200	1,029	120,993 48	83,088 15
1912.	7,204	1,049	136,125 49	81,558 55
1913.	6,851	1,025	173,789 76	75,587 12
	49,749	5,531	$738,619 08	$552,314 55

Comparing the receipts and expenditures for the seven years, the total receipts were $186,304.53 more than the expenditures.

POTATO GROWING IMPROVES SOIL FERTILITY.

American potato growers will be interested in the fact that German farmers have found that many indirect benefits result from potato culture, through modern methods of crop rotation, green manuring and fertilizing. In a recently issued bulletin, entitled "Lessons for American Potato Growers from German Experiences," is described among other things how Eastern Germany benefits from the cultivation of the potato.

The potato has played the greatest role in the agricultural development of light and fertile soils of this region, as the sugar beet has done in heavier soils. According to German specialists, these hoed root crops are beneficial to any soil, through the deep and thorough culture that is given them, with its resultant improvement in the physical condition and aeration.

The profits from the crop justify the liberal use of commercial fertilizers, from which there are important residual effects on other crops in the rotation. The clean culture practiced also brings all weeds into thorough subjection. The yields per acre of all farm crops have been greatly increased since the extension of potato growing.

Potato tops are now dried and used for stock food on many estates. The by-product—mash—resulting from the distillation of potatoes into alcohol, is also an important economical factor.

While we have better soils than Europe in almost unlimited area adapted for potatoes, our hot summers injure the potato plant where they aid in the development of our great grain crop, corn. In the corn belt there can never be profit in growing potatoes in excess of those needed locally for table use. Corn can be produced more economically, is better for stock feeding, and is a cheaper source of starch and alcohol. Further north, however, and in the elevated western districts, where corn cannot be raised, potato growing has a greater future.

However, vast deposits of petroleum will also offer competition indirectly to the potato, as at present there is not the need in this country that there is in Germany for potato alcohol. Nevertheless, we are using up our great petroleum resources and the time may not be far distant when the distilling of alcohol from potatoes may become an important industry.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE.

David F. Houston, Secretary of Agriculture, has published his annual report for the year 1913. The report differs from previous reports in that, instead of merely reviewing the agricultural situation, it presents in summary many broad economic questions. Throughout the report strong emphasis is placed upon co-operation between the Department of Agriculture and other Federal departments and the State agricultural agencies to promote co-ordination and eliminate duplication of effort. The keynote is getting the Department's information in all fields more directly and in more valuable form to the people. The following are summarized statements of the more important subjects and recommendations discussed in the report:

Increased tenancy, absentee ownership, soils still depleted and exploited, inadequate business methods, the relative failure to induce a great majority of the farmers to apply existing agricultural knowledge, and the suggestion of dependence on foreign nations for food supplies warn us of our shortcomings and incite us to additional effort to increase production. The report states that there is no ground for thinking that we have yet approximated the limit of our output from the soil, but that we have just begun to attack the problem, and have not reached the end of the pioneering stage, and only in a few localities have developed conditions where reasonably full returns are secured. We have unmistakably reached the period where we must think and plan.

It is recommended that the congressional seed distribution as now conducted be discontinued, and that constructive work in securing and distributing new and valuable seeds and plants be substituted.

Certain reorganizations have been effected in the Bureau of Chemistry looking toward more effective administration of the Food and Drugs act and to greater constructive technological assistance to manufacturers in avoiding waste, reducing cost of manufacture and to help them develop purer products which will comply with the law. The country will be divided into several districts, each under the direction of a competent official. All branch laboratories and food inspectors will be under single direction and will work together instead of being independent of each other, a condition which led to lack of co-ordination in the past. Certain branch laboratories will be consolidated, because the work can be done more effectively and more cheaply in the larger laboratories, which are provided with complete equipment and specializing chemists. Effort will be made to make the act more of a hygienic measure through attention to milk, eggs, oysters and fish, which are subject to organic contamination and may become carriers of disease.

To bring about greater harmony in the work of the State food officials and the Department of the food and drug work, the secretary called a conference which was attended by representatives of thirty-two states, the District of Columbia and Porto Rico. It is believed that this conference has promoted a much better understanding and will lead to a number of specific improvements. An office which will act as a clearing house of information among the State and Federal food and drug officials will be established to prevent duplication of work and promote harmonious action and co-operation. Experience has revealed certain weakness in the Food and Drugs act—notably the lack of provisions for legal standards and its failure to apply certain external remedies. The Secretary will ask that authority be granted to prepare and submit such amendments to this law as may be deemed needful to safeguard the health of the people, establish standards, better define drugs, improve the food supply and promote uniformity in the matter of food legislation.

Prosecutions under the Food and Drugs act and other regulatory statutes will be expedited and made still more effective through co-operation with the Department of Justice whereby the solicitor will prepare the cases in the form of criminal information and place at the service of the United States district attorneys in the trial of cases the department's attorneys who are thoroughly familiar with the highly technical and technological aspects of many of these causes. Under the Food and Drugs act 1,048 cases were transmitted to the Department of Justice. Fines amounting to $23,463.50 were imposed in 596 criminal cases and decrees of condemnation and forfeiture entered in 365 other cases. Eight hundred and sixty-seven notices of judgment were published.

The courts have evinced a disposition to impose more severe penalties in food and drug cases. Under the Meat Inspection act 81 seeming violations were reported and convictions secured in 64 cases.

INFECTION FROM IMPURE MILK.

A typhoid epidemic at Grand View, Wash., in which twenty-three persons contracted the disease was attributed to infected milk supply and the health officials instituted an investigation.

An epidemic of typhoid fever at Rockford, Ill., caused a milk dealer to suspend his business to assist in checking the outbreak. A number of cases along his route were traced to infected milk. The city council is considering an ordinance providing for safeguarding the people from typhoid from infected milk. There have been numerous cases recently.

A damage suit was brought against a milk dealer in Canton, Miss., on the ground that five children in the complainant's family had contracted sore throat from milk purchased from the dealer. An epidemic of tonsillitis and typhoid was said to have been caused by infected milk.

Thirty-eight of forty-seven cases of typhoid fever in Oregon City, Ore., were traced by health officials to one dairy and it was ordered closed. The mayor of the city issued a warning to the people not to use milk from dairies whose employees were or had been ill with the fever.

Ten cases of typhoid were traced by Chicago officials to one milk wagon.

COST OF MILK INSPECTION.

The Dairy Division of Animal Industry of the Department of Agriculture has just completed an inquiry to determine the amount of money spent for dairy and milk inspection by the cities of the United States. In answer to circular letters addressed to a large number of cities, officers of 208 cities sent in replies, which were tabulated to show the expenditure in cents per capita of population. Of those replying 184 cities supplied specific information from which the following data were obtained:

Twenty-two cities reported that they were not spending any money for milk inspection. Of those that reported expenditures to protect their citizens from impure or disease carrying milk. Waycross, Ga., reported that it spent a little over 19 cents per capita, which is the highest figure reported. Bellington, Wash., was the lowest with one tenth of a cent per capita a year.

Of the 184 cities reporting, only 43 spent five cents or more per capita to safeguard the public from the dangers of dirty milk. The average of all cities reporting, excluding those that reported that they spent no money for this protective work, was 4.4 cents per capita.

PEDDLING POISONS.

The following is taken from the Food Law Bulletin, Chicago:

Summer, the season of suicides, is over but a more dangerous season is approaching, when the utmost care must be taken to preserve the general health.

Winter, the season of fogs and smoke and lurking germs, is always fatal to weak lungs and broken down constitutions.

Babies suffer most in summer, but it is the damp season of frost and snow, of murky skies and penetrating rains, which plays havoc with older people.

But one evil which must be combatted both summer and winter is the sale of poisons. Adulterated foods can be had as easily in winter as they can in summer. There is not so much adulterated milk placed on the market, for no preservatives are needed to keep milk from turning sour in the winter weeks. In summer it is different.

But it is not milk alone which should be carefully guarded. It is other food which we place on our tables and later into our systems.

Meats undergo chemical treatment and other food stuffs are adulterated so adroitly that we do not know that we are consuming peddled poisons.

It is because of such adulterations that the health of many a man and woman is being insidiously undermined.

Nine victims of ptomaine poisoning were reported in a single day in New York. They were from different parts of the city and each was due to adulterated food. This does not seem reasonable at first, but when we consider the wiles and ways of the food faker we should not be surprised at anything.

The nicest pies and confections can now be made of coal tar products, and so cleverly is the substitution made that the most observing is deceived.

The health authorities can not detect every instance where foods are practically poisoned, but where such cases are discovered the prosecution should be severe and the punishment should be swift and sure. Not all foods are adulterated. Some dairies are consistently clean and healthy and many butcher shops sell only wholesome meat. It is usually in the poorer sections of the city where food poisons are generally peddled.

The Food and Drugs act has done much to modify the danger, but there is still much to be accomplished if the future health of the American people is to be guarded. The truth is that few of us really know what we eat half of the time, so carefully are foods adulterated.

LACK OF HELP ON THE FARM.

There seems to be some connection between the shortage of farm produce, especially that of the dairy, and the lack of help on the farm. An inquiry recently revealed the fact that many dairymen could and would keep a much larger number of cows if help was obtainable, but from all information gathered it was stated that it was impossible to get the help and many farmers were selling some if not all of their cows. This condition seems to be confined to no particular territory. It is true in the states where dairying is a factor. Men cannot be employed in sufficient numbers to do the regular farm work at very good wages.

Contrast this condition with that found in the cities where there are thousands of unemployed men. Philanthropic and other organizations are making an effort to house and feed them, a strong plea is being made to the public for contributions to purchase food and clothing for these poor men. They are called unfortunate.

There are millions of other men who have employment in the cities at starvation wages and in a miserable manner manage to exist without outside aid, who could, if they would make a good living in the country and eventually own a farm. This subject may seem foreign to the creamery business, but it is not. The conditions show that there is a lack of help in one place and too much at another, and it may be possible for some organization, or a combination of country and city organizations to work hand in hand, supply the demand in the country and open opportunities for those who live in the cities, who wish work, and there are thousands of men, good, honest, hard-working men in the cities who want to go to the country, but do not know where to go.

The mistake has been made by farmers and others living on the farm or small towns in securing help from the cities in picking up men who had no work and really did not want work badly. They were looking for a snap and the farmers who employed them found them unworthy, unreliable and unsatisfactory. These are not the men to hire. There are, however, good men who may be secured.

BUTTER LOADED WITH FLOUR.

J. Steffan, chief Milk inspector of the Milwaukee board of health department some time ago unearthed a fraud which created a sensation in the local butter market. Some time ago the official discovered some butter which did not appear normal. He made a test of the sample, which proved to be adulterated with flour and contained twenty per cent. moisture. Following the lead he and his men collected more samples of the same brand all of which were adulterated. Step by step the perpetrators of the fraud were sifted out, first through the retailers, then wholesalers and manufacturers. It is alleged the stuff was shipped from Sullivan and Berlin, Wis., to a commission house in Milwaukee, and from there distributed to the retail trade.

The manufacturing of the bogus flour and water loaded butter evidently had been going on for some time, as the board of health found some of it in cold storage which was made last August, and if all the product made since was of the same character thousands of pounds must have been made and sold in Milwaukee and other cities.

The government officials were advised, who also took a hand in the affair, with the result that several thousand pounds of the goods have been seized. Besides the analysis made by the Milwaukee authorities samples were sent to Washington and to the Wisconsin State Dairy and Food Department and the reports from both Government and State tallied with the analysis of the city of Milwaukee. So far as is known this is the first case of its kind which has come under the National Pure Food laws.

THE OYSTER INDUSTRY.

New light on the oyster is shed by Hugh M. Smith, United States Commissioner of Fisheries in an article on "The World's Most Valuable Water Crop," amounting to 42,000,000 bushels and valued at nearly $25,000,000 annually. Of this output the share of the United States is 88 per cent. of the quantity and 69 per cent. of the value.

"Oysters are the most valuable and most extensively eaten of shellfish; economically, they are the most important of all cultivated water products," writes Commissioner Smith to the National Geographical Society. "In at least thirty-five countries oysters support a special fishery. On the shores of all temperate and tropical oceans and seas, oysters occur in greater or less abundance; but the supply in the North Atlantic exceeds that of all other waters combined. Not less than 150,000 men and women are engaged in the oyster industry, and the capital invested in vessels, boats, apparatus, oyster lands and cultural establishments aggregates many millions of dollars.

At least one hundred species are known, with a rather wide range in size, shape, habits, flavor and food value. Oysters produce an immense number of young in order to compensate for the heavy mortality that occurs, particularly in the early months. After the oyster attains a size that is visible to the naked eye, it is incapable of changing its position. This is in marked contrast with the newly born young, which is a free-swimming creature, floating about with tides and currents. Of the millions of microscopic young liberated by a full-grown oyster, only an exceedingly small percentage become attached to a suitable bottom, form a shell, and enter on a career that will terminate on the table in two to four years. All the young that fall on a muddy or soft sandy bottom, or on surfaces that are slimy are lost. Oyster culture, therefore, aims primarily to conserve the free-swimming young, which it accomplishes by sowing clean oyster shells or other "clutch" to which the "spat" can attach itself, or by collecting the young on tiles or brush raised above the bottom or suspended between the surface and the bottom.

The cultivation of oysters is made necessary by the exhaustion of the natural beds; it is made possible by private ownership or control of oyster producing bottoms; and it is greatly facilitated by the peculiar susceptibility of oysters to increase and improvement by artificial means. At every stage in its career the oyster is attacked by a horde of dangerous enemies. Before it becomes attached the delicate oyster fry is extensively consumed by adult oysters and various other shellfish. When it attains its shell a new set of shellfish enemies provided with drills begin their attacks and extract the soft parts through minute holes made in the valves. It is remarkable that a weak creature like the star-fish should be able to prey on an animal so strongly fortified as the oyster. Other enemies of the grown oyster are fishes with powerful jaws armed with crushing teeth.

In any consideration of the world's oyster industry the United States necessarily receives first and most prominent mention. The oyster is taken in every coastal state except one, it is the chief fishery product in fifteen states and it is the most extensively cultivated of our aquatic animals. The seven leading oyster states are Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Maryland, Virginia and Louisiana, with Virginia and Maryland and Connecticut leading in the order named. The body of water that produces more oysters than any other in the world is the Chesapeake Bay with an annual output of 11,000,000 bushels, valued at $4,250,000.

The federal government does not hatch oysters artificially and distribute them by the billion for the stocking of public and private waters as it does food fishes. It gives practical aid to the states and co-operates with them in determining the physical and biological character of the oyster grounds, in conducting experimental and model planting operations, in recommending oyster legislation and in giving disinterested expert advice on the various problems that arise in the development and administration of the oyster industry.

FAULTS IN SYSTEMS OF MILK INSPECTION.

The following is an abstract from an address by Ernest Kelly of the Dairy Division of the United States Department of Agriculture:

What is the most efficient system of milk inspection and how may it be installed and maintained? A novice will find that one city needs pasteurization, while another does not; that one city allows a bacteria count of 500,000, while another has a limit of 100,000; that this city requires four per cent. fat, that one only three per cent., and so on. In collecting data along this line last year I found the following surprising variations: Standards for bacteria ran all the way from 25,000 up to 1,000,000 per cubic centimeter; 500,000 per c. c. seemed to be the most popular, thirty-three cities out of sixty-six reporting this figure.

Fat standards ranged from three per cent. to three and three-quarters per cent. fifty-one cities out of one hundred and twenty-two requiring the smaller amount. Total solids showed an even greater variation running from 10.62 per cent. up to 13 per cent.

No sane minded person would claim that 3 per cent. Milk is more valuable as a food in Boston than it is in San Francisco, or that milk containing 400,000 bacteria is harmless in Florida and poisonous in Maine.

In many places the position of milk inspector is so poorly paid that it attracts only political ward heelers, hungry for any crumb from the loaf of the Commonwealth. I wish to say emphatically that there must be radical change in the manner of appointing milk inspectors throughout the country before the highest degree of efficiency can be attained. Dairy and milk inspectors should be most carefully selected. They should combine at least four qualifications—knowledge of sanitation, knowledge of dairy practice, common sense and tact. Armed with these weapons they are fully equipped to conquer the hosts of ignorance and prejudice.

The laws that are enacted should measure up to certain standards: First, they should be uniform. Laws should be simple. Laws should be enforceable. Lastly, laws should be just and necessary.

USE OF HERION SPREADING.

According to information gathered by the United States Department of Agriculture, there has been a sudden and very significant increase in the use by persons with a drug habit of the little known but very dangerous drug called "herion." The sales of this drug have recently increased greatly, particularly in those states which have laws preventing the indiscriminate sale of morphine and cocaine. Investigation of the subject established the fact that many drug victims who formerly used morphine and cocaine, and who under the new laws find it difficult to obtain these substances have begun using herion, the sale of which is not as carefully restricted under state laws. The drug is said to be fully as dangerous as morphine, and by many is held to be much worse, for the reason that it occasionally kills the victim outright, and its habit is far harder to overcome than the use of the other drugs. The department, pending further action, specially warns all people who are unfamiliar with the drug to avoid all preparations containing the substance, and to take it only on the prescription of reputable physicians.

Herion is a derivative of morphine, the opium alkaloid. It is known in chemical parlance as diacetyl morphine, and it is frequently found as a constituent of a number of proprietary drugs. Its use seems to be especially notable in parts of Pennsylvania, Altoona being one of the cities in which the victims of the drug seem to have no trouble in obtaining it in unlimited quantities. Numerous deaths due to the use of the drug have been reported from various parts of the state, and the coroner of Blair county has been called upon to investigate several deaths which were alleged to have been due to the drug.

The substance apparently is far more dangerous for drug users than morphine or cocaine. Drug fiends are able to consume relatively large quantities of the other two drugs, but any sudden and material increase in the amount of herion taken is very liable to prove fatal. As indicating the wide sale of this substance it is known that one druggist in Pennsylvania whose store was located in an undesirable section of his city has been buying herion tablets in 25,000 lots.

According to the experts of the department the word "herion" on any label should act as a danger signal, and users of patent and proprietary medicines are warned to closely examine the labels on bottles or packages to ascertain whether the medicines contain the drug or not.

WHY FOOD IS HIGH.

That 39 cents in every dollar spent for food in New York, says The Food Law Bulletin (New York), must be charged up to the cost of distribution explains better than anything else the high cost of the necessities of life. That it bears heaviest on the poor, and on the poorest the heaviest of all, follows as a matter of course.

Starting as are the facts set forth by the investigators of the Association for Improving the Condition of the Poor, no one offers any adequate method of relief. If only one-half of the cost of distribution, as between the wholesale and retail dealer, could be saved to the consumer every family in the city would be immensely the gainer. Yet nothing is ever done except complain. No plan that will even fractionally reduce the cost of food is proposed for general adoption.

The genius who can devise a workable scheme and put it into local operation so that the average worker may save 20 per cent. of his table bills will be the greatest benefactor the 5,000,000 people of this city have ever known. There is no other everyday problem so pressing and none before which the entire community confesses more abjectly its utter helplessness.

MILLIONS OF ANIMALS FOR FOOD.

According to a recent census bulletin more than 88,000,000 animals were slaughtered in the United States for food in 1909. Of this tremendous number of animals hogs constituted more more 60 per cent., while beeves figured only a little more than 15 per cent.

Another fact brought out in the report is that the slaughtering and meat packing industry is the most important in value of products in the country, the lumber industry coming second, the steel rolling mills third.

Retail butchers are not counted in this report, so that with the addition of these the lead of the industry over all others would be greatly increased. It is pointed out, however, that it is extremely difficult to draw a sharp line between the retail and wholesale dealers in this business.

The total number of persons making their living in the wholesale establishments in 1909 was 108,716. The value of the products, however in that year reached $1,370,568,101.

A significant fact in connection with the report is that the centres for slaughtering of animals near where the animals are raised are increasing in importance much more rapidly than those further east. For instance Kansas and Texas are growing in importance in the industry much more rapidly than Illinois, which still leads on account of the enormous houses in Chicago.

BUTTERMILK AS MEDICINE.

Medical men are so freely recommending buttermilk for indigestion and various forms of stomach disorder that it is evident that they are coming back to the simplicity of our grandparents, remarks the Dairy. As a remedial agent buttermilk is undoubtedly very valuable. It is a cooling and refreshing summer drink and the lactic acid which it contains has the faculty of attacking and resolving earthy deposits in the blood vessels. It is therefore peculiarly suitable for gouty, rheumatic or obese subjects for it prevents the clogging of the veins and arteries and eliminates deposits of calcareous matter round the joints. It is well known that it is the stiffening and narrowing of the blood vessels which brings on senile decay. If buttermilk is drunk freely as a beverage such degeneration may be postponed for many years. Buttermilk has also a stimulating effect upon the kidneys, liver and skin.

Buttermilk is very nutritious, and the caesin of the milk exists in a finely coagulated form, a more easily digested state than when in course curd. It is largely advocated in Germany for cases of feeble digestion, because, unlike fresh milk, which readily curdles in the stomach, forming large, firm lumps, sometimes very difficult of digestion, the caesin of buttermilk is already curdled, but finely divided. Dr. Hutchinson in his "Food and Principles of Dietetics," says: "Its nutritive value is considerable, an ordinary glassful yielding about as much nourishment as two ounces of bread. It is as a cheap source of proteid, however, that buttermilk is chiefly deserving of notice. In respect to this constituent it is not one whit inferior to ordinary milk." Buttermilk, both for internal and external use, was widely advocated by our grandmothers. It was supposed to act internally by cleaning the system of impurities, and as a cosmetic by removing sunburn, tan and summer freckles, and making the skin white and smooth. Whether or not it combines all these marvelous qualities, it is certainly perfectly harmless in its effects and beneficial in its action.

DANGER IN EATING UNCOOKED AND RAW PORK.

According to specialists of the Department of Agriculture the risk of contracting trichinosis from eating raw or uncooked pork is particularly great at the Christmas season in certain sections where people are accustomed to prepare special uncooked pork products for holiday consumption. While American people, as a rule, prefer cooked pork, which is wholesome, there are many who unknowingly or deliberately consume pork in an uncooked condition, either in the form of raw ham or smoked sausage. In many districts, particularly in sections with large foreign populations, a great deal of pork is made into such products for home use, and during the holiday seasons an individual may make up a considerable amount of these products and distribute them among his neighbors. In other cases these products are used by the maker to feed a large number of persons who have gathered for a wedding, a christening, or other celebration. Large quantities of pork products intended to be eaten raw are also prepared commercially.

Great risk always attends the use of raw or uncooked pork for food, and undoubtedly many isolated cases of trichinosis are treated as other sicknesses and are not traced back to the eating of raw pork. Where a large number of persons are affected the circumstances, however, are very striking and the cases of trichinosis are often traced back to their source. During November and December, 1911, in a California community there were fifty-eight cases of illness, terminating fatally, all of which were traced back to some salami sausage purchased from a single farmer. Other outbreaks of trichinosis have occurred where the number of fatalities have been greater.

The illness which may result from eating raw pork known as trichinosis, is caused by a parasite or worm, microscopic in size, which occurs in the flesh of hogs. There is no known effective method of treating the disease. The patient dies or recovers apparently irrespective of the nature of the treatment. In many cases persons who have survived the acute stages of the disease have had their health more or less permanently injured.

All pork should be thoroughly cooked.

SOURCES OF CONTAMINATION IN MILK.

C. Kronfeld contributes the following article to a recent issue of Hoard's Dairyman:

Milk from healthy cows is practically free from contamination when secreted. While under proper conditions some kinds of bacteria produce beneficial effects, those kinds can be introduced into milk when desired. The problem of a sanitary milk supply, therefore, is to keep out all bacteria as far as possible. Some kinds of bacteria are more dangerous than others, and attention to the exclusion of these kinds should be proportionate to their significance to health. It is hardly necessary to say that cleanliness is at the foundation of the whole problem but there also must be understanding of how bacteria grow, for milk containing a very small number when produced will be literally loaded with them in twenty-four hours.

Although the cow will be thoroughly clean under ordinary stable conditions, particles of dust will be thrown from her body during milking time and these get into the milk and contaminate it. Keep the cows away from sink holes in which water accumulates, for such holes breed enormous numbers of putrefactive bacteria which are especially dangerous to infants and cause digestive troubles. There should not be any place in the barnyard for water to stagnate. The manure should be gathered up and every effort should be made to keep the cows free from contamination. The cow should be thoroughly cleaned before milking time. It is also well to clip the hair short around the flanks and udder, and always advisable to moisten the flanks, udder and under barrel of the cow just before milking; all these precautions tend to lessen the amount of dust and loose hair which will be given off by the cow.

Keep the stable free from dust during milking. Dust usually comes from feed, bedding or breezes which collect it and carry it inside. The stable should be so constructed as to collect as little dust as possible, sharp corners should be avoided, unnecessary timber should be left out, and all surfaces should be smooth. Feeding should not take place immediately before or during milking. Bedding should contain as little dust as possible and should be sprinkled just before milking. It is unnecessary to say that all manure and litter should be taken from the stable as frequently as is practicable, at least once a day. Abundant light in the stable is most essential for the health of the cows, and is a great aid in the production of the highest grade of milk. Windows should be so arranged that the animals will receive the benefits of the sunlight the whole day. Ventilation is also very necessary, for a stable without it becomes damp during certain seasons of the year and is dangerous to the health of the animals. The walls of the barn must be smooth and the ceiling dust tight. Concrete is the only building material which meets the requirements of sanitation, durability and economy; therefore it is the best for foundations and floors. The stable should be whitewashed frequently, lime itself having a germicidal value. A special room should be provided for weighing and cooling the milk. The room should be as remote from the stable as is practicable and should be clean, and the air as free from dust as possible at all times.

The milker is often the source of the most dangerous source of bacteria found in milk, especially germs which produce contagious diseases. Milk thus contaminated is distributed by the milkman and a whole neighborhood suffers. Nearly every physician of experience in our large cities have met with epidemics which can be directly traced to a contaminated milk supply. No person should handle milk who comes in contact with a contagious disease. The use of a special white suit while milking and handling milk is a reasonable requirement. The value of a special suit is that it largely eliminates the danger of the milker bringing germs from outside the stable and contaminating the milk with them. Wet hands while milking drip dirty water into the pail, introducing an innumerable number of germs. The bacteria from feces are of the kind which produce bad flavors in cream and also gassy cheese.

Water known to be contaminated should never be used in the dairy; or it should be boiled before using. This is a simple precaution, the necessity of which cannot be doubted.

Dairy utensils are a very common source of contamination in milk. Choose utensils which are well soldered and in which there are no more joints than essential. Sterilize all utensils. It is probable that there is no more practical way of doing this than with live steam. The use of a closed pail in milking keeps out of a great number of bacteria.

Sanitary milk cannot be produced with the milking machine unless some method of preventing the growth of bacteria in the rubber part is adopted. Professor Beach, of Connecticut, experimented extensively with the milking machine and found out that lime water and brine proved to be very good, and if the parts of the machine are soaked in this solution from one milking to another, good results can be obtained.

The air in a barn is always contaminated. Bacteria are found in abundance in the air, and any disturbance of the air will increase the number of bacteria. The cleaning and sweeping should be done several hours before milking so as to allow the dust to settle. Sprinkle the floor when sweeping.

Cooling the milk and holding it at a low temperature hinders the development of germs, at least for a few days, thus enabling this valuable food product to reach the consumer in good condition. The common system of cooling the milk consists of allowing it to run over the surface of a corrugated metal cooler, through the interior of which is circulating the cooling medium, either cold water or brine. Authorities claim that the number of bacteria is greater after passing over the cooling apparatus, and since the prime object of the milk cooler is to keep down the bacterial content, it seems essential to prevent these germs from accumulating upon the apparatus itself. This form of cooler can be used satisfactory when it is enclosed in a box lined with tin or copper and then live steam turned on for about fifteen minutes, not exposing cooler until ready to use it. What has been said about the cooler also applies to the bottling machine.

Pasteurization as applied to milk was first studied in a commercial way about twenty years ago. The principles and system were derived at an earlier date by the work of the great French scientist, Louis Pasteur, in extending aid to the wine producers of France. Pasteurization consists in heating milk for a short time at a temperature below the boiling point, followed by rapid cooling. The purpose is to kill disease bacteria that may be in milk or to kill the lactic acid bacteria and prevent the milk from souring. If heated milk is cooled slowly it remains for a long time at a temperature suitable for rapid development of bacteria and their poisonous products.

DAIRYMEN COMPLAIN.

From every section of the country the complaint is made by the dairymen that they can no longer sell milk at the ruling prices and meet the requirements of the pure food laws. If the dairymen's story is true, why the public will have to pay more for milk. In any event, the day of filthy milk in this country is fast passing. The rising generation is determined to have better milk than was furnished their parents, even though the price is raised.

There appears to be no good reason, remarks the American Food Journal, why milk produced in accordance with modern pure food rulings should not fetch a better price, because the milk is worth more in the first place, and because it costs more to produce milk that will pass inspection.

However, the increased cost that might be proper for a time should not become permanent. So soon as the dairymen bring their plants and cattle and methods of handling milk up to the required standard, the cost of maintaining the standard of excellence demanded will be but a trifle more than the cost under the old loose method of conducting a dairy.

The increased cost of milk that is to be expected will come as a result of the outlay necessary in the beginning to produce better milk. Once healthy cows are placed in a sanitary barn, and a suitable milk house is built, the cost of producing milk will not be materially increased. But for the present, and until such time as the dairy establishments are put in shape to produce good milk, the dairyman is going to find it necessary to add to his selling price. The consumer must expect this. In time a lower level of prices may be reached.

Unfortunately there are among the consumers of the country a sufficient number who are constantly crying about high prices of food products on the one hand and scolding on the other because someone does not see to it that the quality of our food products is raised. They will not learn that an improvement in quality involves a greater cost of production.

In other days when almost any sort of milk from almost any kind of cow passed muster there was a lot of cost avoided that cannot be escaped to-day. Milk must be properly cooled now and so handled that it will keep. A few years ago the keeping problem did not bother the dairyman much. He used preservatives to keep his milk from spoiling. To-day the use of preservatives is not allowed.

VALUE OF FARM PRODUCTS OF 1913.

The six million farms of the United States last year produced crops valued at ten billion dollars, according to figures furnished by the Department of Agriculture. Despite the lowered production this is a record that has never been equalled. Fourteen principal crops averaged about 20.2 per cent. higher in price than a year ago. It is estimated that 52 per cent. of all the crops will remain on the farms where produced, and that 20 per cent. of the animal production will remain. There really ought to be greater retention of farm animals, and, while this is in a measure largely a beef producing problem, the dairymen should understand the necessity of extending his operations and putting more money into his operating capital if he is to secure the largest returns.

But despite a record crop value and the fact that the number of farms has increased over 11 per cent. since 1910, the department warns the consumer not to expect lower prices.

"However desirable increased production on the farms may appear to be from the consumers' standpoint," the report says, "it does not follow that such increased production would result in any increase in the cash income per farm or per capita of farm population, or that prices paid by consumers would be any lower. Retail prices are promptly raised on a prospect of under-production, but are very slow to decline if there is over production."

The items in the Department's estimate of the value of the 1913 crop are as follows:

Cereals alone, .....	2,896,000,000

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The Trade: The consumption of canned foods has increased with leaps and bounds solely through the improvement of the goods after all, because without this great change the efforts to produce this result would have failed. With the attempts at improved quality there naturally came efforts at improved sanitation—to make the appearance of canning look better as well as actually be better, and these two forces have brought the people nearer to the goods, as was to be expected.

Popularly buttermilk has long been believed to be a remedy for erysipelas. Of late it has been tested by physicians and is now being warmly recommended by them. The buttermilk is applied in cloth moistened with it and is said to reduce the pain instantly. The fever continuing, buttermilk was also given internally and the temperature fell rapidly. The progress of the disease was checked almost instantly.

A product from dried milk called syrolite in England and probably identical with the galactolite that has been made for some time in Austria, is used for many purposes where ivory was formerly employed, such as the keys of pianos. It is manufactured in quantities at Stroud, Eng. Skimmilk is purified and pressed so as to eliminate all moisture, when it forms a hard dry, highly resistant mass.

Importations of condensed milk are coming into this country from Holland and Switzerland. Agencies are being established in New Orleans and other cities by companies in those countries, and there being no duty on this article it is put on the American market at a low price.

Statistics for the past fifteen years show that feeds have increased in value 60 per cent., and milk only 39 per cent. This shows that the farmer is producing milk at a cost of 85 per cent. more than he was fifteen years ago, with the selling price of milk only 40 per cent. better. This is according to a statement by Edward Van Alstyne. New York has a million and a half cows, more than any other state in the Union, New York rapidly changing from a butter and cheese state to a milk state. The yearly average price paid the producer in 1912 was 3.68 cents per quart.

Several cans of fancy biscuit were seized by the government some time ago because the cream filling in the biscuits is not an edible cream, but an adulterant, of which the chief ingredient is petroleum. This came to the attention of the Bureau of Chemistry of the Department of Agriculture. The cream made of petroleum, is used as the central filling in some of the sandwich biscuits, and it is hard to say just for what this petroleum is substituted, butter, cream or eggs. Naturally it is exceedingly cheap and has no food value.

Australia is also feeling the high cost of living, and the Commonwealth statistician has just issued a tabulated statement showing the rise in the cost of living since 1901, and a comparative statement of the rise in the wage scale during the same period. Most wage scales in Australia are a matter of law. In Victoria, Tasmania and West Australia the rise in wages has slightly exceeded the advance in cost of the leading articles, while in the other provinces the increased cost of living is in excess of the increase in the wage scale.

During the past fourteen years, although the production of eggs has steadily increased, the price has also steadily moved up. The Department of Agriculture officials attribute it to cold storage. Census Bureau figure show that in 1899 approximately 1,293,662,000 dozens of eggs were produced in the United States, which averaged seventeen dozens of eggs per capita. In 1909 the average was 17.3 and this year it is estimated to be 17.7 dozens per capita. According to this the price should be lower than it was in 1899.

The Secretary of Agriculture has announced the appointment of a committee to conduct an inquiry into the causes which have produced the present unsatisfactory conditions respecting the production of meat in the United States, especially into the scarcity of beef. The work of the committee will be centered largely on the study of economic questions involved in the production, transportation, slaughter and marketing of meat. The question of animal husbandry, which has to do with the actual breeding of cattle, will not be dealt with by the committee, however, as the work will be left to the specialists of the Department and State agriculture schools.

The Chicago Tribune is responsible for the statement that Governor Dunne, of Illinois, has issued a proclamation which requires that all dairy cows coming into Illinois from Virginia, West Virginia, New York, Pennsylvania, Kentucky, Tennessee, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Oklahoma, North Dakota, South Dakota, Montana and Texas must be accompanied by certificates showing that the cattle are free from tuberculosis. The order is the result of investigation and recommendation made by the livestock commission.

Professor N. E. Hansen, of the South Dakota, Agricultural College, has returned from Siberia and reports that the Kirghiz cattle of Southern Siberia are considered immune from tuberculosis. While it is not known whether this immunity is absolute or not, he states that there is no question but that the cows of this breed produce milk containing a higher per cent. of butterfat than any other known breed.

At the winter meeting of the Massachusetts State Board of Agriculture held at Springfield, there was a clean milk contest. The milk inspectors selected the samples by making a visit to the farms or taking it from the wagons in the city so that the dairymen did not know just where or when the samples would be taken. Prizes aggregating $1,000 were awarded to the successful contestants.
